CALL PEACE TREATY 'DEAD'

60,000 "REDS" FREE THROUGH LAX U. S. LAWS

Disclosures Made by Palmer; Drastic Steps in West.

BULLETIN.

New York, Nov. 15.—The "bomb squad" tonight raided the east side I. W. W. headquarters and arrested Leland Stanford Chumley, editor of the Rebel Worker. About a ton of radical literature was confiscated.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—The growth of radicalism throughout the country is due to inadequacy of federal laws against preaching violent overthrow of the government, Attorney General Palmer declared tonight in replying to the senate inquiry as to what action had been taken to curb efforts to establish a "dictatorship of the proletariat."

Mr. Palmer said his department has more than 60,000 persons under surveillance as radicals, with whom it is unable to cope because of weakness of present statutes.

Urges Drastic Federal Law.

The attorney general urged the passage of a law to supplement the espionage act, and to take its place when the war time measure ceases to be effective. He described the proposed act drafted by his staff as being the most effective method of dealing with sedition, anarchy and radicalism generally. The bill, Mr. Palmer said, was broad enough to stop all attempts to overturn the existing order and yet safeguarded free speech and the press.

Activities of the 222 foreign language newspapers present another problem which the department has been unable to meet successfully, Mr. Palmer said. They have openly advocated changes in the government by violence, and preached sedition.

Red Papers in English.

English newspapers branded as anarchistic, number 105, Mr. Palmer said. In addition, 144 radical newspapers, published in foreign countries, are distributed in the United States.

Practically all of the radical organizations in the country have looked upon the Negro race as fertile ground for the spread of their doctrine, Mr. Palmer said. He warned that the propaganda had been successful in many respects.

In connection with the spread of radicalism throughout the northwest a telegram from Mayor Baker of Portland, Ore., to Vice President Marshall said that the public has become inflamed at the activities of the Reds and that the situation was serious. He urged federal legislation to meet the situation.

U. S. Acts Against I. W. W.

Tacoma, Wash., Nov. 15.—First federal action against alleged I. W. W. members following the Centralia armistice day outrage was taken today when warrants were issued charging eighty-eight men now in custody in Tacoma and Centralia with conspiracy to overthrow the government. The complaint quotes a large number of articles from I. W. W. publications and the I. W. W. constitution.

Aggressive Steps Taken.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 15.—All Industrial Workers of the World arrested in Seattle, Centralia, and Chehalis are to be charged in federal courts with attempted conspiracy to overthrow the government, United States District Attorney Robert C. Saunders declared here today. This step is in addition to the action taken at Tacoma.

Parade Attack Planned?

Centralia, Wash., Nov. 15.—Industrial Workers of the World planned the Centralia parade shooting three weeks before armistice day, according to an alleged confession made by L. Roberts, confessed I. W. W.

The confession said the I. W. W. expected their hall would be attacked on Armistice day. According to Roberts' statement, E. Wesley Everetts, the lynched I. W. W., apparently directed the movements of the radicals.

Russ Soviet "Envoy" Seized.

New York, Nov. 15.—After he had been arrested for contempt in refusing to appear with certain documents before the joint legislative committee investigating radical activities in this state, Ludwig C. A. K. Martens, self-styled "ambassador to the United States from the soviet government of Russia," was arraigned before the committee and released in $1,000 bail upon a promise to appear Monday with his papers.

CITY STAYS DRY CALMLY AS COURT DELAYS RULING

Night Crowds Show Little Interest in Bars' Fate.

Midnight, Saturday! Witching hour in the alcoholic days of yore when waiters yawned and bars gave up their dead.

But where are the merrymakers—the roysterers who once filled the Broadway owl, the north, the south, the west bound elevated trains with a sound of revelry by night—the portly old gentlemen with clinging chorus girls who reluctantly emerged from the cafe and cabaret to hail a taxicab?

A few of them—a very few—you may still single out in this sober crowd of men and women leaving the loop for home after an evening at the theater or cabaret. But they are the conspicuous exception. Chicagoans who can still get liquor if they want it in most of the downtown cafés, are apparently undergoing a change of heart concerning J. Barleycorn.

Judges Delay Edict.

They manifested little interest last night in the pending court decision which will have the effect of making the city wet or dry. Some saloonkeepers and café proprietors had advertised there was a possibility of their places reopening, but even this failed to lure the public. The loop resembled a cotter's Saturday night in sobriety and saneness.

However, Judge George A. Carpenter and his associate, Judge Louis Fitzhenry, announced yesterday they would not hand down a decision until next week, probably Monday or Tuesday. The case at issue is a plea of Chicago and Peoria liquor dealers for an injunction against enforcement of wartime prohibition, and a petition for the sale here of the whisky stocks of Hannah & Hogg.

The judges made their announcement in the federal courtroom in the presence of representatives of the wet and dry elements; Attorney Levy Mayer, representing Hannah & Hogg, and District Attorney C. F. Clyne.

Take Decision Calmly.

"It will be impossible to render a decision in the case of Hannah & Hogg versus District Attorney Clyne et al.," said Judge Carpenter. "Judge Fitzhenry and myself have not had sufficient time to complete deliberations. The decision will be announced early next week."

That was all. The rival factions filed out of the courtroom. J. Barleycorn's reappearance had been postponed, and the saloonkeepers and cabaret proprietors, who had clung vainly to the hope that springs eternal, went back to their taverns, to continue serving the bottled T. N. T. which now passes as liquor.

Reservations by the hundred had been tentatively booked by all Chicago cafés anticipating the wettest Saturday night on record in the event the court reversed the prohibition law.

In downtown hotels groups of downstate visitors who had flocked to Chicago Friday night and early yesterday, looking forward to a real celebration, checked out sadly or turned their attention to other channels of pleasure.

May Go to Supreme Court.

Attorney Mayer refused to comment on the situation.

It was said he has made all preparations to rush the Chicago case direct to the Supreme court in case Judge Carpenter orders it dismissed here, and that the wet contingent anticipates some favorable court recommendations to help its cause along in the higher tribunal.

RISK PRESIDENT FINDS 2 WIVES TOO MUCH RISK

Consider the annoyance occasioned Max Spiegel, president of the Providors Life Insurance company, living at 4515 Drexel boulevard. In New York a wife and two children; in Chicago a wife and three children.

For fourteen years Mr. Spiegel had not seen the New York Mrs. Spiegel. And likewise she hadn't seen him. But she wanted to. A few weeks ago a traveling salesman who knew Mr. Spiegel met his first wifes' daughter, Ethel, who is a clerk in a New York department store. He revealed Mr. Spiegel's whereabouts.

In the Court of Domestic Relations yesterday Spiegel was arraigned on a charge of wife and child abandonment. The case was continued until tomorrow in order to give him opportunity to effect a matrimonial disentanglement. He testified that the second Mrs. Spiegel was a common law wife. The first Mrs. Spiegel is suing for divorce.

HANDS OFF, U. S. POLICY IN RAID BY D'ANNUNZIO

Warcraft Told to Let Italy Look After Poet.

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, Nov. 15.—Gabriele d'Annunzio is out again and is said to be determined to seize the coast from Fiume southward despite the patrol of American warships.

However, D'Annunzio can work his will so far as the American fleet is concerned, for Rear Admiral Andrews, the commander, has been instructed not to interfere with D'Annunzio, but leave him for Italy to deal with.

In order to outwit this patrol D'Annunzio sailed from Fiume with 600 troops Friday in the early morning darkness. He landed before noon at Zara, about 100 miles southward, and took control of that town. The warrior poet made a triumphant entry into the city with his Arditi grenadiers and staff and, according to dispatches from Trieste, "received an enthusiastic welcome from the Italians of Zara."

D'Annunzio was accompanied by his warships and the torpedo boat Nullo. It is announced that he intends to continue his expedition to other towns on the eastern coast of the Adriatic and seize them for Italy, while the peace conference delegates intrigue and daily in Paris.

Fleet "Danger" to Rome.

The Italian government political paper "Rome" published in Rome devotes an entire front page to an editorial headed with large type "The American Fleet in the Adriatic is a Danger." The article, of course, was written before the orders to Rear Admiral Andrews were issued. The editorial follows:

"In the Roads of Venice a few American warships are anchored. In the Adriatic are American squadron patrols—

"On the contrary, the French and English ships have left Italian waters with a tactfulness worthy of note.

"The presence of American warships in Italian waters to act as a police agent is—I won't say improper—but a startling violation of the oldest customs between civilized countries.

Italian Patrol for U. S.

"Suppose, for example, there was some dispute between the United States and Mexico and Italy sent a squadron into American waters to act as a police agent in somebody else's house. Suppose Italy sent warships to a French harbor in order to protect the right of newspapers. The French and Americans properly would raise a strong protest. The Italian warships would be compelled to leave foreign waters—and they would not be given military honors on their return trip either!

"Then why should a thing which would not be permitted of Italy, be allowed to the Americans?

Eyes on Sailors.

"The man in charge of the American warships in the Adriatic is not a diplomat—he is a sailor. But he lacks perhaps the tactfulness that would avoid certain distinctions which would constitute a humiliation for Italy.

"Should it happen that some American sailor was tempted by good Italian wine to get drunk. That would not be impossible. Then, if in that state he would utter some regrettable word. An incident such as above referred to might ensue.

"If nothing happened at Trau, this was due to the correctness of the Italians, who withdrew immediately after the disembarkation of the American sailors. Think for an instant of the disastrous consequences that might have been if a Croat had shot an American. The Croat immediately would have become Italian. Here is a diplomatic incident with all its consequences."

Daniel Frohman Vertigo Victim; Slight, Is Diagnosis

New York, Nov. 15.—[Special.]—Daniel Frohman, theatrical manager and president of the Actors' Fund of America, was stricken with vertigo, following the meeting of the fund committee in the Frohman Lyceum building this afternoon. Dr. George M. Bennett, who was called, said tonight Mr. Frohman's condition was not serious.

U.S. OFFERS RAIL MEN $36,000,000 YEARLY INCREASE

Brotherhoods Retire from the Parley to Think It Over.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—[Special.]—The railroad administration today offered the railroad brotherhood chieftains representing enginemen and trainmen a compromise increase of wages for their men aggregating $36,000,000 a year.

The brotherhoods, it was announced, have taken the matter under advisement, and further conferences with Director General Hines will be held late next week.

"The railroad administration," Mr. Hines said tonight, "in discharging its responsibility to make readjustments necessary to avoid unjust inequalities in the compensation of different classes of railroad employés, has proposed to the four brotherhoods representing the trainmen and enginemen that, in order to give an additional measure of compensation to the train service employés in the slow freight service time and one-half will be paid for time required to make runs in excess of what would be required if an average speed of twelve and one-half miles an hour were maintained; provided, however, that all arbitraries and special allowances now paid in various forms of freight train service are entirely eliminated for the railroads as a whole.

Unions to Think It Over.

"The proposal thus made, which bears on the most important matter under consideration, has been taken under advisement by those representatives with a view to further discussion.

"Last August the president suggested to congress that, in view of the early approach of termination of federal control, it would be desirable to have these questions of further compensation for railroad employés committed to a special tribunal to be created by act of congress.

"Congress, however, was unwilling to adopt this course, and the senate committee on interstate commerce took the position that such legislation was not needed, because ample power was conferred upon the director general under the federal control act to deal with these matters.

Underpaid Contention Studied.

"In discharging the responsibility which thus unavoidably rested upon the railroad administration consideration has been given to the claim that various classes of train and engine employés are relatively underpaid.

"In considering these claims the conclusion has been reached that the train service employés in freight train service who are habitually averaging less than twelve and a half miles an hour do not get an opportunity to earn a reasonable monthly wage, as compared with employés in fast freight service or employés in passenger train service, without working abnormally long hours each month, frequently amounting to from 275 to 300 hours or more a month, and the above method has been decided to be the best way in which to make a fair equalization of this condition.

"It is important to emphasize that this proposal will operate exclusively for the benefit of employés in the slow freight train service."

Wilson Mizner Fined as a Gambler, Citizenship Lost

New York, Nov. 15.—[Special.]—Wilson Mizner today was sentenced by County Judge Smith at Mineola to pay a fine of $1,000 and to serve an indeterminate term of from one year to one year and ten months in Sing Sing prison at hard labor for running a gambling house at Lynbrook, L. I. The sentence, so far as the prison term was concerned, was suspended on condition that Mizner keep out of Nassau county. Mizner paid the fine. By his conviction on the charge, which is a felony, Mizner loses his citizenship.

JAIL WOMAN AND 2 MEN IN SLAYING OF 2 DETECTIVES

Detectives from the office of State's Attorney Maclay Hoyne raided a room in a hotel at Eighteenth street and Wabash avenue and arrested two men and a woman.

The men are suspected of being the slayers of Detectives Lenehan and Burns, who were killed by robbers in a west side saloon on Oct. 3. The woman is said to be the affinity of one.

The prisoners were taken to the office of the state's attorney and questioned by his secretary, George T. Kenney, First Deputy Alcock, and Capt. James Gleason. The men are said to answer exactly the description of the slayers. They confessed, the police say, to recent robberies.

The witnesses to the shooting of Burns and Lenehan—James Morrisey and Sam Stewart, bartender and porter in the saloon of Thomas Mulhern, 3301 West Madison street, and Vernon Lambert, 2517 Millard avenue, a patron—failed to identify the prisoners. These witnesses have looked at more than 200 prisoners since the murder.

FREE 4 NEGROES IN RACE TRIALS; TWO ARE FINED $1

The trial of six Negroes, who were claimed by State's Attorney Hoyne to have been among the chief instigators of the recent race riots, was brought to a close in Judge Robert E. Crowe's court last night, when a jury returned a verdict of not guilty in the cases of four of the defendants and imposed a fine of $1 and costs upon the other two.

The hearing lasted ten days and dozens of witnesses testified. The state's attorney's office contended the six men rode down State street on the first night of the riots in an automobile, shooting "right and left." Those acquitted are Francis Bowers, Robert Cummings, William Lyle, and Alec Shelby. Scott Brown and Henry Harris, both deputy sheriffs, were ordered to pay fines of $1 each.

Attorneys Patrick H. O'Donnell and James Scott immediately asked for a new trial for Brown and Harris. A hearing on the motion was set for next Saturday by Judge Crowe. The cases were prosecuted by Assistant State's Attorneys R. T. Rollo and Dwight McKay.

Legion Lads Tear 3 Irish Flags Off De Valera's Car

Portland, Ore., Nov. 15.—Three flags of the so-called "Irish republic" were torn from automobiles in which Eamonn de Valera and members of his reception committee were riding here today by members of the American Legion.

MURDERER ROBS HIS DYING VICTIM

Two Pals of Slayer Angry at Killing, but Thefts Go On.

There were three of the robbers. Each held an automatic in his right hand. On their entrance into the poolroom of John Capoccia, 4420 West Sixty-third street, last night a dozen pool players threw up their hands and stood waiting.

One robber took his stand by the door. The other two began searching the victims with their free hand. They robbed six. One approached Albert Kubalanza.

Kubalanza showed no mind to be robbed. The robber was between him and the door. If he could wrest the automatic from his hand he might capture him and shoot the man at the door. He made a quick gesture, but the man in front anticipated it. He stepped back a pace.

Robs Man as He Is Dying.

Kubalanza's exertion threw him forward. The robber fired once, and as the victim lay at his feet, moaning, the man with the automatic passed on to the next one to be robbed. Not, however, before he had taken $15 and a gold watch from the dying man's pockets.

The trio robbed four other men, then escaped, running north in Kenneth avenue. In the meantime the wounded man died. Some of his comrades ran after the thieves a little way, then gave up the pursuit. One went to the Kubalanza home, 6137 South Kostner avenue, and told the widow.

She came to the poolroom, carrying her year old son, Edwin, with 5 year old Helen tagging at her skirt. She wanted to throw herself upon the body, but they wouldn't let her. The body must not be touched until the arrival of the deputy coroner, the homicide squad, and the finger print expert. So Kubalanza lay for three hours stretched out on the floor, with his widow and his children and his friends looking on and weeping.

Pals Angry at Murder.

The police obtained descriptions of the three men. They seemed to be Italians. The killer wore an army overcoat.

"One of them asked the killer why he shot Kubalanza," said Capoccia. "He was angry because of the murder. His pal was, too.

"'I shot him because he thought he was a smart guy,' the man in the soldier coat said. The other two began swearing at him, but they didn't stop robbing until they were through. I lost $20."

THIS LANDLORD SEEMS TIRED OF OWNERSHIP JOYS

An advertisement which may be considered a classic appears today in the classified section of THE TRIBUNE. It reads:

"I own a frame building with two flats and two stores, all vacant except one store. Can find no one to give it better attention than is commonly given by a woman's second husband to her cross-eyed stepchild by the first wife of her first husband. Property is at 5749-51 Wentworth avenue; is all clear and needs many repairs. Make me an offer."

The owner is Eugene H. Garnett, a lawyer with offices at 7 South Dearborn street. He told THE TRIBUNE he has owned the property for ten years; has had agent after agent; that all the tenants except a Chinaman who has a laundry in one of the stores, left during recent strike disorders, that boys have smashed the windows, and that he is tired of owning it and wishes to be rid of it. He said he wrote this advertisement so "people wouldn't go to sleep over it."

LODGE FORCES RESERVATIONS ON 10 CLAUSES

Both Sides Prepared for a Deadlock Tomorrow.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—[Special.]—The senate today completely defeated the administration forces and rushed through ten drastic reservations to the peace treaty, virtually completing the Lodge program.

This action was taken after the senate had voted a cloture on itself, shutting off debate. Republican and Democratic leaders worked together to invoke cloture, piling up a majority which far exceeded the two-thirds necessary for adoption. In the count of 78 to 16 the two parties contributed about evenly.

What Reservations Do.

The ten reservations adopted today accomplish these things:

Forbid the acceptance of any mandatory by the United States without the consent of congress.

Take away from the league of nations all jurisdiction over American domestic affairs, such as immigration, the tariff, labor, boundaries, and coastwise traffic.

Preserve the Monroe doctrine by denying presentation to the league of any question relating to the Monroe doctrine.

Repudiate the Shantung settlement and reserve full liberty of action to the United States in any dispute which may arise between Japan and China under the terms of that settlement.

Reserve to the United States senate the right to veto any appointment by the president of any American representative in the league of nations.

Prevent interference with American trade with Germany by the reparations commission, except by the approval of congress.

Refuse to permit the expenditure of American money by the league except where regularly appropriated by congress.

Reserve to the United States the right to increase its armament at any time without the consent of the league in case of threatened invasion.

Permit the United States to exercise its own discretion about boycotting the nationals of covenant breaking states residing within the United States.

Safeguard the rights of American shareholders in German owned concerns seized in the United States during the war.

Means Death of Treaty.

The sweeping character of today's action completed the defeat of the administration senators in their fight against reservations and, in the opinion of leaders on both sides, seals the doom of the treaty.

Senator Underwood of Alabama, slated as the next leader of the senate Democrats, said that not less than thirty Democrats would vote against ratification because of the reservations, and Senator Borah of Idaho, leader of the Republican irreconcilables, was confident there would be fifteen to eighteen Republican votes against ratification under all circumstances.

Final Vote on Monday?

Senator Lodge was convinced tonight that the treaty was dead. In the face of the repeated assertions of the Democratic leaders, Senator Lodge said he could no longer doubt they intended to vote against the Lodge ratification resolution and that the effect of their action meant nothing less than the death of the treaty.

The final vote on the Lodge ratifying resolution may be reached Monday. When it is defeated the Democrats hope to resurrect the treaty under a new form of parliamentary procedure and hold the pact in a deadlock until some of the "mild" reservationists are driven into a compromise.

The moment that anything less than the Lodge program is adopted, at least thirty-three Republicans are prepared to cast their votes against ratification.

Senator Hitchcock will confer with President Wilson either tomorrow or Monday to decide the course of the administration forces.

Win by Big Majorities.

On all the reservations the opposition to the treaty in its present form mustered wide majorities. All amendments or substitutes offered by the Democrats were swept into the discard. At one time or another no less than thirteen Democrats broke away from the administration camp and voted for reservations.

On the question of protecting American sovereignty over domestic questions, ten Democrats sided with the Republicans, while in the issue of safeguarding the Monroe doctrine nine Democrats bolted the administration camp.

Four Democrats voted with the Republicans on every one of the ten proposals. They were Senators Reed, Missouri; Gore, Oklahoma; Shields, Tennessee, and Walsh, Massachusetts. Senator Smith, Georgia, voted for six of the committee's measures; Senator Thomas, Colorado, for five; Senators Chamberlain, Oregon, and Trammell, Florida, for two each, and Senators Owen, Oklahoma; King, Utah; Kirby, Arkansas, and Myers, Montana, for one each.

Vote on Monroe Doctrine.

The vote on the Monroe doctrine issue was the real test of strength. The senate first voted down, 51 to 43, a substitute by Senator Hitchcock to declare the doctrine "in no way impaired or affected" by the treaty. Another substitute, by Senator Pittman, was voted down, 52 to 42. Then the roll call on the reservation was taken. It resulted:

Tight Curb on Tongues.

The swift action of the senate was made possible early today by the adoption, for the first time in the history of the upper house, of a rigid cloture rule. This rule means that no senator can speak in all more than one hour between the time cloture was invoked today and disposal of the treaty.

The forensic proclivities of the senate, which have held sway unbridled through more than six months of treaty discussion, died hard. In the first hour of the session senators warred for the privilege of having a last word.

To cope with the problem of time keeping, a rush order was sent for preparation of a feature new to the government printing office—a senatorial time sheet. It was scanned anxiously tonight by senators who had got into the day's debate.

The cloture was adopted on a roll call as follows:

Loophole for Administration.

Just before the adoption of the cloture rule Vice President Marshall announced that he would rule that a majority of the senate might keep the treaty before the senate indefinitely, even if the ratifying resolution were rejected. Under such a ruling the administration hopes to force the acceptance of a compromise program of reservations with the aid of "mild" reservationists.

Thirteen reservations have now been adopted. Two more remain on the Lodge program, one refusing to accept the trusteeship for the German colonies and the other declining to submit to the league any question of national honor or vital interest.

Several more probably will be offered by individuals, one of which, to be proposed by Senator Johnson of California, to equalize American and British voting power in the league, is almost certain of adoption.

Girl Visitor Loses $360 in Purse on Street Car

Miss Ruby E. Johnson's first visit to Chicago from her home in Kingman, Ariz., will have proved an expensive one, unless some honest person fulfills her hopes and returns to her a purse containing all her money, $260, and a $100 clearing house check. Miss Johnson, who is staying at 1303 North Dearborn street, believes she lost the purse on a street car.

Fears World Disaster in Spoliation of China

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 15.—Prof. P. C. Chang, acting principal of Nankai college, China, told the third world's Christian citizenship conference here today the safest way to avoid a more disastrous war than that just ended is to demand that China be permitted to adopt a national policy, free from interference by other nations.

TEXT OF SENATE RESERVATIONS MADE TO TREATY OF PEACE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 15.—[Special.]—The ten reservations to the peace treaty, adopted by the senate today, were as follows:

MONROE DOCTRINE
(ADOPTED 55 TO 33)

"The United States will not submit to arbitration or to inquiry by the assembly or by the council of the league of nations, provided for in said treaty of peace, any questions which in the judgment of the United States depend upon or relate to its long established policy, commonly known as the Monroe doctrine; said doctrine is to be interpreted by the United States alone, and is hereby declared to be wholly outside the jurisdiction of said league of nations and entirely unaffected by any provision contained in the said treaty of peace with Germany."

DOMESTIC ISSUES
(ADOPTED 59 TO 35)

FRANCE WANTS TO HIRE LODGE, DIPLOMAT SAYS

BY EDWIN L. JAMES.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—I met today a diplomat of the French foreign office.

"Mr. Correspondent," said he, "do us a favor. Tell Senator Lodge that when he gets through changing the Versailles treaty to please America we would like to hire him to do a job for France. We would like to have our border line moved to the Rhine, we would like to have the German indemnity doubled, we would like to have title to Syria, we would accept Constantinople, and we would like to have Marshal Foch made commander of the league of nations army.

"If this program is more than Senator Lodge can do for us, we will accept any part. And he can name his price."

"Monsieur, you speak sarcastically," said I.

"I do," said he.

Bride, 15, Seized as Check Passer, Mystifies Police

Phillip McGuire, juvenile officer of the Grand Crossing station, is investigating the unique career of Mrs. Helen Baker—and finding it rather difficult.

"The girl is 15 years old," he said last night. "She has been married for several months, but I understand she has not been living with her husband recently. She will not say much about that angle. She gave her address as 1510 East Sixty-second street.

"She was arrested on the charge of passing two checks on shopkeepers in this district, and is at the juvenile home. I havon't learned her maiden name, nor the names of her parents, but I believe some steps have been taken toward marriage annulment proceedings."

Check Artist, Wanted in Chicago, Held in St. Louis

A man giving his name as Frank Perkins, 742 North Racine avenue, Chicago, was arrested Saturday in St. Louis. He confessed to having passed forged checks in St. Louis, Chicago, and other cities. The local police say he is Fred Pearson, alias Perkins, alias Preston, alias Cole, and that he is wanted in Chicago for passing a bogus check on the Great Northern hotel on Oct. 10, when as Fred Perkins he cashed a check for $50.02 drawn on the J. I. Case Plow company, of which he said he was an employé. The check, it is charged, proved a forgery and a warrant was sworn out for his arrest.

VIENNA, via Paris, Nov. 15.—In a mood of utter despair Jacob Reumann, burgomaster of Vienna, talked today of conditions in the city of which he is chief official. He asked that an appeal be made to the American committee to rescue Vienna from the brink of catastrophe.

Herr Reumann said: "During the war the population suffered many hardships and endured starvation slowly. Now it is accomplished swiftly. Vienna is approaching the direct necessity when thousands will succumb to hunger and cold, if aid is not immediately sent."

Mexicans Hit Favorite U. S. Indoor Sport; Tax Chicle

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 15.—Mexican taxes may cut down the gum chewing of some of our best stenogs. Reports received from Campeche says the Mexican government has increased the taxes on chicle—fundamental element of gum—34 cents a pound. This price, according to exporters here, will send the cost of Mexican chicle so high that the producers will have to close up shop until there is a reduction.

Other Nations Seek to Hold Mission in Paris.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—The American peace commission is awaiting permission for its return to Washington early in December. Frank Polk cabled Secretary of State Lansing recently pointing out that all work that can be accomplished by the present peace conference will be finished by December and intimating that he and the other American plenipotentiaries want to be home for Christmas.

It is understood that France, Italy, and various smaller nations have been applying pressure at Washington through their ambassadors to persuade Secretary Lansing to keep Polk, White, and Bliss and the rest of the American commission in Paris indefinitely.

Blocked to Standstill.

The principal reason why the American commission is determined to live up to the original schedule and to leave Paris early in December is that the members feel that it is the only way they can go ahead and achieve anything. Through dilatory and obstructive tactics on the part of certain individuals the peace conference already has dragged along practically a year, and so far only the German and Austrian treaties have been signed; the German treaty has only been presented.

European Intrigues Disgust U.

The intriguing of England, France and Italy always has disgusted the Americans. Similar occasions have arisen now. The Hungarian situation is blocked stock-still by the Roumanian attitude, and the peace conference cannot handle Roumania while the French and Italians are secretly supporting the Bucharest position.

Neither can the Adriatic question be settled when Premier Clemenceau and Prime Minister Lloyd George privately assured Tittoni of their support after previously backing up President Wilson in his plan for settlement of the Fiume question.

FRENCH TROOPS GATHER IN PARIS AS RIOTS MENACE

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, Nov. 15.—Numerous bodies of French troops have been arriving in Paris for the last several days, not entirely without ostentation.

There is widespread talk of demonstrations and possibly riots during Sunday and Monday, while the French elections are in progress, even until Wednesday, by which time it is expected the results will be known.

Between fifty and a hundred different strikes are in progress in Paris today. Thousands of factories in the suburbs have been forced to shut down on account of the coal scarcity.

By reason of the newspaper strike, which put every newspaper in Paris out of existence excepting the Paris edition of THE TRIBUNE, the public has been uninformed, save by rumor, concerning the grave conditions existing. Socialist posters are appearing on billboards making serious charges against the present government.

ITALY IS STIRRED TO A FEVER HEAT OVER ELECTIONS

Rome Huge Billboard; Fighting in Streets; Voting Today.

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.

ROME, Nov. 14.—Delayed.—The electoral struggle which takes place Sunday has now reached its apex. There are daily and hourly mass meetings all over the country. Candidates feverishly harangue the crowds, many of them delivering four or five speeches a day.

Rome is placarded with manifestos of every imaginable color and size containing either the highest eulogies or the most vulgar insults. Even the churches have not been spared.

The colonnades in the square of St. Peter, covered with multicolored papers, look like futuristic pictures.

The Colosseum and obelisks are decorated in a like manner.

Election Is Uncertain.

The temper of the masses is uncertain, and they are excited by the slightest incident. The appearance of an enemy candidate is the signal for insults, usually ending in a free for all fight.

The most violent are the Socialists. Their excesses are such as using firearms during a fight, trying to demolish the grand stand where their adversary is speaking, and taking the motors of their adversaries or peaceful citizens for their propaganda. They are shouting that they are fighting for liberty and justice, but they ignore the elementary rudiments of those principles.

Financial Condition Worries.

One point upon which all parties are agreed is the necessity to find some solution of the grave financial situation. The rapid and unprecedented rise in exchange, which now is more than 100 per cent, is seriously preoccupying every one.

The hope is expressed that the cabinet will succeed in finding a system of taxation capable of restoring the exhausted finances of the country, which, immediately presented to the new parliament, may, with the beginning of next year, mark the restoration of Italian credit both at home and abroad.

Doyle had just started on an assignment to "clean up" the district. WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Washington Bureau of The Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 15.

ANTI-TREATY forces in the senate, following adoption of the first cloture rule in the history of that body, swept administration forces aside with bewildering rapidity today and forced adoption of ten Americanization reservations. In the opinion of leaders of both sides today's action dooms the treaty.

AFTER mine workers' leaders and operators had called each other ugly names early today in the conference called by Secretary Wilson, and after the operators had forced rejection of Mr. Wilson's suggestion for a joint conference of all bituminous fields, operators of the central competitive field and the miners' scale committee finally resumed negotiations to settle the coal dispute.

THE railroad administration today offered the railroad trainmen a compromise wage adjustment which will aggregate $36,000,000 a year and which the brotherhood leaders have taken under advisement. The proposal, which is designed to adjust inequalities existing in pay of trainmen, is to apply to trainmen in slow freight service, time and one-half to be paid for time required to make runs in excess of what would be required if an average speed of twelve and one-half miles per hour were maintained.

EXTRA TAX CUTS EMPLOYMENT OF CHILD WORKERS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—Child labor in the United States has decreased more than 40 per cent since the child labor tax provision of the revenue act went into effect April 25 last. This act levied a tax of 10 per cent on the net earnings of plants employing children under 14 years or between 14 and 16 for more than eight hours in the production of commodities entering interstate commerce.

BRITISH PRESS REGRETS SENATE TREATY ACTION

Hopes That the Future Will Result in Changes.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Most of the London press deliberately minimize the news of the United States senate's passage of the Lodge reservation on Article X of the league of nations. Only the Daily Express makes a leading story on the first page of it. In a head across two columns, it says: "America Torpedoes the League," and in the introduction says the senate has inflicted a personal humiliation on President Wilson.

Few of the newspapers comment editorially. The Daily Chronicle attributes the senate's action "to hostility to President Wilson rather than hostility to Europe," and says:

"This in no wise relieves Europe from serious, possibly tragic, embarrassments, for which American obstruction is responsible."

"Grave Blow to World."

The Daily News sees little hope of America entering the league of nations on the same footing as other nations and says this will be "a grave blow to the hopes of the rest of the world, who looked across the Atlantic for full unselfish leadership in the task of re-ordering the world."

The newspaper, however, does not believe that the senate today represents what will be in the mind of America next year or the year after, and adds:

"The attitude of the senate is a misfortune, but a misfortune which time will remedy."

France Holds Comment.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—The French foreign office considers the reservations to the German peace treaty in the American senate as constituting a question of extreme delicacy, and the office is not disposed at present to make any official statement on the subject.

Nevertheless, persons of importance in French diplomacy express the view that the French government would be disposed to accept reservations by the American senate which would not require France and its allies to reopen questions already settled by the plenipotentiaries.

On the other hand, they hold that any senate amendment comprising the essential bases of the Versailles treaty textually ratified by the allies and Germany could not be favorably accepted by the allies.

Quiz on Omaha Cops' Work During Riots Is Requested

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 15.—Gov. Samuel R. McKelvie today asked the mayor and commissioners of Omaha to assist in a proposed investigation of the Omaha police department during the recent race riots.

The governor said he felt the investigation was necessary "in order that the people of Omaha as well as myself may be informed whether the law enforcement officers performed their full duty" during the riot.

Husband Beating Wife Causes Murder Scare

Some one called the West Chicago avenue police last night on a "Main 12" call from the vicinity of Huron and Troy streets and informed them that a "man was murdering his wife at 3122 West Huron street." VENIZELOS ASKS NEW INQUIRY OF SMYRNA GREEKS

Reviews Attack by Turks and Lays Claim to Asia Minor Port.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—"I have asked the supreme council to consider that the findings contained in the report on Smyrna by the commission of investigation be considered null and void and that another investigation be conducted," Premier Venizelos, the Greek premier, said today.

Smarting under the interpretation of the supreme council's letter to him on Wednesday last, which the press generally has commented upon as a rebuke to the Greeks, the premier said that the letter was far from a rebuke.

Shorn of its diplomatic language, it was virtually approbation of the reservations taken by him against the commission's finding.

Charges Injustice to Allies.

M. Venizelos based his request upon the fact that Greeks were not represented on the commission, that no Greek officer was present during the deliberations of the commission, and that the Greeks were not allowed to present evidence in rebuttal or cross-examine witnesses.

The premier reviewed the events occurring May 2, when Greeks landed at Smyrna, saying that he took full responsibility for the failure of the Greek military leaders to take necessary precautions; the officers guilty of such neglect had been reprimanded.

"When the Greeks landed," continued the premier, "they were immediately surrounded by cheering crowds and advanced to the city proper without occupying the strategic points of the city.

"Turks and Greekophobe residents fired from windows upon the troops.

"The immediate repressive measures which were taken did not differ from such measures taken by other armies. Eighty persons were arrested, and four sentenced to death and executed. Three of these were Greeks having in their possession Turkish gold which they were unable to explain. Seventy-four persons were sentenced to prison terms; of these forty-eight were Greeks.

Restores Order in Smyrna.

"Two days after landing order reigned in Smyrna, and there has been order ever since, as was acknowledged by the French officer on the commission before the supreme council Wednesday.

"We seek no mandate; we seek to enter our home. I should like to have the question decided finally once for all, as the occupation is causing Greece much expense which she is unable to bear indefinitely."

OPERATORS AND MINERS UTTER BITTER WORDS

Agree at Length to Settle Pay Dispute Only for the Central Field.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—[Special.]—Neither coal operators nor miners showed signs of willingness to make concessions as negotiations for a settlement of their difficulties were resumed today under the guidance of Secretary of Labor Wilson.

The scale committees of the central competitive field assembled, following a stormy preliminary meeting at which charges and countercharges were hurled back and forth by operators and miners. The operators charged the miners with violation of agreements, while the miners accused the operators of bad faith and coercive tactics.

Miners Insist on Old Demands.

At the meeting of the scale committees the miners formally presented to the operators the identical demands made several weeks ago, including a 60 per cent increase in wages, a six hour day, and a minimum week of five days, despite Secretary Wilson's declaration yesterday that these demands were impossible.

The operators made no reply, but will confer tomorrow with a view to making known their position to the miners on Monday.

Upon the insistence of the operators and in spite of appeals by Secretary Wilson and denunciation of their attitude by the labor leaders, an agreement finally was reached for resumption of negotiations under the method employed in past years.

Only Central Field Affected.

The negotiations for the present will deal only with the central competitive field, composing Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and western Pennsylvania.

Operators of outlying fields were in conference during the afternoon, at the request of Secretary Wilson, to determine whether they would agree in advance to be bound by the basic scales which might be determined upon for the central field. They refused to state in advance what their position might be and would not agree to an acceptance in advance of action.

The preliminary meeting, held in the morning, was attended by several hundred operators and miners. Secretary Wilson presided. It speedily developed into a rough and tumble verbal battle.

Chieftains in Verbal Battle.

Acting President Lewis and William Green, secretary, were chief spokesmen for the miners, while Philip H. Penna, Terre Haute, Ind., voiced the views of the operators of the central competitive field; Harry N. Taylor, president of the National Coal association, and W. F. Lukens, representing operators of northwestern states, were the principals in the discussion for the mine owners.

The controversy became so acrimonious at times that it seemed as if the participants might come to blows, but the rock 'urling was eventually stopped and agreement was reached to begin negotiations for a basic agreement in the central field, whereupon the scale committees of operators and miners went into secret conference.

Lewis Fires First Broadside.

Mr. Lewis declared the miners were willing to accept Secretary Wilson's first proposal and then launched upon a tirade against the operators.

"I want to express my utter amazement at the attitude of the operators," said Mr. Lewis. "If there has been one thing used by the operators to crystallize sentiment against the miners it has been the oft repeated cry from the outlying districts that they had not been presented with the wage demands and stood ready to negotiate. They come in here now and deny they are ready to negotiate."

Mr. Lukens promptly resented the charge of bad faith against the outlying operators.

Charges Breach of Contract.

"This charge comes with mighty poor grace from the United Mine Workers at this time while the country is tied up by a strike which the government says is in violation of an agreement," said Mr. Lukens. "They have not only struck in districts where they admit there is some question as to the date of the expiration of the agreement but in other districts."

"I deny that," interposed Mr. Lewis. "Let us have the facts."

"I haven't the facts here now, but I can produce them," Mr. Lukens responded. "Mr. Lewis' statements are intended to becloud this issue and hoodwink the public. I don't relish having a statement of that kind go unchallenged. The operators are acting in the utmost good faith. That that is true is shown by the fact that the government is with them."

Acting President Lewis took some parting shots at the operators after agreeing to resume negotiations on the old central field basis.

Labor's Garden of Gethsemane.

"I wonder if those operators are violating the Lever act and whether the government is going to enforce the law? Myself and associates were haled into court, and we were told that the law was thus and so. We went into our garden of Gethsemane."

Mr. Penna retorted that if the miners were as law-abiding as claimed more of them would have returned to work.

"I resent that statement," shouted Mr. Lewis, springing to his feet. "I won't permit it to go unchallenged."

"Now, John, don't get obstreperous," Mr. Penna admonished quietly, with the air of one who was accustomed to such outbursts. "I haven't anything to amend in my statement."

German Employers Slow to Meet Demands of Labor

BERLIN, Nov. 15.—The German employers' union is more stolid than ever in the history of the country toward the so-called unreasonable demands of labor for wages and hours. The national union of employers announces the membership includes 127 associations, representing 481 different organizations.

"HARD LIKKER!"

O, wild and woolly were the upper stories of the Hamilton club last night. "Hard likker," drawn direct from the apple, was on the mahogany of the Red Dog saloon and Calamity Jane's dance hall resounded with the iniquitous blare of "Two Bowie Bob's" jazz music perpetrators.

What with the whirling roulette wheels and the gun fights 'twixt Mexican greasers and sour dough cow punchers, it was a busy night for Sheriff "Sandy" Fife and his gang of deputy bouncers.

"Don't shoot the bartender—he's doing his best," admonished a sign in Buzzard Red's café, while another legend remarked: "If you don't like our likker, to hell with you."

Altogether it was a turribly rough community until about midnight. Then Rocky Gulch vanished into thin air, leaving the effete "eastness" of the Hamilton club in its erstwhile status quo.

PLAN NEW CUT IN CONSUMPTION OF COAL IN CHICAGO

Hold "Economy" Meet Tomorrow; Situation Not Alarming.

The regional coal committee will meet tomorrow to discuss rigid steps for the conservation of Chicago's fuel supply.

"The situation is not alarming," said T. W. Proctor, its chairman, yesterday, "but rigid economy is necessary unless it is to become so."

All consumers are on rations, following the committee's edict of Friday, which suspended deliveries to government and state instituions and the transfer of coal between railroads, except on the committee's specific order.

Aim to Avert Suffering.

Mr. Proctor said there were fewer than 350,000 tons of coal in the Chicago district.

"If necessary," he added, "manufacturing will be suspended. We intend at any cost to avert physical suffering. Virtually no relief can be expected from other regional committees as they have barely enough coal to supply their own demands.

Cars Unloaded Promptly.

"The extent of the shortage will depend on how long the miners persist in remaining away from work. Today's developments gave little hope of an immediate break in their ranks."

All cars of coal received here—a few still are arriving from nonunion mines in the south—are being unloaded promptly and set at pit mouths, so there will be no delay in shipment when operations are resumed.

Her Boast All Realized—All but Film Queen Part

"The next time you hear from me you'll see my name in the papers. My name will be flashed from coast to coast. I'm going to be a great movie actress. I'll stop off here some time, maybe, when I'm on my way to my summer studio in the east."

So Helen Mohnar, 15 years old, told her friends before she ran away from her home in Whiting, Ind.

And nearly all of her prediction have come true. Her name is in the papers. It was flashed from coast to coast last night by the news bureaus that sent out word of her arrest by the police of Los Angeles, Cal., where she had sought to become a queen of the films. She will stop off in Whiting, but it probably will be en route to a boarding school picked out by her parents instead of a studio in the east.

The regular Saturday night dance of the Oak Park club, Oak Park, was called off last night just as the guests were arriving by the president, Earnest A. Blackmer, when he was informed that Robert James, 57 years old, club steward for the last six years, had just died. James had been ill at his home, 1016 North boulevard, of heart trouble since the first of October.

YANKS-BRITONS IN LOVE FEAST; LAUD EACH OTHER

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Five hundred Americans and Britons attended the delayed armistice dinner given by the English Speaking union to the American ambassador, John W. Davis, and Mrs. Davis. Lord Reading, former ambassador at Washington, presided. He presented to Ambassador Davis for transmission to America an illuminated address to the people of the United States. It was signed by lord mayors and other officials of leading cities and towns of Great Britain.

A cablegram of good will and "wishes for his complete and speedy recovery" was sent to President Wilson by the banqueters, who were pleased by a message from former President Taft.

He expressed the hope that before another anniversay of the armistice the league of nations would be operative between the English speaking nations.

Ambassador Davis said there were moments "when we have looked about and wondered what has become of all the spirit of altruistic sacrifice," and attributed that questioning to the fact that war "tension is released."

"It was the sense of common danger, as well as the common view of right and justice, that fused our energies into one with those of the allies," he said.

Mr. Davis said he valued the message of the British cities and towns to America as the "sweetest music," the "praise of her soldier sons, and from no nation on earth would she more gladly receive it than from Britain."

Both Lord Reading and Ambassador Davis referred to the visit of the Prince of Wales to America as a good thing for both nations.

The message of the British cities said Britain was sorry to see the departure of American naval and military forces, who have fought side by side with our soldiers and sailors with so much gallantry and success.

There was an apology that wartime food laws had restricted hospitality.

3,477,000 Tons in Week Low Record for Soft Coal

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—The soft coal output for the week ending Nov. 8, the first week of the strike, was 3,477,000 tons, lowest in many years, according to the geological survey report today.

U. S. MAY ARREST MINERS ABETTING IDLENESS AT PITS

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 15.—[Special.]—Evidence of reported violations of the temporary injunction issued by Federal Judge A. B. Anderson against any conspiracy to reduce coal production is being gathered by government agents. It is regarded as not improbable that arrests will be made in the next day or two on contempt of court charges.

Information has been received, it is said, that meetings of local miners' unions have been held and resolutions adopted not to return to work; that some of the meetings have been attended by leaders, who were defendants in the government complaint, and that petitions are being circulated for miners' signatures to a statement agreeing not to return to work.

While it is said that an individual miner may return to work or not, as he pleases, so far as the injunction is concerned, it is a violation of the injunction for two or more miners to agree not to return, because that would constitute a conspiracy to violate the Lever act.

In like manner, it is said, circulation of a petition, the signers of which agree not to return to work, is a violation.

State Food and Dairy Superintendent Resigns

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 15.—John B. Newman of Elgin, state superintendent of food and dairies, with headquarters at Chicago, has tendered his resignation to Gov. Lowden, effective Dec. 1. Mr. Newman has been employed in the department for almost a score of years, and resigned to accept a position with the wholesale grocers' organization, according to word which has been received here.

PRINCE AT EASE LIKE PUGILIST GETTING IN TRIM

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Nov. 15.—The Prince of Wales spent the first of his three days of rest here by walking ten miles in the mountains, spending an hour in a swimming pool, golfing three hours, and dancing for three more.

At the conclusion of this program he seemed to have recovered considerably from the fatigue of his strenuous four day visit to Washington.

The prince won his golfing match, played with Sir Godfrey Thomas, his private secretary, and again proved his title as an athlete when he turned a somersault from a platform twelve feet high into seven feet of water in the swimming pool.

As for his desire to be incognito, the whole population of this little mountain resort was at the railroad station when he arrived.

In the tank the prince laughingly challenged the professional swimmer in charge to a diving contest. In the evening he saw a movie at the hotel and danced afterward.

American Sugar Co. Buys Cuban Mill for $10,000,000

HAVANA, Nov. 15.—The American Sugar Refining company, according to a statement given out by local bankers, has purchased the Cunagoa sugar mill, paying over $10,000,000.

2 WEEKS' PAY TO INCREASE SLOTH OF STATE MINERS

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 15.—Illinois soft coal miners were encouraged to continue their strike today by the receipt of pay envelopes for two weeks' work ending Nov. 1, held back by operators under their wage rules.

Operators here estimated that the money paid to the mine workers for the half month period, when production was speeded up in anticipation of the mine tieup, would approximate $8,000,000, reaching this figure by multiplying the total estimated 4,000,000 tons by $2, said to be a basic average of the cost per ton paid the miners.

Field reports to miners' headquarters today indicated a standpat attitude against any resumption of work until something tangible is offered by the joint scale committees.

At a meeting last night in Riverton, Sangamon county, mine workers declared in resolutions they would not return to work until a satisfactory agreement was signed "even if that time should be long enough to insure that hell be transformed into a frozen pond."

Jury Gives $32,400 in Suit Over Butterfield Statue

New York, Nov. 15.—After viewing Gutzon Borglum's statue of Maj. Gen. Daniel Butterfield, the "hero of Little Round Top," a Supreme court jury decided today the bronze was worth all of the $54,000 Borglum demanded for his work.

The jury awarded a verdict for $32,400 to the Gorham company, assignees of the sculptor, against the estate of Mrs. Julia L. Butterfield, the general's widow. The executors had paid Borglum only $21,600. The suit followed.

The statue, mounted upon a miniature of "Little Round Top," stands at Fairmount avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-second street.

WILSON FAILS TO CUT H.C.L.; RAIL MEN WILL ACT

Plan to Press Wage Demands Despite Pledge, Shea Says.

Timothy Shea, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, told the public ownership conference in the Congress hotel yesterday that he and the other chiefs of the "Big 4" had decided President Wilson could not make good his promise to reduce the high cost of living by the methods he had elected to pursue.

In consequence, Mr. Shea said, the 2,000,000 railroad employés of America would press their demands for an increase in pay proportionate to the higher prices of necessities and for an actual instead of a basic eight hour day, with time and a half for overtime.

"Must Grant Demands."

"And those demands," he declared, "must be granted whether the United States retains control of the lines or turns them back to their owners on Dec. 31. In the latter event, however, the demands must be settled first and their fulfillment made one of the conditions under which the roads are surrendered."

He announced that the brotherhoods intended to resist both the Cummins and the Esch bills with all their power. If the Esch bill were to be enacted, he said, courts would be at liberty to imprison strikers as conspirators and to fine the treasuries of their organizations out of existence.

"And if that were insufficient," he added, "the funds of every individual member of a union could be assessed.

"Plot to Crush Labor."

"We are convinced that this legislation is the result of a conspiracy among the large financial interests to reduce wages, while they continue war profiteering. It is part of a plot to crush all organized labor. Identified with it is the same group of men that is arrayed against the steel workers and that is backing the fight against the bituminous coal miners.

He charged that since 1910 the wages of firemen and enginemen have advanced 40 to 45 per cent, while the cost of living has risen 120 per cent.

"There is no danger of a strike," he concluded, "unless it is provoked by such legislation as the Esch bill or by a course like that adopted by the department of justice toward the United Mine Workers of America."

Ride for Nickel in Frisco.

M. M. O'Shaughnessy, city engineer of San Francisco, gave the conference information concerning municipal car lines and 5 cent fares.

"San Francisco owns 64 of its 360 miles of street car track," he said, "which represents an investment by the municipality of $6,750,000—$1,000,000 having been realized from earnings. Wages of $5 for an eight hour day are paid, and employés may only work six days a week.

"There are several reasons which deter the city from increasing fares. One is that it doubtless would encourage the privately owned companies to ask permission to do the same. Their last financial statements indicate they aren't making operating expenses."

Charles B. Stillman, president of the American Federation of Teachers, explained that the federation had placed itself on record as being opposed to strikes. What it sought to do, he said, besides obtaining better pay for its members, was to broaden their viewpoint toward industrial problems.

Hear of Thompson's Plan.

Frank B. Ayers, spokesman for Mayor Thompson, told the conference at its night session that the mayor is for public ownership—especially of the street railways. He outlined the mayor's plan for the selection by the people of five men to operate the lines.

"Seventy-five per cent of the wealth of the city is against public ownership, but 3,000,000 persons are in favor of it," he said. "The Chicago street cars are run for the greed of owners, and not for the benefit of the people. Comfort, health, and convenience are not considered. The passengers are packed into the cars like sardines."

He declared if the city owned the lines they could be operated on 5 cent fares and the profits would show an excess which could be used for civic improvements.

BALK ABOLITION OF JIM CROW LAW VIA RAIL BILL

South Sticks to Saddle Water Line Clauses Are Approved.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—[Special.]—Abolition by federal action of the "Jim Crow" laws of southern states, by which Negroes are prevented from traveling in passenger coaches occupied by whites, proposed in an amendment to the Esch railroad bill by Representative Madden of Illinois today, brought on a stormy debate in the house.

The amendment was defeated, 142 to 12, but not until after southern members had arraigned Madden for politics demagoguery and Chicago had been condemned for allowing race riots.

Speaking for the amendment, Madden declared the separate accommodations furnished Negro passengers cost the railroads $20,000,000 a year. He condemned alleged discrimination against the Negro, and said the services given by the race during the war entitled it to equality of treatment in this country.

Loud Shout from South.

The charges of discrimination by the southern states aroused Stevenson of South Carolina, who hotly demanded:

"What has Illinois done for the colored soldiers? There were race riots in Chicago in which they were shot down whether they were guilty or not, simply because their faces were black.

"While South Carolinans sometimes take the law into their own hands and hang some guilty Negro when an unspeakable crime has been committed, we don't shoot down all Negroes when one has violated the law."

Joining with the southern Democrats in opposing the amendment were several northern Republicans. Representative Snyder of New York said the legislation is not sought by the Negroes.

Final Action Delayed.

Final action on the railroad bill was stopped by the house after failure of the senate to take a resolution on adjournment. This made it impossible for the house to adjourn until next week even if the measure went through tonight.

The house approved several provisions of the bill relating to water lines.

Under one section approved, the Panama canal act forbidding railroad ownership of steamboats was amended to permit carriers to own vessels on the Great Lakes and Long Island sound.

Another amendment to the canal act, also adopted, gives the interstate commerce commission power to direct either water or rail carriers to establish connections by building docks or tracks.

Representative Hayden, Democrat, Arizona, made the proposal that the fourth section of the commerce act be made mandatory, and Representative Sims, Democrat, Tennessee, proposed that no departure be permitted because of water competition.

Mr. Hayden's motion was defeated, 97 to 50, and Mr. Sims' 101 to 65.

Can Fix Minimum Rates.

The house finally by a vote of 81 to 59 eliminated the section permitting the commission to establish minimum rail and water rates. It also voted, 102 to 51, that control by state authorities over state or municipal owned water terminals should not be relinquished to the interstate commerce commission.

Little opposition was manifest when the house adopted an amendment to permit the interstate commerce commission to authorize roads to consolidate or pool their earnings and facilities.

BLAST WRECKS PASSAIC STATION.

Passaic, N. Y., Nov. 15.—The Lackawanna railroad concrete passenger station here was demolished by an explosion, probably of escaping gas, early today. No one was in the station. Pieces of concrete were blown 100 feet.

BANKER'S THREE DAUGHTERS TOUR BOLSHEVIK ARMY

Give Concerts and Win Passes Across Enemy Lines to Poles.

Frank Comerford, Chicago attorney, who has just returned after making a personal investigation and survey of the new Baltic countries bordering the old Russia, has unearthed an unusual account of life and affairs under the rule of the soviets in Red Russia.

The account is given by a cultured young Russian woman, the daughter of Joseph Berson, formerly a wealthy Petrograd banker. She is Miss Marga Berson, an accomplished violinist and assistant director of the Royal Conservatory of Music, Petrograd.

Miss Berson and her two sisters, one of them a novelist of note in Russia, escaped from the land of the soviet by making their way through the bolshevik and Polish lines. They reached Warsaw in safety, where a series of articles covering their observations and adventures was obtained for The Tribune Foreign News Service. Following is the first:

BY MARGA BERSON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

WARSAW, Oct. 10.—In recognition of the great world interest of today in the battle fronts that surround bolshevik Russia, I am assuming that these fronts as they look from the inside of Russia to one of a class extinguished by the bolsheviks, would carry the greatest appeal. It is not every day that a banker's daughter manages to travel through a bolshevik army and get across its front lines to join its enemies. Here's how we did it.

I and my two sisters used a concert tour as our means to get to the bolshevik front. We left Petrograd on July 25. It took us three weeks to get to Dwinsk, the last point one can reach by railroad train. We gave concerts in twelve towns, most of them free for the soldiers. At Dwinsk there were a great number of Polish refugees and German prisoners. We gave a concert for the soldiers, and Soviet Commissioner Irby of Dwinsk attended. The bolshevik government extends every courtesy and gives every consideration to artists, such as writers, musicians, painters, and actors. They are the only people in Russia today who are called Mister, Missus, and Miss. Every one else is plain Comrade.

They Get Passes.

After the concert I met the commissioner. I told him we were Polish refugees and that our parents were old and sick, and that we were very anxious to get to Warsaw. The appeal was successful, and he gave us the passes that permitted us to cross the bolshevik frontier.

We journeyed in a peasant's wagon to Alexandroffsky. At this point we were about ten miles from the Polish front, and the Polish army was preparing to attack the city.

The passes we had showing that we were Polish refugees given us by Commissioner Irby and the letters that we carried got us through the Polish lines. The rest of the story of our getting here can be told in two words—we walked.

Reds Respect Women.

To the outside world perhaps the fate of Russian women is the most absorbing subject. Of the women I will speak first. There is no truth in the statements circulated outside of Russia that the bolshevik government had planned the nationalization of the womanhood of the nation.

I am not a sympathizer with the bolshevik government. We are sufferers from it. Enough can be said against the bolshevik government without resorting to lies. The suggestion that any one in Russia for a moment thought of such a crazy plan is a stupid lie. This is not an opinion of mine. I know that it is a lie. I have been in Russia since the beginning of the war, and I know there is not a particle of truth in the statement that either the Kerensky government or the bolshevik government or the people of Russia, peasants or bourgeoise, ever thought of such a plan.

Ravings of Drunken Man.

In the little town of Ufa a drunken man got up in a meeting and made some such proposal and was put out of the hall. It was just as though a drunken man got up in a public meeting in New York and made some equally foolish and profane remark. And it is just as fair to the bolsheviki in Russia to say that they contemplated such an immoral program as it would be to say that America was planning such a policy, basing your statement on the utterance of the drunken man in the New York meeting.

On the contrary, the one thing most respected under the bolshevik government is the morality of women. Women not only have equal rights with men, but they are actually in the government service on equal terms with the men. Petrograd is a much more moral city today than it was at any time during the government of the czar.

Women Go Alone Unhurt.

The girl typewriter in the office of a government minister is treated as an equal, not merely as an employé. Of course, he has his duties and she has hers, but the former social and financial gulf between the minister and stenographer does not exist. Many women are commissioners, and the wives of men who are commissioners have certain authority to act in the absence of their husbands.

I have walked the streets of Petrograd, going to and from concerts to which I was sent to play for the people, and I was never once insulted. The man who would insult a woman would pay dearly for it if caught.

OMSK IS TAKEN BY BOLSHEVIKI, MOSCOW CLAIMS

Kolchak Flees East as Trotzky Army Advances.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—Omsk, capital of the All-Russian government, has been occupied by the Russian bolsheviki, a Moscow official communique received here today asserts.

The eastern coast of the Black sea from Yelenzhik to Sochy has been seized by an insurgent army of 70,000 men operating in the rear of the force of Gen. Denikine, the antibolshevik leader on the southwest Russian front, according to a wireless dispatch from Moscow. Soviets have been formed, the dispatch adds.

The insurgents captured Maripol, 140 miles southeast of Yekaterinoslav; Berdiansk, 45 miles southwest of Mariopol, and Alexandrovsk, 50 miles south of Yekaterinoslav. Gen. Denikine has allotted troops to suppress the rising.

The Kolchak forces, the statement adds, are retreating in an easterly direction.

CLAIMS 12,000 RED PRISONERS.

HELSINGFORS, Nov. 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—In the course of the recent offensive by Gen. Yudenitch his forces captured 12,000 bolsheviki, according to a northwestern army report today.

The report also declares that 6,000 casualties were suffered by the bolsheviki. It is reported here that all the bolshevik commissioners engaged in the campaign have been executed.

The statement announces that the defense is being continued successfully around Pskov and Ostrov.

TWO ARE HELD AS WITNESSES IN HATCHET MURDER

Lynbrook, L. I., Nov. 15.—[Special.]—Held as material witnesses tonight, Capt. Henry Wright and Mrs. Maria Warren await the result of further investigation of the murder of Mrs. Clara Branch at Valleystream, Friday. Mrs. Warren was a boarder at the Wright home, where Mrs. Branch was housekeeper.

Wright says he found Mrs. Branch dead in her bedroom on the second floor when he returned from a fishing trip Friday evening. She had been slain with a hatchet and the weapon was left in the room.

Mrs. Warren said she left the house early Friday morning to visit friends in Manhattan and did not learn of the murder until she read about it in the newspapers.

Detectives said $51 was found near the body and jewelry in the bedroom had not been taken.

Make Tentative Plans for Adjournment of Congress

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—Tentative plans for sine die adjournment of congress were made today by senate and house Republican leaders.

By resolution it is proposed the house shall adjourn upon passage of the pending railroad bill—expected next week—and the senate upon disposition of the peace treaty.

The resolution would give each body authority to adjourn independently of the other any time between now and Dec. 1. The resolution went over.

GET RUSS TRADE OR GERMANY WILL SOLDIER WARNS

Says American Capital Should Give Credit to Northern Area.

A three-cornered commercial marathon, with the trade of northern Russia as the stake, is under way, with England, Germany, and the United States as the participants.

Unless American capitalists have a sudden change of heart, America will lose out and the victory will go to Germany.

These statements were made by Lieut. C. J. Primm of Manitowoc, Wis., who arrived in Chicago yesterday direct from Archangel. He was the last American soldier to leave the Archangel military district.

"Russ Need Everything."

"Northern Russia needs everything," he declared. "Sugar, clothing, canned goods, agricultural implements, and other materials are necessary. In exchange it has huge stores of furs, flax, lumber, and frozen fish. The Russians there have no money except the paper which is used locally as a commercial medium of exchange. They need credit, therefore.

"While I was in New York I found American capital still demanding dollars or dollar credits for supplies before they left American docks. That will never gain trade friendship from the Russians.

Halls Miller as a Force.

"Governor General Miller, now in control at Archangel, probably will establish a stable government.

"Bolshevism? The actual working out of bolshevism is an entirely different thing from the parlor theories of which we hear so much. The best thing America could have done months ago was to send enough troops into Russia to wipe out the Reds."

POLICEMEN SAY 'DRY' DAYS RUIN TRADE OF JAILS

Population of the Poorhouse Cut in Half This Year.

BY EYE WITNESS.

It's like this. when your majesty says, "Let a thing be done," it's as good as done—practically it IS done—because your majesty's will is law. Your majesty says, "Kill a gentleman," and a gentleman is told off to be killed. Consequently that gentleman is as good as dead—practically he IS dead—and, if he is dead, why not say so?
—"THE MIKADO."

You can assemble in perfect good faith all the statistics there are in the archives on the thus-far effects of prohibition and somebody will find in them a flaw as big as a manhole. The policemen down at the Second precinct station will tell you that at 11 o'clock on a recent night they had three men in the cells; the night before that, three, and the night before that, one. They used to average 100 drunks and disorderlies nightly.

That sounds convincing.

But those who refuse to accept such figures as meaning anything put their case thus: The police are confronted with the fact that by edict there is supposed to be no liquor for the wholesale creation of drunks and disorderlies. Hence there must be no considerable number of arrests of drunks and disorderlies. Otherwise the authorities would be proved derelict to the duty of suppressing the sale of liquor by edict forbidden. Ergo, no arrests mean no liquor only by the processes of Ko-Ko's ratiocination as italicized above.

"For What They Are Worth."

But so readily to gainsay all the figures given out compels the premise that every official is either a faithless servant camouflaging his derelictions or constitutionally and spontaneously a liar, and there would be something more than nature in such a view of humankind. Perhaps, then, the safest way to submit the figures and statements given herewith is to submit them with the comprehensive phrase with which editors sometimes protect themselves—namely: "for what they are worth."

To the question "How's business?" the people at the Second precinct station (more or less the old Harrison street ballwick) responded with a cheerful "All shot to pieces!" Then came the statement about the drop from the old nightly average of 100 in the cells to the present average of three. It was also declared that the old "1 a. m. cleanup" does not amount to anything anymore. This function used to be known as "moppin' 'em up," and it was messy. It consisted in gathering in the waifs and strays of revelry from streets and doorways after they had been turned out of saloons at 1 o'clock, and bundling them into cells to await the austere dawn and the expeditious judge.

Few Calls for Patrol Wagon.

There is little mopping now, and the officers say the patrol wagon and the ambulance are "very seldom called for." One of them added—it was on a recent evening—"In the old days, we used to have from 50 to 75 sailors and lumber jacks coming in for a night's lodging every night at this time of the year. This month there hasn't been one up to now.

Figures given out at the bridewell by guards and matrons, who averred that they "couldn't explain them, except it was prohibition," were equally striking. Last Thursday they had 600 inmates in that prison. The former average at this time of the year was 2,100. The cells hold 2,300. The south wing of the institution is now closed. On Nov. 1, this year, the number of inmates was 676. In the next seven days there was a decrease of about 76. To go further back, in September, Norval P. Boynton went out there to hold a service for the women prisoners, and instead of the usual 300 attendants on the service, only between 40 and 50 showed up. "Where's the rest of the congregation?" the good man asked a matron. She said nearly all the women in detention were present and as for the others not now incarcerated, she added, "I can't account for it except that they can't get the whisky that used to bring them here."

Poor Farm Population Cut in Half.

At the county poor farm the statement was made that at this time of the year the normal number of inmates was 4,200. Last Sunday there were 2,861. The explanation given was "no liquor," and the social workers who analyze statistics pointed out the fact that ordinarily the tendency of figures collected at eleemosynary institutions in metropolitan centers is to show an increase rather than a decrease.

In the Cincinnati workhouse there were, on Oct. 6, 1918, 161 men and 54 women; on the 6th of last October there were 50 men and 3 women. Arrests in Cincinnati last July were 984. Going back three years—to get a condition maintaining before our entry into war—the arrests in Cincinnati in July, 1916, were 2,413.

A Policeman's Views.

Asked, one evening last week, what he thought of prohibition, a policeman at Madison street bridge, Chicago, replied, "It's fine! I hope it will stay. There used to be forty drunks—or sixty, maybe—crossing Madison street bridge every night. Last night one, night before one, night before that, not any."

A patrolman doing his Clark street bit offered this:

"The old barrel house district is just as quiet and clean and respectable now as any place in the loop. It's easier to handle cases. I'm not afraid of getting shot now. A sober man in a row is not so likely to shoot. If a man has firearms on him and is half shot his revolver goes off d-a-a-m quick."

EAR OF CORN YARD LONG TO BE SEEN AT LIVE STOCK SHOW

Upward of 8,000 pure bred cattle, horses, sheep, and swine will be on exhibition at the International Live Stock exposition, International amphitheater and adjacent buildings, Nov. 29 to Dec. 6, according to an announcement made by Manager B. H. Heide. This is 800 animals more than were exhibited on any previous occasion.

Manager Heide has arranged to have a miniature farm at the exhibition, showing the entire layout of a successful farm, indicating the number of cattle, horses, sheep, and swine an average corn belt farm can profitably carry.

An interesting attraction at the corn and grain show, which will be held in connection with the live stock exposition, will be the "international ear." This giant ear of corn measures 37 inches long, 30 inches in circumference, has 82 rows, with 225 kernels to the row, making a total of 18,450 kernels.

W. C. T. U. ORGY IS PROGRAM NIGHT NATION GOES DRY

"Watch" Services, Bell Ringing, Singing Doxology, Plan.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 15.—Plans for a nation-wide "victory celebration" when constitutional prohibition goes into effect next January were authorized today at the forty-fifth annual convention of the National Women's Christian Temperance union.

The celebration will start on Sunday, Jan. 11, 1920, when special temperance services will be held in churches throughout the country. On the night of Jan. 15 there will be "watch night" services in the churches at midnight, and Jan. 16 will be ushered in with the ringing of church bells, the singing of the Doxology by all W. C. T. U. members, and the day will be set aside for prayers.

Victory Dinner Is Held.

With the exception of adopting the celebration report and hearing the address of the president, Miss Anna A. Gordon of Evanston, Ill., the convention confined itself to organizing and hearing the report of its officers.

The initial sessions program was completed with a victory dinner, at which a number of speakers were heard, almost all of whom touched on the prohibition question.

Tomorrow thirty-one women members of the W. C. T. U. will occupy pulpits in as many St. Louis churches.

Miss Gordon in her address before the conference urged that the union continue to fight alcohol medicines and tonics and discourage the use of alcohol as a therapeutic agent. In the opinion of scientists, she said, "medicine has reached a period when alcohol has been displaced by better medicines."

Will Make Dry Tour of World.

Miss Gordon announced that next spring she will start on a tour of the world to spread prohibition sentiment in every civilized country.

In order to further the work of national and world-wide prohibition she urged that $1,000,000 be raised by next March and that every county and every community be organized for the W. C. T. U. so that it may have a membership of 1,000,000 by 1924.

THE COLD FACTS

It didn't seem very cold in Chicago yesterday morning, but somebody had left the lake out all night, and it got a frozen edge. Early in the day the ice was so firm at the foot of Grace street that a boy skated on it. Later, when the sun got in its work, the ice wilted a bit, but it was still serviceable for sliding and sleigh-riding and "rubbericing." The water is shallow at this point, and the children didn't care much whether the ice broke or not.

NARROW ESCAPE OF LEVIATHAN IS FINALLY BARED

New York, Nov. 15.—[Special.]—Ernest H. B. Anderson of the Parsons Steamship Turbine company, who put the Leviathian, formerly the Vaterland, into sea condition when it was taken over from the Germans, has revealed how the great transport narrowly escaped disaster in the Hudson.

"The Leviathan pulled out of its Hoboken berth in 1917," he said. "The engines were propelling astern and the vessel backed clear across the river. Why, nobody knows to this day, but it was impossible to stop the engines. It was stopped by a mud slip between two Manhattan wharves. If it had struck them there would have been a terrific smash. A lighter or two and another small craft were splintered and a couple of men were killed."

William H. MacKay, chief engineer, said the lighting system was out of commission, and no maps or charts could be found to the location of the intricate machinery and pipe system. The vessel was twenty-seven feet in the mud.

SCOTLAND TO BID WHISKY GOOD-BY, PUSSYFOOT SAYS

Yankee Dry Crusader in Britain Uses His Nickname as "Ad."

BY GEORGE H. SELDES.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
(Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.)

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Prohibition campaigning, American style, will make the world go dry. Scotland will be first, Ireland next, then will follow other parts of the British empire, and finally continental Europe will imitate the United States. It will take many years, but the great international battle against booze has begun and is taking trenches.

So says W. E. Johnson, known from John o'Groats to Land's End and around Dublin way as "Pussyfoot" Johnson. He is the mild mannered American anti saloon leader who has given little old and merrie old England a bigger fright than anything since the war. He is recovering from the severe handling given him by students the other day.

Fresh from Glasgow.

"Pussyfoot" talked happily about his campaign in Glasgow. He caught himself laughing in the middle of his first sentence, and hastened to explain why.

"PUSSYFOOT" JOHNSON

"Those canny Scots," he said, "everywhere I went, they asked me to reconcile my views with that of their national poet. You know it was Burns who said 'freedom and whisky gang thegither.'

"Scotland? I think she'll be first on the new water wagon. We're concentrating there because under an act of parliament the people were granted an opportunity to vote on local option next June. We've met with a great response. In Glasgow Mrs. Lloyd George presided and in Edinburgh the Earl of Aberdeen. Thousands attended the meetings, and there were overflows. And, mind you, these people were paying 35 cents each to hear prohibition preached.

Sinn Feiners Not Wets.

"And Ireland. I've been to Dublin, too. I was told that the Sinn Fein was a wet movement. Not a bit of it. I've talked to the leaders and to the men in the ranks, and I find that a good majority favor local option or total prohibition. And it's the same thing with the Nationalist leaders and men.

"In Wales Mr. William George, brother of the prime minister, presided at one of my meetings. It was a great success. In Manchester I held a conference with 160 labor leaders.

"But the movement's bigger than Britain. I've just been invited to attend the Esthonian anti-alcohol congress in Reval. The Esthonian constitution is being prepared, and it is hoped that there will be a prohibition amendment in it."

The funniest part of the campaign has been the appearance of another speaker, claiming to be American, who answers to the name of Wilkes Barr. The latter is an apostle of strong drink, mild drink, any drink containing alcohol. He usually follows "Pussyfoot" by a day. In a recent speech he delivered himself as follows:

"The beer drinking peoples of the earth are the handsomest, the cleverest, and the bravest. The intellect of the world reigns supreme where wine, whisky, and beer flows freely.

"Beer is a masterpiece for warming the cockles of the heart. Beer made a man think."

All the literature used in the British isles is American, the most part coming from Westerville, O., which is also Mr. Johnson's home. The other speakers from the States include Miss Mary Balcomb of the Young People's Civic league, Chicago, and Miss Margaret Wintringer of Evanston, Ill.

RAIDERS SEIZE LIQUOR IN FOUR DETROIT HOMES

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 15.—Opening the campaign against violators of the Volstead prohibition enforcement act, federal authorities, assisted by police, late last night seized 1,000 quarts of liquor and four stills and arrested sixteen men here. The liquor was taken from four residences and a near-beer saloon.

Appeals New York Case.

New York, Nov. 15.—Steps for an appeal to the United States Supreme court from the decision of Judge Learned Hand in refusing to restrain enforcement of the Volstead prohibition act were taken today by the new firm of Elihu Root, counsel for Jacob Ruppert, a brewer.

The Supreme court will be asked to expedite the case and an associate of Root expressed hope of a decision in two weeks.

Dr. Leon Burgiss, 46 years old, of 747 Belden avenue died last night in Washington Boulevard hospital from injuries sustained in an automobile accident at Sacramento boulevard and Colorado avenue the night of Nov. 3.

Dr. Burgiss was married, but had no children. Death was caused by a fractured skull.

William Hogan, 1016 North Central Park avenue, riding a motorcycle at Thirteenth and Laflin streets last night, was struck by a hurrying automobile and seriously injured. He was taken to the Presbyterian hospital. The auto didn't stop.

Woman Hurls Moonshine Jug at "Revenuer's" Head

A gallon jug of moonshine was hurled at the head of Frank Barnoski, a revenue agent, during a government raid yesterday on the saloon of Jacob Janc, 8909 Green Bay avenue.

General Deputy J. J. Hennessey led a squad composed of Barnoski, John Harris, and Michael Torpy in the raid, which netted two arrests and the capture of two illicit stills. The stills, it was found, were operated in Janc's home over the saloon and their product sold over his bar. Jacob was out when the agents arrived. They disarmed his bartender, Joe Parento, and climbed the stairs to find Mrs. Janc guarding the contraband. She hurled a jug at the invaders and, when it missed its mark reached for the remainder of the moonshine ammunition. She was overpowered and the contraband brought into the federal building together with the two prisoners.

LADY ASTOR WINS IN WALK, AIDS TELL HER

Holds Baby While Mother Votes in Race for Commons Seat.

BY GEORGE SELDES.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919.]

PLYMOUTH, England, Nov. 15.—Like the triumphal procession of a returning hero from wars, or of a presidential visit in friendly lands, was Lady Astor's progress through Plymouth this morning. Urged by her smiles and beckoning fingers the electorate went to the polls early, and by noon her henchmen were bringing reports that the voting was two to one in her favor.

Cheered, but not over elated, Lady Astor accompanied by Lord Astor continued her tour this afternoon, answering cheers and salutes from soldiers, sailors, and policemen and the waving of banners with shouts and handshakes. Thus one woman's lightning-like personality has made a spectacular holiday of what is usually a dreary by-election.

"In a Walk-over."

"Good old Nancy, you're in a walk-over," and similar expressions brought joy to Lady Astor, but she was still afraid that toward evening working men and wives would go to the polls together and vote a straight labor ticket. She is confident she has demolished the Liberal party opposition, but not sure about labor, although when asked where she was going in an open carriage full of flowers, she replied merrily: "I'm going to the labor party's funeral." Toward evening she said she believed she had won.

Lord Astor himself did not vote. Entry into the peerage disfranchises Britons, but his was so recent it did not effect the Plymouth registry.

"But I don't think it fair, so I won't vote, as much as I would like the pleasure of helping our Nancy," Lord Astor said.

Lady Astor Holds Baby.

The Astor coachman, a jovial, red faced fellow, resembling the traditional picture of John Bull, voted ahead of Lady Astor, his being the first vote recorded. As Lady Astor arrived in one of the poorer precincts a woman with a baby and basket came along. "Who will hold my baby?" she asked, looking about.

Then Lady Astor solved one of the questions which frequently is asked in American woman suffrage fights. "I'll hold the baby," she said. "It is not bribery or corruption for a candidate to do that."

Not far from a stone marking the departure of the Mayflower Lady Astor encountered a woman outside her home flaunting a labor placard.

"You will vote for me, though," Lady Astor called.

"I'm sorry, but I've got to stick by my class, your ladyship," the woman replied.

"Well, be sure you exercise a woman's right to vote," Lady Astor retorted.

Meets Rival Candidate.

One black stain on the day's happiness for the Astors was at Victoria wharves, where a sudden turn by the coachman brought them among a crowd of fifty workmen out for lunch. Catching sight of her gay carriage, they began hooting, making motions of trampling some one underfoot and turning their thumbs down. Lady Astor stopped, and was about to address them, when the labor candidate, William Gay, her only real opponent, arrived in a taxicab. Immediately the dockers shouted him a greeting, and yelled, "Down with the idle rich!"

The Astors strategically retreated.

On the fish wharves it was a different tale. Getting out of her carriage, Lady Astor shook the greasy, bloody hands of the slatternly fishwives, and the gnarled hands of the fishermen, who cheered her loud and long.

"Hats off for the best woman in Plymouth," one shouted, and the reply was unanimous.

Charwomen waved their brooms, street cleaners tipped their hats, girls waved a Union Jack, women waved their babies, and the whole city, excepting hardfaced members of the Labor party, joined in wishing Nancy Astor "godspeed for parliament."

Results Known Nov. 28.

All three candidates in the parliamentary campaign stated after the polls closed at 8 o'clock tonight that they believed they had won, but must wait until Nov. 28 before the result is announced.

Lady Astor believed she had won by a majority of 5,000. The Laborites claimed the election for their candidate, W. S. Gay, by 4,000. The Liberals thought Isaac Foot a winner, alleging numerous Conservatives did not vote for Lady Astor on account of her sex and American birth and also that a certain element among the Laborites switched because of Mr. Gay's espousal of the extremist policy.

French Cite Pershing for Great Service to Allies

PARIS, Nov. 15.—Gen. Pershing is cited in the following "Order of the Army," printed in the Official Journal:

"Gen. Pershing, as commander-in-chief of the American forces, displayed most distinguished qualities as an organizer and chief. He never ceased during decisive operations to bring aid to the allied cause by his energetic and highly developed cooperation."

Charles Beck of the 126th American infantry regiment also is cited. He captured ten machine guns and killed or took prisoner fifteen of the enemy.

BATTLE OF TALK CLOSES BERLIN'S INQUEST ON WAR

Helfferich Balks and Is Fined; Inquiry Chief, Enraged, Quits.

BERLIN, Nov. 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—Dr. Karl Helfferich former German vice chancellor, appearing as a witness again today at the inquiry of the subcommittee of the national assembly, was fined 300 marks for refusing to answer a question submitted by Deputy Cohen.

Dr. Helfferich said he never had answered a direct question from Cohen and would not. The deputies imposed the fine, Herr Wermuth, president of the committee, disagreeing and relinquishing his seat. He was replaced by Deputy Gothein. Then the public session was suspended amid great excitement.

Lansing Note Discussed.

At a previous session, with Dr. Helfferich as a witness, the subcommittee took up the note of Secretary of State Lansing which was alleged to have proposed that if the German submarines would confine themselves to cruiser warfare merchant ships would no longer be armed.

Dr. Helfferich declared that if these propositions had been carried out the result would have been the concluding of peace in 1916.

A Victim of Suspicion.

"I gained the conviction, however," said Dr. Helfferich, "that Secretary Lansing and President Wilson were not always intimately cooperating. After the dispatch of the Lansing note President Wilson's English friends attempted to counteract it by reviving the Lusitania incident. We suddenly found ourselves compelled to admit the illegality of the sinking of the Lusitania, as otherwise a casus belli would have been given.

"My opinion in the Lusitania matter was purposely dragged forth in this connection to justify withdrawal of the American note.

"I am firmly convinced that the United States kept the Lusitania matter in abeyance in order to use it as a handy pretext at any moment.

"If President Wilson had stood squarely on the principle of Secretary Lansing's note at that time the lives of millions of people would have been saved."

Dr. Helfferich summed up his carefully prepared detailed statement of the submarine campaign with the remark:

"The U-boat weapon failed because it was put out of commission from within. It was hoped to make it decisive before the United States could participate actively in the war."

NO PARADES, IS ENGLISH EDICT AGAINST IRISH

[By Special Correspondence.]
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

DUBLIN, Oct. 28.—Conditions under which members of the Royal Irish constabulary may grant permits for public meetings in Ireland, outlined in a list of instructions regarding the enforcement of the secret and crime special order a copy of which has been obtained by the Sinn Fein secret service, provide, among other things, that there be no marching under orders or with leaders, no display of "seditious emblems," the admisson of the police gratis, and the prohibition of all disloyal language.

The instructions mention that the order need not be construed so as to interfere with bona fide entertainment, but that it does apply to "sports, athletic meetings, aeridheacts, feisanna, etc." The order applies to processions as well as public meetings, and is signed by J. A. Byrne, inspector general, Royal Irish constabulary.

The wood in this suite was at one time held by the Government as selected material for the finest gun stocks. The end of the war released this stock of splendidly seasoned material and you now see it worked into handsome dining room furniture and offered at a price that should add to your reasons for Thanksgiving.

Superlative praise will not add to this unusual bargain. Come in and see it; buy it if you like it; have it delivered, use it, then determine if you want to part with it. HUGE SHIPMENT OF RESCUE SUGAR ON WAY TO CITY

Relief Supply from West to End 'Famine'; To Be Sold at 13 Cents.

Forty-five million pounds of beet sugar is on its way from Colorado and other western refineries to relieve the shortage in the middle west. The first of the relief supply should reach Chicago tomorrow for distribution at the new maximum retail price of 13 cents per pound.

Maj. A. A. Sprague, chairman of the federal price regulation committee, announced the coming of the "rescue" shipment yesterday, following receipt of telegrams which stated that fifty cars of sugar a day had been started last week and would be pushed along until the sugar famine in this district is at an end.

"With this shipment—the promised supply that has been delayed for various reasons during the last month—sugar prices in Chicago should come down and reach a stable point," said Maj. Sprague. "The supply is coming over the Colorado Southern and Union Pacific railroads, and we have assurances it will be a rush shipment.

For Entire Middle West.

"Of course, not all of the supply will come here. It is for distribution to the entire middle west, and Chicago will receive only its allotted share, but that will at least allay the present shortage and give every one concerned something to work on.

"The maximum fair price of 13 cents, set by District Attorney Clyne in anticipation of the Washington ruling that wholesale sugar shall bring no more than 10½ cents anywhere in the country, is a reasonable retail figure for Chicago. The official price dead line will be set just as soon as the department of justice in Washington sends its official order to the committee."

Expect Lower Prices.

Belief that the new beet sugar supply will tend to force Chicago prices down was general. Maj. Sprague pointed out that the main cause for soaring sugar prices has been the excessive costs of Louisiana sugar, which has come into the Chicago market against the rulings of the sugar board.

"This sugar was too high because excessive prices had been paid to the southern grower," remarked the major, "but with the beet sugar supply tapped here, no one will need to buy the southern product."

Assail "Profiteers."

Meantime Chicago housewives protest that while the fair price committee and the district attorney's office have been threatening to jail profiteers some dealers have been openly gouging the public to the limit.

Scores of complaints reached the federal building yesterday following the first announcement of 13 cent sugar. Evidence of at least one violation was presented. Special Agent Wallace entered the grocery of Herman Goldsmith at 1113 Webster avenue and "listened in" while he saw the wife of the proprietor sell a customer a pound of sugar for 18 cents on condition that the customer buy a pound of rice with the order. Both purchases were seized as exhibits and prosecution was promised.

Other housewives complained they had to pay from 14 to 25 cents a pound in their neighborhoods and then in many cases could get the necessity only through purchasing other goods.

Railroads operating into the beet sugar districts have agreed to give sugar and grain priority over other freight traffic and deny that any serious shortage of cars exists on their lines. Until the supply begins arriving this week, and the department of justice officially announces its price ruling to the Chicago committee, little can be done, officials say, to aid the situation.

Where Sugar's More Than a Sweet Memory

"SUGAR TO BURN"

Who said there was a sugar shortage?

Here's a picture of one of the show windows at the Hackett Candy company at 829-31 East Thirty-ninth street, and in the storerooms in the rear are thousands of pounds more of snowy sweets.

"I had a big supply on hand and I got a lot more," said R. Hackett, the proprietor, yesterday. "Every one who buys 50 cents worth of candy or canned goods is entitled to buy a pound of sugar. I'm selling the sugar at 13½ cents a pound. Yesterday it was 12½ cents, but I have to follow the market. Business? Rushing, thank you."

Federal officials visited the store to find whether there was any violation of law. They told Hackett to go ahead with his sale, he says.

Russell J. Poole, city food director, made several purchases at the store at 9 o'clock last night, then ordered Hackett to appear before him tomorrow morning.

"I found Hackett would sell six pounds to a customer buying $2.50 worth of canned goods," said Mr. Poole, "or two pounds to a customer buying a pound of candy at $1.25 a pound. I have some of this candy. A dollar and a quarter, it seems to me, is a pretty steep price. I'm going to make a thorough investigation."

IRISH SOLDIERS LEAD IN POLICE CANDIDATE LIST

Irish ex-soldiers predominated among 500 candidates for stars and clubs who appeared yesterday at the Waller High school to take the mental tests to become policemen.

More than 430 applicants who had passed the physical tests did not appear for the mental examination when they learned that under the state law the ex-soldiers will be given a ten point preference.

The candidates were required to answer questions concerning street numbering and the location of important buildings, and to tell what they would do as policemen in various emergencies.

Socialists Fear Mobs Will Goosestep 'Em Into a Jam

BERLIN, Nov. 15., via London.—Three massmeetings have been called for tomorrow by the majority socialists to "rouse the police from their sleep." It is declared an attempt is being made to use the presence of Field Marshal von Hindenburg as a "fire on which the German national soup can be brought to a boil."

Demonstrations, chiefly by students, cheered Von Hindenburg and Ludendorff yesterday and raised cries of "Hoch" for former Emperor William and the old empire.

OPTIMISTS PUSH BIG ENTERPRISES IN NEW GERMANY

Two Huge Theaters Under Way and Cash Available for More.

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.
[Copyright: 1919.]

BERLIN, Nov. 13.—[Via Copenhagen.]—Despite the pessimistic view of many business men and politicians regarding Germany's future there are numerous capitalists, German and foreign, especially Swiss and Dutch, who firmly believe in Germany's speedy revival and are willing to back their optimism with hard cash. It is surprising how many new theatrical enterprises on a much grander style than anything known here are planned or already building.

For instance, Prof. Reinhardt's new theater containing five thousand seats, costing many million marks, which are principally furnished by foreign capitalists believing Berlin will become the center of continental Europe.

Tamini Backs Big House.

Greater even than Reinhardt's is Otto Tamini's new operatic enterprise, which is to present comic opera. The corner of Friedrichstrasse and Wiedendahm, the site of the Hotel Belvedere and several other adjacent buildings, have been already purchased. This immense plot situated close to the new Friedrichstrasse railway station will be covered by a monumental theatrical building, which it is proposed shall be named the International Opera house.

Otto Tamini, the tenor, who is well known in America, is the soul of this enterprise and has already invested a large part of his fortune. The house will be built on the plans of the Metropolitan Opera house, only larger, containing a roof garden, restaurants, ballroom and exhibition halls.

$3,000,000 Is Needed.

Tamini, who personally supervises the whole scheme, is determined that all his vast theatrical experience gained in the principal houses of the whole world shall be employed to advantage. It will have German and Italian opera, the Russian ballet, French and American vaudeville, classical dancing, etc.

The enterprise will require 15,000,000 marks, more than half of which has been subscribed in Switzerland and Holland. Most of the German subscribers are Prussian junkers and south German noblemen.

BASE 3 R'S ON 10 COMMANDMENTS IN ANTI-RED DRIVE

8 Wisconsin Colleges Aim at Root of Radicalism; Explain Fund Quest.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

The Ten Commandments were officially adopted as a platform yesterday by the Wisconsin Colleges Associated, Moses, 3,500 years in his tomb, was evoked in a movement to uproot from collegiate faculties any tendencies toward ultra-radicalism, a fight against "academic reds" of all hues and shades, from the lip stick scarlets to the manicure parlor pinks.

Eight college presidents signed the platform. They represent varied affiliations, denominational and undenominational, Catholic and Protestant.

These educators avow that to combat "the menace of law defying Socialism and anarchism," the great need is to ground America's student body in the old fashioned principles of morality.

Speaking for their colleges, which have a student body of 6,500, they declare it shall be obligatory for every professor, instructor, and tutor to avoid teaching anything which does not conform to the ten commandments. Thus, the decalogue is to be recognized as the basis of the curricula.

"Broad Enough for All."

So far as the promoters of the idea have knowledge, it is the first time such concerted action has been taken. They rather expect it may cause quite a stir in educational circles over the old dictum of "freedom of thought." The platform sets forth that the real question is "academic freedom" as against "academic license."

"The great need," said one college president, "is to stop the teaching of half-baked theories and doctrines to boys and girls at their impressionable age. Catholic and Protestant, Jew and Gentile, accept the ten commandments, so our platform is broad enough for all."

Menace in Some Teachings.

The educators say the tablets of stone are being cracked in several places by the tendency of thought among part of the teaching force in America's higher institutions of learning.

The first commandment, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me," they declare is being opposed by a materialistic attitude on the part of some professors.

Guarded classroom preachments on the allurements of communism, they say, are in conflict with "Thou shalt not covet."

"Thou shalt not steal" is challenged by syndicalism, which is not without exponents in the colleges.

"Thou shalt not kill," they maintain, is opposed by the attitude of some teachers in medical schools on "the right of the unborn child to live."

Some "advanced" teachings, they affirm, tend to weaken "Honor thy father and thy mother," and to destroy belief in the family as a basic unit of society.

Text of Platform.

The platform reads as follows:

"The undersigned presidents of the Wisconsin Colleges Associated have agreed upon the following platform, which has reference to the students and to the teachers in these institutions.

"It shall be obligatory to ground all students thoroughly in the fundamental principles of morality in order that the reign of law may be promoted in individual and family lives and the perpetuity of our nation, with its democratic form of government, so dear to the heart of every American patriot, made secure.

"It shall be obligatory for every professor to respect the moral law and to avoid teaching anything that is opposed to the Ten Commandments, which are an expression of the moral law, to which all right thinking men, irrespective of creed, must subscribe in order that academic freedom may not degenrate into academic license.

"It is believed that, if this platform is carried out, sane, safe and conscientious leaders, well balanced morally as well as mentally, will be developed to combat the menace of law defying socialism and anarchism, and to solve the problem of industrial unrest."

State's Teachers Defended.

The platform bears the signatures of the following college presidents:

Dr. Melvin A. Brannon, Beloit.
Dr. J. D. Brownell, Northland.
Dr. Henry C. Culbertson, Ripon.
Dr. William C. Daland, Milton.
The Rev. Albert C. Fox, Campion.
Dr. Herbert P. Houghton, Carroll.
The Rev. H. C. Noonan, Marquette.
Dr. Samuel Plantz, Lawrence.

Although Wisconsin is known as one of the hotbeds of socialism, as witness, among things, the 100,000 votes given Victor Berger when he ran for senator two years ago, the college presidents declare that the teaching forces in the Badger state are not as touched with radicalism as in some other commonwealths.

Why Funds Are Sought.

Education is the natural antiseptic for the epidemic of "isms," and to turn out straight thinking men and women, the colleges are making a concerted drive to raise $5,000,000, a million a year for five years, to get more equipment and to provide increased salaries.

At present, most college professors get less pay than a hodcarrier or an ash can wrestler. Of the eight college presidents on the list, one gets only $1,200 a year, while his janitor draws $1,000. Another president is paid $1,300. In the smaller colleges on the list the average pay of professors is placed between $1,000 and $1,200. In the larger, it is about $1,800.

"We've got to get back to the teaching of fundamental morality," said Judge John P. McGoorty, of the Chicago committee of the Wisconsin colleges, Associated. "We've got to pay more attention to the spiritual side of education, and to instruction in the principles of government and the general well-being of society.

United for First Time.

"This is the first occasion in this country that schools representing such different denominations and affiliations have ever united in a common enterprise.

"The most important need is to increase salaries. The average pay of teachers in these colleges after all their years of preparation is less than the wages paid to milkmen in our cities. Every college man looks back upon certain teachers whose influence made a lasting impression and influence upon his life. But today young men of right caliber are not going into the teaching profession because of the small salaries, and if we want strong, able teachers for the next generation we must pay salaries big enough for them to support their families in self-respecting style."

"This," said Dr. Culbertson of Ripon college, "is the first time such a platform has been put forth, and it will attract much attention in the educational world. We are simply putting into words the things we have always stood for. The colleges are recognized bulwarks against dangerous tendencies, but to keep up the colleges we must safeguard them against the inroads of half-baked ideas. Adequate salaries are a first essential."

A SOLDIER; HIS PICTURE; A GIRL; WEDDING BELLS

Through her best girl friend, Miss Hazel Canepa of Oak Park has won a soldier husband.

Miss Canepa was visiting in Milwaukee, the home of the girl friend—and of one Joseph La Mure. The girl friend had Joseph's picture and Miss Canepa admired it. The friend suggested that she write to Joseph, then in training for overseas duty. When Miss Canepa returned home the memory of that picture remained with her and she did write to Joseph. He immediately replied, asking for her picture. He received it the day before he went overseas with the 151st infantry machine gun company and he carried it over with him. The correspondence continued. She sent him candy and knitted him a sweater. He called her his "fairy godmother."

HAZEL CANEPA
PAGUERRE PHOTO

Joseph came back last June, after a year in France. Miss Canepa kept the agreement to meet him at the train. Each knew the other from the pictures—and a few days later Miss Canepa was wearing a solitaire. They will be married New Year's and will live in Milwaukee.

Miss Canepa is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Canepa of 431 South Taylor avenue, Oak Park.

PRINCIPALS VOTE TO DRIVE "REDS" OUT OF SCHOOLS

Resolutions Aim at Teachers as Well as Pupils.

Principals of Chicago high and grade schools gathered in conference yesterday in the Mallers building to discuss the systematic "innoculation" treatment which is being resorted to by heads of the board of education in halting the spread of bolshevik germs in local educational institutions.

Two Resolutions Passed.

Two resolutions were passed during the session which aim directly at the "Red" evil. The text follows:

"Resolved: That the Chicago Principals' club deplores the spirit of bolshevism existing to a more or less serious exten., not only among the pupils, but also the educational force of the schools.

"Resolved, that the club heartily approves of the effort being made to eradicate this un-American spirit even to the extent of removing such individuals from the schools."

Praise for Bartholf.

William J. Bartholf, principal of the Crane junior college and technical high school, was unanimously commended for his action in recently suspending two students at the junior college for manifesting unpatriotic ideals.

The principals voted to investigate an attack which was made by Negroes last June on Edward McLaughlin, principal of the Dewey school. McLaughlin was said to have been beaten by adult blacks because of their misunderstanding on the treatment which Negro pupils were said to have received. A committee was appointed to determine whether to resort to legal action.

Child Falls Into Washtub and Scalds Cause Death

Mrs. Mary Klucznik was washing clothes yesterday and put her baby boy, Roman, 2½ years old, in a high chair near the tub so she could attend to his wants. While she was out of the room he fell into the tub of scalding water, from the effects of which he died.

HE TOOK ALL THE BEDCLOTHES; SHE SEEKS A DIVORCE

It was a cold night in November, 1915. Walter Louis Herman and Mrs. Gladys Herman lay side by side in their humble bed, complaining of the lack of width of the blankets which failed to protect them from the bitter wind.

Presently an argument arose, to quote the language of a bill for divorce filed in the Superior court yesterday by Mrs. Herman, "over their respective equities in the bedclothes of their conjugal couch, in the course of which he succeeded in wresting from your oratrix and retaining some 98 per cent of said covering and choked and struck her in so doing."

Another incident complained of by Mrs. Herman was on June 5 last, when she assisted her husband with advice in the purchase of a pair of shoes.

While on the street there was dispute as to the merits of the bootgear, during which Herman is said to have removed the newly purchased shoes and flung them at his wife, striking and choking her. Their separation followed immediately.

Herman is an inspector for the Indiana Harbor Belt Line.

FIND TUTTLE BOY; WAS 'BORROWED,' NOT 'KIDNAPED'

But Mother, in Poverty, Still Denies Giving Him to Woman.

The woman who "kidnaped" 3 year old Milo Tuttle returned to Mrs. Tuttle's tenement flat at 2449 South State street last night to give the boy back to his mother. But the mother was not there. She and her little brood were taken to the Home for the Friendless during the afternoon by the police when they discovered the misery of their condition.

Now it turns out that Milo was not kidnaped at all—only borrowed. Mrs. Peter Liberty, 2357 North Seeley avenue, who took the child, explained to the police that she had obtained Mrs. Tuttle's permission to mother it for a few days.

To Restore Child Today.

When she brought the boy back yesterday she learned for the first time that she was being sought throughout Chicago as a kidnaper.

After a conversation with Capt. Mullin of the Cottage Grove avenue station she was allowed to go away with the child on her promise to restore it to the mother this morning.

The theory that Mrs. Tutle voluntarily gave the child to the woman she accused of kidnaping it is the one the police have worked on from the start.

Mother in Unhappy Plight.

The mother, however, still denies she gave it to any one, and is substantiated in her story by her 14 year old daughter, Marguerite, who told the police Mrs. Liberty threatened her and carried the baby away in the absence of the mother.

Apart from a mother's love, Mrs. Tuttle had many reasons for giving the child another home. She has been in Chicago since the death of her husband in October. Her job as waitress in a lunch room paid her $9 a week. Her rent was $12 a month. And she had four children besides Milo.

NEEDS FRIEND

Baby Saved by Dr. Haiselden Alone in World.

"Bobbie" Raymond Thompson.

OUT at the German-American hospital in Diversey parkway there's a little fellow who needs a friend. His name's Raymond Thompson and he's 18 months old and his world's a hospital room. The late Dr. Harry J. Haiselden, who once let a baby die because it was born a hopeless imbecile, also gave Raymond life.

Raymond has been at the hospital since a year ago last September. His mother brought him in one day a weak little white bundle suffering from malnutrition. They thought that day that he wouldn't live two hours, but Dr. Haiselden got busy with him at once and he pulled through.

As he grew slowly into a strong and husky little chap his mother came to see him once or twice—and then suddenly the visits ceased. Since then Miss Beulah Freed, superintendent of nurses, and her staff have been mothering the boy.

"I have learned since that the mother died during the flu epidemic last year," said Miss Freed. "I understand also that the flu carried away several little sisters or brothers. The father, I guess, doesn't want the little chap; he's never come for him."

His Work Begins and Ends with Answering Doorbell

J. Hanley admitted he was a dutiful husband when questioned yesterday in the Court of Domestic Relations by Judge Sheridan E. Fry.

Didn't he answer the front door bell now and then and—but that was all he could think of. He did other things, but they had slipped his mind.

Mrs. Hanley, who lives at 383 Washington boulevard, said she worked to keep the pantry full.

Although Hanley said his skull was injured a year ago when he was a railroad engineer and he couldn't do heavy work any more Dr. William J. Hickson said light work wouldn't hurt Hanley. In a week he is to tell Judge Fry what work he is doing or take his punishment.

President of the L. and N. Cited in Contempt Case

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 15.—Milton H. Smith, president of the Louisville and Nashville railroad company and widely known in railroad circles, today was cited to appear in chancery court here next week and show cause why punishment should not be meted out for contempt of court.

The action grew out of the execution of a deed of assignment for certain Louisville property in the possession of a holding company of which Mr. Smith is an officer, after the court of minor interests had ordered its sale and distribution of its assets.

The chief stockholder in the holding organization is the Louisville and Nashville railroad company with an interest said to aggregate $3,000,000.

Toledo, Walking City, May Get Back Its Street Cars

Toledo, O., Nov. 15.—Valuation of the Toledo Railways and Light company street car property is being made under direction of a special commissioner appointed by Mayor Cornell Schreiber.

Drafting two ordinances, which are to be submitted first to the council and then to the voters, was begun today. The company agrees to bring the cars back from Michigan when the council passes these ordinances if assurance of support at the election to follow is given.

One of the ordinances provides for municipal ownership and the other for a franchise based on the Tayler plan, now operative in Cleveland.

COMPOSER FLEES BULL OF HIS NEW BERLIN OPERA

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable. [Copyright: 1919.]

BERLIN, Nov. 14.—[Delayed.]—Mittag prints the following extraordinary letter by the composer Eugen d'Albert, whose opera, "The Bull of Olivera," was produced at the state opera in Berlin for the first time last night:

"Sir, after the first act of my opera I fled from the house. I could not possibly countenance such an awful misrepresentation of my work. Please publish these lines."

Prof. Max von Schilling, director of the state opera, is exasperated at D'Albert's action because the latter after the first act expressed his sincerest thanks for the splendid performance, only criticizing mildly Herr Bohnen's representation of the principal part, the bull.

Bohnen, who is regarded as having great talent, explained that he was somewhat hoarse, but besides he regarded the music D'Albert wrote for the bull, otherwise Gen. Guillaume, who kills his runaway wife in a fit of jealousy, too ladylike, and that is why he pronounced rather than sang the wrathful words with which he accompanied the execution.

Chambers never was in prison, though his court appeals were decided against him. If not pardoned he was to go to prison Nov. 22.

STRIKE ON UNTIL MEN GET MILLS —FITZPATRICK

"They'll Stick Until Gary Is Americanized and Industry Broke."

John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor and chairman of the steel strike committee, made the following statement to newspaper reporters here yesterday:

"Three hundred thousand striking steel workers are standing back to back in this fight and will remain out until the steel industry is bankrupt and Mr. Gary is 'Americanized.'

"They are going to stay out until the steel trust is broke and then they are going to run the mills themselves. They are in this fight to a finish.

"It's all bunk about the men going back to work in those mills. They are still standing firmly in this fight and are determined to win. The mills are not making steel, but they are making a lot of smoke."

That "Soviet Stuff."

"We understood that you wanted shorter hours, more money, and a lot of other things for the men. How are you going to get them by putting the steels mills in bankruptcy?" a reporter asked him.

"They will get that when they take the mills over, so that will be all right," said Fitzpatrick.

"How are those foreigners going to run those mills?" he was asked.

"They will run them all right when the steel trust is bankrupt and Mr. Gary is 'Americanized'," he replied.

"You have changed your stand and some of this soviet stuff is taking the place of the original plans, is it not?" he was asked.

"Well, the workers are going to stay out until the mills are bankrupt, and then run them themselves," said Fitzpatrick.

"What are you feeding the workers on now—the ten pounds of potatoes and the other things on the list given them?" was the next question.

Double Strike Food.

"We have doubled that amount and they are getting about twice as much as they ever had for themselves before," he said.

"If we were to call off the strike in the morning, just about 30 per cent of the workers would return to work. Numbers have left the country, never to come back, while others have gone into other work to stay until the fight is won."

He Should Worry.

He exhibited a check for $542 made out to him "for organization expenses" and signed by Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor.

He indorsed it and gave it to Secretary Ed Nockels of the Chicago Federation, saying: "I don't care what you do with it. Give it to some of the funds—the Labor party or the New Majority."

Nockels waved it about, declaring perhaps reporters were not aware of the fact Fitzpatrick "was on the pay roll of the A. F. of L."

Fitzpatrick then said he was thinking of buying his wife a sealskin coat. As an organizer for the A. F. of L. he is allowed $8 a day and expenses. His salary as president of the Chicago federation is $75 a week.

Mexico Opens Drive to Keep Reds from Country

Mexico City, Nov. 15.—In connection with charges that red propaganda is going into the United States by way of Mexico, it is known here that the government has been aware that radicals of various sorts have intended to include Mexico in their field of operations.

Officials in all ports of entry have been ordered to increase their vigilance against the entry of these undesirables.

Newspaper reports recently said a group of 130 radicals, expelled from the United States and Argentina, were expected at Tampico and Vera Cruz, and precautions to bar them were taken.

CONVICT FACES MURDER CHARGE.

Anslino Nalasco, serving a sentence of fourteen years on a charge of assault with intent to kill Mrs. Pasquale Messina, 1014 Vernon place, on May 26, 1918, was brought from Joliet yesterday to attend the inquest following Mrs. Messina's death Friday at the Oak Forest infirmary. The coroner's jury recommended that he be held to the grand jury on a charge of murder. The bullet entered the woman's spine, causing tuberculosis.

DR. S. P. LONG WILL ADDRESS DOWNTOWN LUTHERAN SERVICE

BY THE REV. F. L. GRATIOT.

The Lutherans of Chicago start today a series of thirty downtown religious services on Sunday afternoons. They will be held at 4 o'clock in the Studebaker theater, 410 South Michigan boulevard.

THE REV SIMON PETER LONG, D.D.

The preacher will be the Rev. Simon Peter Long, D. D., whose subject this afternoon will be "Our Dear Mother." Dr. Long started life as a plowboy, and his varied experience and ready wit have won for him a wide reputation as a platform preacher. Last year he traveled more than 3,200 miles and filled 185 speaking engagements.

These meetings are being financed by thirty Lutheran laymen who conceived the idea of providing a downtown service of this sort, not only for Chicago Lutherans and others but for transients at the downtown hotels.

ROW BETWEEN LABOR HERE AND A. F. OF L. LOOMS

Action may be taken at a meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor this afternoon which may involve that body in a row and possibly a split with the American Federation of Labor. The cause is a dispute between the International Butchers' union and the Stockyards Labor council as to who has jurisdiction over eight butchers' unions in the stockyards.

John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation, has been backing the council in their fight and he in turn has the backing of the federation. Therefore, if the federation and Fitzpatrick decide that the council has the jurisdiction, the row is on and the split looms.

Dennis Lane, secretary and treasurer of the international, has demanded that the federation unseat delegates from the eight butchers' unions. The A. F. of L. ordered the federation to abide by his request.

It is said that the international union became jealous of the action of the stockyards council in staging strikes last summer and started a council of its own. Of thirty-six butcher unions in the stockyards council twenty-eight withdrew and joined the new one, while the other eight had their charters revoked for refusing to join it.

Fitzpatrick organized the stockyards workers in 1917. At present there are 20,000 workers in the eight unions remaining to comprise his organization.

U. S. IS TRYING TO HANDCUFF LABOR, GOMPERS AVERS

Warns Government It Is Driving Men to—He Doesn't Know What.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—[Special.]—Warning that the federal government is provoking and inviting trouble by its attitude towards labor, Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, today issued the following statement:

"The government is going to lengths it never dared go before.

"Not only does it seek by injunction to prevent the performance of certain acts on the part of the working people—a thing we have seen before—but now by mandatory order, it actually commands men to go out and do certain things, something never before heard of in this country.

"Handcuffs on Labor."

"In other words, the government of the United States is deliberately putting handcuffs on the wrists of American workers and driving them into involuntary servitude.

"There is great unrest in the land. Instead of doing something to decrease it, the government, by its acts, is aiding it.

"Unless there is a change of policy it will lead to—I do not know what.

"From the very first the American Federation of Labor has followed a genuinely constructive policy for the betterment of the conditions of the laboring classes of the country.

Patriotism Never Questioned.

"Our patriotism and loyalty has never been in dispute. Before the war, more than three weeks prior to the day President Wilson read his denunciation of the Germans, the American Federation of Labor publicly announced that it would stand with the government in the event of war. And the workers of America kept their word.

"But now, after the war is over, we find that there is not only no more freedom than before the war but that the freedom that we enjoyed then is actually being taken from us.

"We find the government using its power against one side and in favor of another."

Blast Vault in Cleveland; Get $10,000 Bonds, Cash

Cleveland, O., Nov. 15.—More than $10,000 was stolen this morning when safe blowers wrecked the vault in the offices of E. F. Hauserman & Co. They got $7,000 in Liberty bonds, $3,500 in cash and $300 in stamps.

WORKERS FORCE $100 WEEK PAY, BUILDERS SAY

Declare Union Men Won't Work Unless Given Overtime.

Chicago building contractors complain they are still having trouble with union workers in the building trades, despite raising all wages to $1 an hour recently. The November issue of the Building Construction Employers' association monthly bulletin charges that the trades ignore the agreement and refuse to work unless paid more than the scale of $1 an hour.

It also declares that the men refuse to work unless the contractors let them work Saturday afternoons and on Sundays, paying them at the rate of double time, which is $2 an hour.

Agreements Are Ignored.

"Notwithstanding the fact that the wages of practically all building trades mechanics were increased to $1 an hour recently in the city of Chicago, some of the trades continue to ignore their respective trade agreements and are refusing to work for contractors unless they pay them more than the scale of wages agreed on," says one article.

"Several meetings have been held in the rooms of the association in regard to paying men more than the scale of wages agreed upon and also in connection with the demands of the men that contractors work on Saturday afternoon and Sundays, paying, of course, double time for work done on those days.

Forced to Pay Overtime.

"The effect has been that the contractor who did not work on Saturday and Sunday was unable to get men on his job until he signified his willingness to work the overtime demanded. A scarcity of mechanics in the building line makes such practices possible.

"Many contractors who have taken work at specific figures are in a condition bordering on financial ruin by reason of the unjust demands made upon them by their employés. Many more contractors, better able perhaps to stand the pressure, are confronted with increased costs of doing work, amounting to in some instances a small fortune."

Average $100 a Week.

Contractors who refused to allow their names to be used told a TRIBUNE reporter last night that the men are averaging $100 a week or more at their trades by reason of the overtime, not only on Saturday afternoons and Sundays, but on week days.

"They don't care anything about an eight hour day and a holiday Saturday afternoon and Sunday, but are holding us for all they can get," one of them said.

It was learned last night that the union men are commencing to take care of their hard working business agents by raising their salaries. The Plumbers' association, local No. 130, has boosted the salaries of William A. Curran, Patrick J. Kane, James Cobb, business agents, from $50 to $100 a week.

REGULARS LEAVE GARY TO GUARD DYNAMITE PLANT

Veterans of the 4th division on strike duty in the steel district evacuated, Gary, Ind., yesterday and moved to Ætna, three miles distant, where they established a close guard over three huge powder magazines.

The move was ordered by Col. William S. Mapes, following thefts of dynamite from the Ætna plant. The thefts are laid to radicals.

The seven "red" agitators picked up by department of justice agents in Chicago in their first raid upon Union of Russia members in Chicago, were given a hearing by immigration authorities yesterday. They were held under $10,000 bonds each following the hearing, and the testimony sent to Secretary of Labor Wilson. It is expected that he will order immediate deportation for the prisoners.

The steel strike in Indiana Harbor will cost Lake county taxpayers $15,000 for the hire of special deputy sheriffs. The county board will meet in special session next Friday to make the appropriation.

The Gary steel strike will cost the taxpayers between $15,000 and $18,000 to pay for the special policemen.

STORM ABATES; HUNT MISSING LAKE STEAMERS

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Nov. 15.—The storm that for three days whipped the waters of Lake Superior into an almost unnavigable sea, sent to destruction at least one ore carrier, and caused fears for the safety of two others, subsided this forenoon.

With the abating of the gale it was expected more thorough search of the south shore could be made for the steamer John Owens, overdue here, and the carrier Griffin, unheard from since it left Ashland, Wis., last Monday night.

None of the ships locking through the canals here up to noon today reported having sighted either the Owens or the Griffin.

D. R. Forgan Wants Full Production to Beat H. C. L.

Racine, Wis., Nov. 15.—David R. Forgan, president of the National City bank of Chicago, before the Commercial club, predicted a solution of the H. C. L., "just as soon as production in other countries becomes normal." He predicted that the nation would enjoy years of wonderful prosperity.

HUSBANDS MORE PRECIOUS THAN MANY RUBIES!

Intelligent Speaker Points Out Just What Gems We Men Really Are.

"Girls, the first thing you must do is get a good husband. You'll never be happy until you do. You will have a long, hard search, too, but get one and get a good one."

That is the advice given sixty-five members of the United States Training corps for women who attended a luncheon yesterday afternoon in the Stevens building. The adviser was Dr. Lena Sadler.

"If you haven't already a good husband get rid of him and get a regular one. You might think you know of happiness, but you'll be surprised.

"Of course you're going to have a hard time finding one. There are only three good husbands in the world, and my husband is all of 'em. But keep looking—get one—keep him—then you'll find some happiness."

Her husband is Dr. W. S. Sadler.

Robertson and Smoke Again.

Of course the entire luncheon was not devoted to the husband question. Ah, no!

Dr. John Dill Robertson, public health commissioner, was there. Is it necessary to say that the doctor talked of smoke, its dangers and disadvantages?

Dr. Robertson talked for thirty-five minutes and won sixty-five women to the anti-smoke crusade. He explained that no chimney has a legal right to pour forth black smoke for more than six minutes on a stretch. He explained that disease is caused by smoke. He pointed out the harm smoke wrought to beauty.

The Girls All Agree.

The sixty-five members of the training corps got up and gave nine open cheers for the doctor, pledged themselves to the cause, and were each appointed a committee of one to fight the evil. Dr. Robertson departed well satisfied.

Dr. Julia Holmes Smith, Chicago's oldest woman doctor, asserted that "it is a beautiful life" and that she was glad to be a member of the organization.

The members voted that the outdoor life is the only life, and made plans for a camp next year. It will be remembered that they camped on the eastern shore of Lake Michigan for two weeks last August. And they all agreed with Dr. Lena Sadler about the "good husband" question.

Watch your step, you men.

Argentine Factions "Treat 'Em Rough" in Congress

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 15.—During the special session called Nov. 4 debates have been bitter and sometimes spectators in the galleries hurled missiles at the deputies and created other disturbances, for which the police ejected them.

A motion by a conservative member for impeachment of President Irigoyen was one of the features. The conservatives denounced as unconstitutional the action by President Irigoyen removing the governors and other officials of two provinces on the grounds of maladministration.

Gone but Not Forgotten, Roumanians Quit Budapest

BUDAPEST, Nov. 15.—Evacuation by the Roumanian troops was completed last night. Admiral Horthy's Hungarian troops received an ovation this morning upon entering the city, now controlled by the municipal guard, under Col. Yates, U. S. A.

Admiral Horthy recently told coal miners that if full production was not effected immediately the mines would be placed under army control and then socialized.

STAGE FOLK WHO AIDED WAR CAUSE NOW SEEK HELP

For the first time in four years, Chicago is to have a "drive" without a quota. The Actors' Memorial day campaign, to be held Dec. 5, has set no definite amount to be asked for the fund which cares for aged, infirm, and destitute members of the theatrical profession.

Each of the twelve "legitimate" theaters and the two higher priced vaudeville houses will hold special matinées Dec. 5, tickets to which will be allotted to subscribers to the fund. Each theater is in charge of a special committee of society women, business men, and stage folk. Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank being chairman of the sales organization and Mrs. Edward T. Swift vice chairman.

Tomorrow all actresses in the city will start to obtain contributions, and will continue until the memorial day celebration.

"This is Chicago's only opportunity to repay the theatrical world for its services during the war drives," said Mrs. Fairbank. "The theatrical managers and the players never refused a request. The theaters were taxed and disrupted, but they never hesitated to permit speakers and collectors to interrupt performances to solicit patrons. The actors must be aided in their worthy charities."

The business committee in charge of the general drive is headed by Charles W. Folds and is composed of Samuel Insull, J. Ogden Armour, George M. Reynolds, Cyrus McCormick, R. T. Crane Jr., Gen. Leonard Wood, Senator Medill McCormick, and Mayor Thompson.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

On Nov. 10 a TRIBUNE headline said, "Robbers Steal $11,000 While Alarm Rings." The Chicago Electric Protective company writes that the headline caused confusion among its customers. The company letter says:

"Mr. Enhorn (the man robbed) has a local burglar alarm connected with a bell on the outside of the building. He has no central office connection and, therefore, we are blamed for something we are not responsible for."

Lawrence Gilchrist, 28 West Ontario street, said yesterday incorrect statements had been published concerning him. He said he had not claimed to be a dramatic critic, although he found pleasure in writing, and said an institution in which his child lived was not a charitable one, but that he paid for the child's maintenance there. The statements were furnished to THE TRIBUNE by the City News Bureau.

Refuses to Stay Sentence on 11 Condemned Negroes

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 15.—Declaring that he would not be swayed by outside influence in regard to the death sentences passed on eleven Negroes for participation in the recent Phillips county race rebellion, Gov. Brough today decided to ignore the telegram from M. M. Trotter, secretary of the National Equal Rights league, requesting executive interference in the cases. The governor said that inasmuch as he had been on the ground during the troubles he was sure that the Negroes deserved electrocution.

Make Your Money In Chicago

By Wm. H. Britigan

THE organization which I control is built around the most fundamental of principles—one as old as the human race.

That principle is this: That real estate is the most valuable security that you can put back of any investment because those who control the land are the masters of the world's destiny.

From the beginning of the human race the occupation of land split the tribes of the earth, made wars, divided empires and gave to us the romantic history of the Period Before Christ. The conquest of Gaul by Caesar was a campaign for the domination of more land. The Wars of the Middle Ages were again national or tribal efforts of men for the conquest or ownership of more lands.

In our own history we find this same human desire coloring each page. And in the building of every great American city we find that those pioneers who planned the city and obtained the best land founded for themselves fortunes that have continued to increase with each year of that city's growth.

The conditions growing out of the great European War have made Chicago pre-eminently the most important food producing city in the world. It is likewise because of its geographical position becoming rapidly the center of the steel producing industry and other allied industries. During the last twelve months it has become an important center of the clothing industry and a great domestic market for buyers.

Our transient population today is ten times that of 1914. Our annual growth in population today is 300% greater than in 1914. Therefore, those who predict a population of ten million for Chicago within the next twenty years have considerable ground for their claims. In addition to the features above mentioned are the following:

Chicago is the biggest inland city in the world.
Chicago is taking on population faster than any inland city in the world, and is therefore growing more rapidly in proportion.
Chicago controls basic wealth—wheat, corn, oats, live stock, coal, iron ore, copper, timber, and other raw products.
At Chicago rail and navigable water meet. This is a characteristic possessed by no other big inland city in the world.

The story of Chicago real estate is identical with the story of its growth in population and commercial importance. It is conservative to say that there have been tens of thousands of very substantial fortunes made out of the growth of this city. Now that values are stabilized by the conservative but mighty development of Chicago's resources and industrial facilities, it is important for every one of us who has money to invest to study Chicago just as we study the stock market or the security back of a first mortgage bond.

The Wm. H. Britigan Organization has been compiling for many months voluminous data on Chicago and the Chicago territory tributary to this great city. Not alone have we been compiling this data but we have been checking the gradual growth of population, both transient and permanent, the growth of industry and the indicated increases in the purchasing power of this city from every possible angle. The results of our study and analysis after the compilation of these facts we will give to the public and give it freely, NOT FOR THE PURPOSE OF INDUCING YOU TO BUY BRITIGAN REAL ESTATE, BUT BECAUSE WE BELIEVE IT WILL HELP YOU—AND BY HELPING YOU HELP US EVENTUALLY.

We have in preparation a booklet which is the result of our analysis of this city and its future. If you want one of these booklets make your request by postcard or letter and we will send you a copy FREE as soon as it is off the press. Ask for a copy of

FOND GOOD-BY TO 'OTHER WOMAN' IS HELLO TO GRIEF

Two Homes Disrupted as Wife Sees All; One Pair Reconciled.

BY LEOLA ALLARD.

If only George Black hadn't told Mrs. Black that the government did not allow the wives of soldiers to go to the train and bid them bood-by—but he did tell her, and Mrs. Black is blessed with extraordinary intuition. She says it led her straight to the railroad station, where she found her George bidding Mrs. Loretta Walsh a fond farewell.

That was the beginning of the trouble which led the Blacks and the Thomas Walshes to the Court of Domestic Relations.

Mrs. Black, who asked for support, told about the good-by at the station and about finding a letter signed "Loretta Walsh" in Mr. Black's pocket when he sent some clothes home.

Despite these trifles Mrs. Walsh filed a bill for divorce on Oct. 29, charging cruelty and asking for support. And now Thomas Walsh, her husband, through his attorney, former Judge Kearns, has filed a cross bill naming not only Mr. Black but also Thomas Flynn, "Jimmy," and seven cabarets as the cause of his domestic unhappiness.

Helped Him Evade Draft?

He asks the custody of his 7 year old daughter Lucile and says he wishes it understood that he never was cruel to Loretta. He calls her divorce bill "adding insult to injury."

Mr. Walsh charges that Loretta falsely signed the questionnaire of Mr. Black, through which he was granted exemption. Mrs. Black, Walsh says, found this out and instituted proceedings on June 1, 1918, by which the questionnaire was cancelled and Black drafted into the army.

"While I was in the army," says Mr. Walsh, "my wife received my allotment. She also received money from Black, then in France."

He says it was in November, 1917, that Mrs. Walsh became fond of Mrs. Black's husband.

"She told me she was going to divorce me and Mr. Black was going to divorce his wife, and then they would marry," he declared.

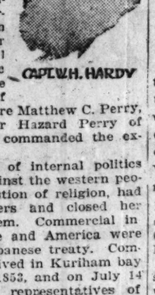
Names Two "Other Men."

"That didn't follow as she planned, because in 1918 she became infatuated with a man she called 'Jimmy,' and when he criticized her she stabbed him. She also visited the Campbell Gardens saloon with one Isaacson, now in Joliet prison."

Mrs. Walsh lives at 626 South Oakley boulevard. Mr. Walsh is employed by the Chicago Telephone company. He was a member of the 111th engineers, went to France on March 7, 1918, and returned last June.

Mr. and Mrs. Black are said to have been reconciled.

LAST SURVIVOR OF PERRY TRIP TO JAPAN BURIED



CAPT. W. H. HARDY

The burial last Monday of Capt. W. H. Hardy recalls the famous expedition to Japan in 1853. He was last survivor and was 84 years of age. Last summer he was one of the attractions at the Methodist Centenary exposition at Columbus, O.

President Fillmore in 1852 ordered a squadron of American war ships to sail across the Pacific and pry open the hermit nation of Japan. Commodore Matthew C. Perry, brother of Oliver Hazard Perry of Lake Erie fame, commanded the expedition.

Japan, because of internal politics and prejudice against the western peoples and the question of religion, had excluded foreigners and closed her gates against them. Commercial interests of Europe and America were anxious for a Japanese treaty. Commodore Perry arrived in Kuriham bay of Yedo July 7, 1853, and on July 14 delivered to the reppesentatives of Shogun (the emperor) a letter declaring the nature of his mission.

The Japanese asking for time for deliberation, the squadron went to China, and returned in February, 1854. A treaty with Japan was concluded, in which it was agreed to receive an American consul at one of their ports. A treaty with Great Britain followed soon thereafter. Thus Japan was opened to the commerce of the world.

Capt. Hardy was decorated a few months ago by the present emperor of Japan, and was styled "the little grandfather of Japan."

FINGER PRINTS TRAP NEGRO IN DOUBLE MURDER

William Yancey Mills, a Negro suspected of the murders of Antonio Brizzolara, a fruit dealer at 334 South Wells street, and Isadore Gansky, a tailor at 178 West Van Buren street, who has been brought to Chicago from Philadelphia by Capt. Morgan Collins, was questioned yesterday by aids of the state's attorney.

Capt. Collins said he expected Mills to confess the double murder. Mills has intimated, the captain said, that he had a statement to make, but declared he expected immunity if he told all he knew about the case.

Capt. Collins made public for the first time the manner in which the arrest and identification of Mills was brought about.

The Negro was arrested in Philadelphia when he attempted to steal a woman's purse. His finger prints were taken and copies were sent to cities throughout the east.

A Boston finger print expert noted the similarity between the finger prints sent out by the Philadelphia police and those previously distributed by the Chicago police as those of the slayer.

The Chicago and Philadelphia police were immediately communicated with.

GEN. BLACK RAPS CHICAGO PLANS TO NO APPLAUSE

Speech Before Business Men Is Received in Vast Silence.

Chicago was criticized for failure to take advantage of its opportunities, the Chicago plan for a city beautiful was shaken to pieces, and the trustees of the sanitary district of Chicago decried as money wasters by Maj. Gen. William M. Black, late chief of engineers, U. S. A., and chairman of the port and harbor facilities of the federal government, at a dinner of the Commercial club of Chicago in the Blackstone hotel last night.

Gen. Black prefaced his remarks by saying he did not believe his address would find favor with the members of the club, and his belief was well founded, for the 250 men of affairs of Chicago sat throughout his seventy minute speech without smile or applause, but with frequent glances at one another.

There were present members of the drainage board and Chicago Association of Commerce, bankers, brokers, commercial, industrial, and financial magnates, and members of the professions.

"Acts in Defiance of Law."

Frank O. Wetmore, vice president of the club, presided and introduced Gen. Black. The general said, in part:

"I am going to discuss Chicago problems that have been stored in Washington for some time, and they are disposal of sewage, the Illinois and Mississippi waterway, and the question of harbor space for Chicago.

"Taking up the first topic—in 1910 it was found the Chicago drainage district was taking more water from Lake Michigan than was authorized by the secretary of war. Suit was instituted in the United States court, but a decision has never been handed down in that suit.

"In the meantime the drainage district has gone ahead, as we federal officials deem it, in entire defiance of law and has taken all the water it needed and says it proposes to continue to do so.

"Land Ruined by Bubbly Creek."

"At present the amount actually taken on an average per day is 8,700 cubic feet per second, but if any of you have gone through the Chicago river recently and gone into Bubbly creek and on out to the drainage canal, you have seen that this method of purification is not efficacious and is not doing the work."

Gen. Black said there was much land in Chicago that should be occupied and would be a great asset to the city that is now ruined by Bubbly creek.

"This putrified water," he said, "is now extending down the Illinois river as far as Peoria and will continue to go farther, and the authorities of the drainage commission today, because of this state of affairs, are recognizing that some steps must be taken to remedy the situation, and are preparing to adopt an efficacious method of sewage purification.

"It is apparent, therefore, that the system of purification that was adopted in Chicago is not doing the work Chicago wants to have done, but is doing something that is very injurious in addition thereto. Furthermore, the levels of Lake Michigan have been permanently lowered about one-half a foot. That does not sound like much, but when I tell you that the level of Lakes Erie and Ontario has been correspondingly lowered one-half a foot, and that the vessels carrying freight on the Great Lakes load to the last inch of the navigable depth of twenty-one feet, and that based on the freight rates of 1918 each inch of draft less diminishes the freight receipts by $500,000, you will realize the tremendous effect which this lowering of the lake has on lake-borne commerce.

Big Value of Water Power.

"The utilization of water power is one of the most important questions we have today. It is so important that congress has been struggling for five years to come to an agreement as to how this power shall be allowed to be used, and has now, I believe, reached an agreement so that in a month or more we may expect a water power bill that will make it possible to use this source of energy all over our country.

"Considering the problem from that phase, and comparing the utilizable fall in the drainage canal and Desplaines river and with that at Niagara Falls and with that in the lower St. Lawrence river, with the present diversion of water from Lake Michigan, 95,700 horse power can be developed at Lockport and in the Desplaines river, but in doing so it causes a loss of 324,950 horse power at Niagara and at the St. Lawrence, which at a conservative figure of $40 per horse power means a potential loss annually to the United States of $13,000,000. In other words, Chicago is not purifying her sewage, and what she is doing is very much at the cost of other people.

Points to Other "Leaks."

"There are other leaks here in Chicago. There is one little one you probably have not thought much about, and that is the amount of water you pump from Lake Michigan and for which you pay and are taxed. The amount of water that should be consumed in a city like Chicago is about 100 gallons per inhabitant per day. Chicago is pumping 235 gallons per inhabitant per day, and I hear you are speaking of increasing that amount. All above 100 gallons is simply wasted, and the money spent for that pumping is thrown away.

"This sewage purification is going on in Chicago at the expense of other inadequate as a harbor. The little people and as a result Chicago is receiving acute resentment from all other cities along the lakes.

What Holds Up Waterway.

Gen. Black said the Illinois and Mississippi waterway plan is being held up by the secretary of war and the chief of engineers because the plans submitted to them called for the use of the present volume of water discharged through the drainage canal and because the plans as submitted would cause an intermittent and varying flow in the channel which would render navigation uncertain.

Speaking of harbor facilities, he said:

"The northern end of the Illinois-Mississippi canal is to connect with what is now known as the harbor of Chicago. It has no harbor. The obstructions in the Chicago river as shown in your own report submitted in 1909 show it is impracticable to do business effectively in the Chicago river today with its bridge obstructions, its crookedness, and with the few wharves available. It is utterly stuff that is brought in there is done at an increased cost with a result that instead of lake commerce coming to Chicago as it used to do, it is now going to Milwaukee. Instead of lake commerce increasing with the years and with the growth of Chicago, it is actually decreasing, and will continue to decrease as long as Chicago attempts to have as her only harbor the Chicago river."

Chicago would be better off, Gen. Black said, if the Chicago river was spanned by fixed bridges of a height sufficient to allow barge traffic to pass through, and if the harbor was put at the lakeside of the last bridge and on the water front.

RACINE SCHOOL JANITORS STRIKE.

Racine, Wis., Nov. 15.—Janitor-engineers of eleven public schools went on strike this noon, turning in their keys to indicate that they were through with their jobs. This action, they explained, followed a delay of three months during which were sought a new wage agreement.

MEXICO SENDS FLAT REFUSAL TO U. S. DEMAND

Balks at Reimbursing Consul for Ransom He Gave Bandits.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—[Special.]—The Carranza government has flatly refused to pay the ransom of Americans captured and held for ransome in Mexico.

Correspondence between Washington and Mexico City discloses that Carranza categorically declined to comply with Secretary of State Lansing's demand that the Mexican government rescue American Consular Agent Jenkins from his abductors "even though it be necessary for the Mexican government to pay the ransom demanded."

This rebuff of the administration by Carranza produces new complications in the problem of dealing with the kidnapings of Americans which are becoming almost weekly occurrences.

Reply Made by Mexico.

In replying to Secretary Lansing's demand Hilafio Medina, acting foreign minister of Mexico, said:

"Acting under instruction from the president, I have the honor to assure your excellency that not only in this case, but in any of the others that have unfortunately occurred, or that may occur, the Mexican government has taken, and will take, all measures that may be necessary to guarantee fully the lives and interests of all inhabitants of the country, whether foreigners or nationals, and that this will always be its policy.

Won't Pay Money.

"If, however, it should be claimed, in this or any other case, that the Mexican government should pay any sum by way of ransom, the government would be in the painful necessity of not accepting such a demand, declaring categorically that it will not pay any ransom for Mr. Jenkins, even though it should be proved legally in the investigation now being carried on by the authorities of Puebla that the consul was compelled to pay any sum.

"It is well known no government has ever been called upon to extend its obligation of vigilance and protection so far as to insure them individually to each inhabitant, for such would be impossible.

Would Increase Crimes.

"The willingness of the government to overcome every difficulty by offering to pay these ransoms, far from putting an end to these outrages, would provoke them, by awakening through its liberality ambitions, and would open the doors to fraudulent combinations with certainty of success, it being sufficient that an understanding be arrived at between a foreigner and Mexican wrongdoers, or simply that the latter should devote all their energies to the perpetration of acts such as that of which Mr. Jenkins was a victim.

"The Mexican government cannot lend itself to facilitating these immoral acts, since its first duty is to act within the law and to enforce it. What it is ready to do in this and in any other case is to guarantee to the victims, through the courts, the payment of the damages to which they may be entitled under our penal and civil laws.

Believes Capture Possible.

"Furthermore, this decision is based on precedents which the history of international law records and of which your excellency is well informed. On very rare occasions indeed, and only when special conditions concur which are lacking in the present case, has a government paid a ransom; but no government, including that of the United States, would accept the payment of ransoms as a principle or rule.

"The Mexican government is pursuing the perpetrators of this outrage and believes their capture possible; and in the event of the recovery of the sums which it is said were taken from Mr. Jenkins or of those which may have been paid as ransom your excellency may be sure that they will be forthwith returned to their owner, this being one of the first steps presented in our penal code.

Is Second Rebuff.

"Hoping that the Washington government will recognize the justification with which the Mexican government is proceeding, as well as its entire readiness to reach a friendly settlement of all matters now occupying the attention of the two governments, I have the honor to renew to your excellency the assurances of my high consideration."

NEW SENATOR

Secretary of Treasury Appointed to Virginia Seat Left Vacant by Death.

Carter Glass

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—[Special.]—Carter Glass, secretary of the treasury since Dec. 16, 1918, today was appointed United States senator from Virginia by Gov. Westmoreland Davis and has accepted.

Secretary Glass was named to succeed the late Thomas S. Martin of Virginia, the minority leader of the senate, who died early this week.

The term for which Senator Martin was elected would not have expired until 1925, but before that time the legislature of Virginia will order a special election.

R. C. Leffingwell, assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of the fiscal bureaus, is being mentioned as a possible choice for succession in the treasury.

Flying Vice Admiral Will Renew His Trip to Chicago

Mount Jewett, Pa., Nov. 15.—The Handley-Page machine which started on a nonstop flight from Mineola to Chicago early yesterday and was forced to land near here in the afternoon because of a broken water connection, will resume its flight at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, it was announced tonight. Vice Admiral Mark Kerr and his crew were forced to abandon the resumption of their trip late today owing to darkness.

"LET US ALONE," CARRANZA TELLS U. S. IN MESSAGE

Blames Oil Interests and 28 Invasions of Mexico for Woe.

BY MEXICANA.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 15.—Although Mexico is in the midst of an intensive political campaign for the presidency, the kidnapping of Consul Jenkins and relations with the United States maintain a dominating place in the newspapers.

Mexican authorities believe they are making much progress in their control of the rebel elements. With the possible exception of some parts of Yucatan, southern Mexico, appears to be safe for travel, while in the north the newspapers recount a long trip just completed by President Venustiano Carranza on horseback through the deserts and mountains. He had, of course, a mounted armed escort, but even under those circumstances it has been a long time since any previous president made such a journey.

Carranza Message a Text.

The latest message of the president to the Mexican congress is the text for Mexican politicians in discussions of relations with the United States.

"The United States citizens interested in oil properties in Mexico," the message says in part, "maintain a press campaign in the United States devised to impress the public mind of the country as well as the members of both houses of the necessity of compelling their government to intervene in Mexico in order that our laws be drafted in perfect accordance with their personal interests. That finality, of course, they do not frankly invoke, for they demand intervention on account of an alleged lack of guaranties prevailing in our country, an argument which easily impresses the public mind.

Suggestions from U. S.

"Unfortunately we receive frequent suggestions, more or less vehement, from the United States government whenever we wish to adopt any changes which might purport some damage for the interests of the citizens of that country, such suggestions tending to restrain our liberty of legislation and to impair our right to develop ourselves according to our own judgment.

Enumerates Twenty-eight Invasions.

President Carranza gives a considerable part of his message to an enumeration of specific invasions of Mexican territory. He gives the exact dates and, in most cases, the American commander of the invading troops. The only excuses given for a large part of these invasions, according to the message, were the pursuit of deserters, moonshiners, cattle thieves, and Indians.

The message enumerates twenty-eight invasions of Mexican sovereignty by United States soldiers between May 21, 1873, and Aug. 23, 1919.

Fight Propaganda Stories.

In a modest way, the Mexican Review, published in Mexico City, has undertaken an anti-propaganda campaign in behalf of the Mexican government. It has a column headed "Thou Shalt Not Bear False Witness Against Thy Neighbor." This column says that "It is false that (among other things) an army of German reservists was drilled to invade the United States;

"That practically all the great industrial establishments of the country are in ruins;

"That any petroleum or other property belonging to Americans or other foreigners has been 'confiscated' or that it is proposed to confiscate any;

"That Japanese are acquiring oil lands abandoned or sold by Americans;

"That no one has ever been punished for attacking or killing an American in this country. (Read the long list in the president's message);

"That Mexico will not pay for injuries to, or the violent deaths of, American citizens;

CITY FILES WRIT TO ENFORCE 5 CT. SURFACE FARES

Charge May Be Cut to 6 Cents as Result of Parley Tuesday.

Promises of an early reduction of the 7 cent street car fares came from two angles of the traction situation yesterday.

The city filed a bill for an injunction in the Circuit court to restrain the Chicago surface lines from collecting any fare in excess of the nickel charge provided in the city ordinances, and cited Judge Smith's Sangamon County court decision overruling the 7 cent order of the utilities board to show cause for an injunction.

At almost the same hour that the bill was filed Commissioner James H. Wilkerson of the utilities board summoned all parties to the fare controversy to his office and ordered them to be ready to take up the question of reduction at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Reports to Be Studied.

At that time reports of the surface lines' receipts and expenditures for August, September, and October will be before the board. A study of these reports is expected to result in an order for a 6 cent fare.

The meeting before Commissioner Wilkerson was, outwardly at least, in the nature of a love feast. Attorneys for the companies, the city, the attorney general, and Commissioner Wilkerson declared heartily in favor of expediting the reduction process.

"That the commission proceed immediately with this matter is strongly suggested in the recent opinion of Attorney General Brundage," said Mr. Wilkerson, after quoting from the opinion.

Capitalization Attacked.

"I have directed that a copy of the October report be filed by the companies by noon Monday and that copies be turned over immediately to the city and the attorney general. By Tuesday morning analysis of the figures should be complete, so that we can go ahead immediately."

The bill for 5 cent fares via the injunction route is thirty-six pages in length and signed by Mayor Thompson and Corporation Counsel Ettelson. It challenges the rights of the utilities board to fix carfares at a rate higher than those provided by ordinances. It alleges excessive capitalization of the surface lines and puts the actual value of the property at $69,427,181, as against $193,000,000 put forward by the company.

Would Cancel Ordinances.

The bill prays that the contract ordinances be declared binding and that, in case finds adversely on this point, that the ordinances be canceled in their entirety and that the surface lines be declared "mere tenants at sufferance in said streets," which would leave the door open to Mayor Thompson's "people's ownership and operation scheme." The bill also asks that all excess fares already collected be impounded by the court.

"On information and belief" the bill alleges that officers of the companies have diverted "vast sums" to "improper and illegitimate uses," and that these sums should be returned before an increase of fares should be allowed.

A hearing on the petition will be asked tomorrow.

'Remarkable Improvement,' Dr. Dercum Says of Wilson

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—President Wilson in the last two weeks has made "remarkable improvement," Dr. Francis X. Dercum of Philadelphia told Dr. Grayson today after paying his weekly visit to the White House. The president late yesterday was permitted to sit for a short time on the south portico. He seemed so benefited that Dr. Grayson expects to repeat the treatment.

Some executive business was brought before the president today.

EVIDENCE GIVEN TO SAVE CRONIN ENMESHES AIDS

Lieutenant and Half Dozen Policemen Get in Trouble.

The city civil service commission's drive on the inefficiency in the Warren avenue police district will not end with the trials of Capt. Thomas F. Cronin and four of his aids on charges of winking at vice and gambling on West Madison street.

The testimony of one lieutenant and five or six policemen in behalf of Capt. Cronin has entangled them in the board's net and they will follow their commanding officer before the trial board.

The ignorance of the city ordinances, general police duties and conditions in the Warren avenue district, which the lieutenant and his men displayed in trying to save their captain's bacon, was declared appalling by Percy B. Coffin, president of the commission, at the close of yesterday's session of the Cronin trial.

McWeeny in Peril.

Of the three lieutenants who testified for Capt. Cronin, Patrick D. McWeeny, a brother of former Chief John J. McWeeny, is said to be the officer slated for trial board action. The other lieutenants who testified were William Fitzgerald and Patrick Donohue, but members of the trial board were heard to characterize them as "fairly satisfactory witnesses."

Capt. Cronin, on the witness stand again yesterday, submitted to a cross examination by Assistant Corporation Counsel John Bugee. Twice Capt. Coffin directed him to make direct answers.

James A. Fleming, president of the Eighteenth Ward William Hale Thompson club, was named by Capt. Cronin as one of the "citizens" who told him that some of his policemen were "double crossing" him. Fleming refused to give him the names of the men he accused, Capt. Cronin testified.

Defends Five Hotels.

Capt. Cronin flew squarely in the face of the majority of his own witnesses' testimony when he declared that the Sterling, King Edward, Strand, Florence and Home hotels are not disorderly.

"Do you want the commission to believe that these hotels and such places as Jimmy Murphy's saloon, known as the Bucket of Blood, are not disorderly?" asked Mr. Bugee.

"Yes," said the captain. "It would take the entire force of the station and more too, to keep unmarried couples out of these places."

Much of yesterday's session was taken up with questions concerning a complaint on June 25 by Miss Inez Williams, a school teacher, to Mayor Thompson, concerning all night parties at the home of a Miss Lorraine at 312 South Leavitt street who, Capt. Cronin testified, married Harry Griswold, a deputy internal revenue collector on Oct. 25.

Trial of Detective Sergeants John S. Walsh, John G. Siechter, Edward McCormick and Patrolman Frank Freemuth, suspended with Capt. Cronin, will begin tomorrow morning.

SHE'S HIS BRIDE

It's Their Golden Wedding Day.

Mr. & Mrs. W. J. Moeng

Memories of the days when, as a boy, he shot game on the bank of the Chicago river where the Clark street bridge now spans the stream that flows the other way, of the days when he and his playmates dug Indian bullet souvenirs from the log ramparts of old Fort Dearborn, of the days when State street was a prairie and the north side was a forest—these are the memories that will come trooping back today to Henry Moeng of 621 Wellington avenue.

For this is his golden wedding anniversary and a host of friends will be on hand to help him and Mrs. Moeng celebrate the event. Mr. Moeng was born March 21, 1845, in a house which stood on the site now occupied by the Tacoma building at Madison and La Salle streets. He has lived in Chicago ever since.

He served in the county treasurer's office for twenty-four years. He was town collector of Lake View from 1880 to 1886 when former Sheriff Pease was assessor.

SAYS HE'LL SUE CORT MANAGER FOR HITTING HIM

Arrested, Erwin Denies "Sport" Hermann's Scalping Charge.

It is conceded that U. J. "Sport" Herrmann, manager of the Cort theater, struck Ellsworth Erwin, 525 Fullerton avenue, a ticket speculator—but each has a different tale to tell.

"I was standing half a block away from the theater," said Erwin. "I saw him coming. He had a club. I ran. I asked protection from a policeman. I was taken to the station—on Herrmann's complaint that I was scalping tickets, and I hadn't a ticket in my possession. I was arrested, and while I was in the Central Detail station Herrmann struck me on the temple. The police saw him do it; but they wouldn't let me put a charge of assault against him. I intend to swear out a warrant anyway, and to bring suit for $25,000 through Attorney B. H. Ehrlich. Herrmann has beaten other people before, all small men like myself."

"Erwin was standing in front of the theater," said Herrmann. "I knocked him down with my fist. I don't need a club. He's a scalper, and I don't like scalpers. I always beat them up. I'm going to beat them whenever I see them around my theater. That's my policy."

Cleared of Blame for "Practical Joke" Death

The testimony of Charles Dominick, 2620 West Huron street, convinced a coroner's jury yesterday that he was not directly responsible for the death of Nick Hurta, 2613 West Huron street as a result of a practical joke. Employés of the United States Rubber company placed a compressed air tube against Hurta's body. Dominick testified he had held the nozzle, but some one in another room had turned on high pressure air. No one could identify this man. The jury recommended that Dominick be released.

Paris in Blizzard's Grip; Car Lines, Cabs, Tied Up

PARIS, Nov. 15.—A blizzard struck the Paris region last night. Six to ten inches of snow fell and the storm continued today unabated.

The central markets were practically deserted, surface tramcar and taxicab services were tied up and trains from the provinces were hours late. Some trains from the north were stalled.

All overland telegraphic communication with Spain was interrupted. Lack of coal made matters worse.

PASTOR'S SON, LOST 3 YEARS, IS SOUGHT HERE

Chief of Detectives James L. Mooney has received a letter from the Rev. George T. Ridlom, pastor of a church in West Burton, Me., asking that a search be conducted in Chicago for Magnus W. Ridlom, the minister's son, 21 years old, who has been missing since early in 1916, and who is thought to be in Chicago.

The Rev. Ridlom said that his son left home for Portland, Me., late in 1915, went to New York, and there disappeared.

His mother, according to the Rev. Ridlom, got a letter from him postmarked Chicago, in which the boy said he had changed his name to "George Carter."

"Mrs. Ridlom," wrote the Rev. Mr. Ridlom, "objected to my asking the police to search for him, until I became suspicious that through wrong association he might have become involved in some criminal act."

Chief Mooney also received a letter from the chief of police of Rome, N. Y., asking that an effort be made to find the mother of Private Lester Allen of the Fifth regular regiment, U. S. marines. Private Allen was killed in France, Oct. 3, 1918; and his "buddy," ex-Private Robert Munney, has a message for his mother.

Brooklyn Sheriff Here to Study Our Methods

Peters. He will be shown the machinery of the sheriff's office and conducted through county institutions by Sheriff Peters and Chief Deputy H. C. W. Laubenheimer.

EVEN MOVIE OF FORMER KAISER IS SUPPRESSED

BERLIN, Nov. 15.—Pan-German newspapers have been denouncing the Prussian ministry of the interior for forbidding the production of a motion picture film intended to present the former Emperor William in a favorable way. The film was suppressed on the ground of lack of taste and that it was inartistic.

The newspapers point out that the Prussian government is inconsistent in banning the film concerning the emperor, while at the same time asserting that it is unable to suppress the "explanatory" or "enlightenment" films which have been widely criticized as an undesirable feature of German life since the revolution. The papers declare that suppression of the "Kaiser William film" shows that the government is able to suppress the "explanatory" film, but does not desire to do so.

EVEN CHILDREN ARE "MADE UP" BY THE ENGLISH

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Many English mothers today habitually "make up" their children.

The newspapers are taking the matter up with a view to preventing this burlesquing of childhood.

At a children's dancing class quite recently it was noticed that two out of every three of the little girls present were made up in some way or other. Powder of various tints was most prevalent; several of the children had touches of rouge on their cheeks and lips, while quite a number of pairs of eyebrows had been darkened with a pencil.

These things are being done more and more in everyday life to such an extent that one "beauty doctor" has lately opened a children's room, with special attendants. A well known hair dresser says that he has sufficient regular child clients for artificial hair waving to keep one of his men always busy.

Regular Income to Be Paid Hero Flagman and Victims' Children.

The funds collected for the benefit and relief of John Miller of Glencoe, the railroad crossing watchman who was injured while heroically and in vain trying to save the lives of Mr. and Mrs. William Tanner at a Northwestern grade crossing several weeks ago, have been placed in the hands of the Union Trust company under a trust agreement made between Mr. Miller, Thomas A. Wise, L. Sherman Aldrich, The Tribune company, and the bank. The total of the amount collected is $14 968.69, as follows:

Collected by Thomas A. Wise and associate actors, representing the Chicago Theatrical Managers' association, through a theatrical benefit ..... $ 4.831.14

The Union Trust company undertakes to render its services as a contribution to the fund free of all charges. The generous work of Mr. Wise and his associate actors and the theater managers, and of Mr. Aldrich and the people of the north shore suburbs in building up the fund to proportions which substantially express the public admiration for Mr. Miller's heroic act, is gratefully acknowledged—as is the large hearted assistance of THE TRIBUNE'S readers.

Independent of this fund, it is to be added that the News Index of Evanston raised a fund of approximately $1,200, which was used to pay the mortgage on the Miller home in Glencoe.

Tanner Fund Also in Trust.

With the coöperation of the generous company of actors under the leadership of Thomas A. Wise THE TRIBUNE raised a fund of $7,622.62 for the three orphaned children of Mr. and Mrs. William Tanner, victims of the train tragedy near their home in Hubbard Woods.

This fund also has been placed in trust with the Union Trust company, which gives its services without charge. The net income therefrom shall be used for the benefit of Helen, Lyman, and William Tanner, the three children under these terms: "One equal share thereof for each of the said three children shall be paid until such child becomes of age, to the natural guardian, to be applied for the child's best interest, education, comfort, and support. When the youngest surviving child becomes 23 years of age the entire principal held in trust shall be paid in equal shares to the then survivors of said three children."

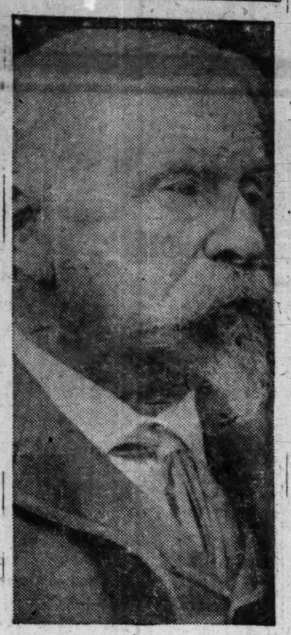
TAKEN BY DEATH

Boston Financial and Business Leader and Patron of the Arts Expires.



MAJ. HENRY L. HIGGINSON.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 15.—The death of Maj. Henry L. Higginson, banker and founder of the Boston Symphony orchestra, was announced today. He died at the Massachusetts general hospital last night after an operation. Had he lived until next Tuesday he would have been 85 years old.

Maj. Higginson has for many years been a prominent figure in the business and financial world. In addition to his leadership in the affairs of his own firm by which it was developed from a comparatively small beginning to one of the great international banking houses, he has been associated with the upbuilding of a number of America's greatest industrial and banking institutions, including the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad, General Electric company, American Telephone and Telegraph company, Calumet and Hecla Mining company, and many others.

Maj. Higginson had a nephew and a niece in Chicago. George Higginson Jr., 1322 Aston street, and Mrs. Barrett Wendell, 850 North Michigan boulevard. They left yesterday for Boston to attend the funeral.

LOWDEN URGES OBSERVANCE OF BIBLE SUNDAY

Gov. Lowden has issued a letter appealing for a wider observance of "Universal Bible Sunday," which is next Sunday.

"If Universal Bible Sunday were universally honored," he writes, "all the troubles which now vex the world would disappear. If the spirit of the Bible were to enter and to hold the hearts of men for a single day, a divine restfulness would succeed the unrest which now menaces civilization. In the presence of eternal verities, strife and discord disappear. Without faith in the fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of man is an idle dream.

"Humanity is about to enter upon the fairest, brightest day it has ever known, or to lose the gains which it, with infinite pains, has made during the Christian centuries which have come and gone. Which it shall be will depend largely upon whether we place our dependence upon the God of our fathers or upon the materialism which now seeks to rule all things."

Mrs. Ware Again Fails to Break Robert Law's Will

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Ware, 4424 Drexel boulevard, yesterday failed for the second time to break the will of her brother, Robert E. Law, late coal dealer, who ignored her in the instrument. A jury before Judge Charles M. Foell in the Superior court, after deliberating for sixteen hours, returned a verdict finding that the instrument, in which the entire $1,500 000 estate was bequeathed to the widow, Mrs. Mary L. Law, was Mr. Law's last will and testament.

MAROONS DOWN HAWKEYES, 9-6

FUMBLE BY YALE WINS 13-6 GAME FOR PRINCETON

Scheerer Scores Marker After Each Drop Kicks Twice.

BY HENRY CROSS.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 15.—[Special.]—After eight long years of patient waiting, Princeton's cup of joy was filled to overflowing this afternoon in the Yale bowl, for the alert Tigers pounced on a loose ball in the final period and went over the Yale line with the unexpected touchdown which broke the deadlock and gave Princeton a glorious 13 to 6 victory.

Added to the list of gridiron heroes of old Nassau along with the Poes and Jim White and De Witt the name of Artie Scheerer. It was Joe who won the game for the Tigers when he recovered the ball after Joe Nevill's latest pass to Kempton went wild. Scheerer plunged his way through the disorganized scramble of Yale players, picked up the truant pigskin, and dashed forty-two yards for a touchdown.

First Victory in Yale Bowl.

Long has Princeton waited for this day. In snatching the game from the hands of Capt. Curtis McGraw's Orange and Black eleven lived up to Princeton tradition. Way back in 1911 Sam White scooped up a fumbled ball and raced down the field to a glorious victory, and that was the last game that Princeton won in New Haven until today.

It was the first time that the Tigers had ever won a game in the bowl, and in the orange glow of the gathering dusk Princeton's mass of undergraduates, together with the host of old grads, forgot the defeats and disappointments of the past as they snake danced madly around the Elis' sunken arena.

Early Game Featureless.

Scheerer's bit of wideawake football was the only one great thrill of a game which for three periods had been devoid of any of the spectacular features of the modern open game. For three periods the Yale and Princeton elevens had played a dull consistent line pounded monotonously against line, as two teams battled on even terms, each trying to outlast the other in their traditional tactics of playing safe.

Up to the time that Scheerer's nerve splitting play woke the 60,000 chilled spectators from their weanying somnolence in the tiers of cold seats which encircled the gridiron, four field goals had brought brief sparks of excitement to the slow, uneventful battle. Each team had twice sent the ball over the goal posts and were tied at 6 to 6.

Tigers First to Score.

Princeton was the first to take advantage of the north wind which blowed through the south goal posts. Kempton, the Tiger quarter back, in the first period, set the Princeton hosts wild with delight by booting a field goal over from the twenty-eight yard mark.

The second period found the teams battling aimlessly against each other with no chance for a score looming up at any time. Yale came back with a encouraging rally in the third period and the true trusty foot of Jim Jordan, first touched the match to a little conflagration of excitement by tying the score with a pretty field goal from the thirty yard line.

While the Yale cohorts were overjoyed at coming up on even terms with the Tigers, they found ample excuse for soar into realms of happiness when in the same period Braden sent the ball out in front by kicking another field goal from the thirty-five yard line.

Brushes Off Tacklers.

Then after a few seconds which seemed hours long there dashed madly out of the mêlee of players an orange and black jersey. Two or three Yale players blocked his path, but he brushed them aside. This Princeton player, like one possessed, waged his way through the malestrom of players. It was Joe Scheerer. At the time no one knew this. Everybody was so upset, both spectators and players, that no one meant nothing. He wiggled and showed along, finally was free, and dashed over the Yale goal line. Kempton kicked the goal and the score was 13 to 6 in Princeton's favor.

Murray Scores Dropkick.

Going into the fourth period it looked like the safe tactics of the Elis were going to bring them victory, but early in the third period the Tigers again marched down within striking distance of the Yale goal line. Frank Murray, who had accomplished toe were called in from the side lines, and standing on the thirty-seven yard mark, he kicked the ball, aided by the north wind which brought the Tigers up on even terms again.

The tying field goal acted like elixir to the Tiger team. After this field goal Carrity kicked off and Campbell sent the ball back to Yale's thirty-yard line. On the first lineup Joe Wylie dropped back and took a long pass. He ran across the field for some gains and Kempton had scooted far down to one side of the wing, where he was free from the Princeton players.

Tiger Tackles Break Through.

Then the Tiger tackles crashed into the Yale to bring him down, he attempt-

ILLINI CATAPULT HUMBLES YOSTS IN 29-7 COMBAT

Urbana, Ill., Nov. 15.—[Special.]—Illinois outclassing the Wolverines, who were humbled as no Wolverine team has been humbled for years, went brilliantly into the finals of the conference championship by defeating Yost's men, 29 to 7.

Michigan's invasion of the state arena after an absence of fifteen years not only resulted in the most crushing reverse that the Wolverines have sustained this season, but their historians were frank to say that not in years, if ever, had there been such a rout for the Maize and Blue. The debacle was so bad that the score, top-heavy as it is, entirely fails to spell the completeness of the undoing of the Yost eleven.

Crowd of 11,000 at Game.

Upwards of 11,000 persons, mostly Illini adherents, were present. The Chicago Rotary club in white toques were prominent in the delegation of 500 Rotarians from all over Illinois to greet their international president, Bert Adams of Atlanta, Ga. Ralph Fletcher, the sterling Illinois back, was injured. Just how badly isn't determined, but the Illini were worried.

"Jack" Crangle, the 195 pound full back, played a whale of a game. His favorite stunt was a feint when he made as if to pass the ball to a fellow back, but instead twisted back and shot at the Wolverine wall which generally crumbled. Once Crangle made two first downs, one after another on this play. He was a first class imitation of a human battering ram.

No Score in First Period.

While Zuppke's fighters did not score during the first period, the play plainly demonstrated the helplessness of the Wolverines and the impending doom, for Eads had to break up a pass on his twenty-two yard line. Early in the second period the huge Crangle hit his stride, and after he had battered his way on two plays for twenty yards the Illini were able to punch their way goalward without recourse to the air. Walquist went over and Ralph Fletcher kicked the goal.

Walquist passed thirty-three yards to Carney. Knode broke up another pass, but Ralph Fletcher place-kicked a goal. Crangle plowed back twenty-five yards from the kickoff and the Illini were going strong when the period ended.

Forward Pass Brings Score.

"Dutch" Sternaman returned to the game for the third period and his sprint took the ball midfield from the kickoff. Soon Cruse fumbled on his twenty-five yard line and Walquist shot a clever pass to Sternaman, who dodged through the Wolverines for twenty yards to the goal. The Illini messed up their puntout.

Charlie Carney received a twenty-five yard pass from Walquist and the veteran Sternaman picked a nice hole and ran twenty yards for his second touchdown.

The fourth period found the Illini nearly an all sub affair and here it was that Howard fumbled to Vick, who made the Wolverine score. Sparks kicked the goal. The Champaign boy soon retrieved himself by a twenty yard sprint that took the ball to the Michigan five yard line. Sadler hustled it to the one yard line, where Lovejoy, who was understudying Bobbie Fletcher, went over. Reichle missed the goal.

In the Wake of the News

THE SYBARITE

The farmer sits in his rocking chair
With his feet in the oven door;
A bottle of homemade wine is there
Beside him on the floor.
His cellar is full of pork and beef
And crowded his bin and rick;
Of all the world he's exempt from grief—
And he used to be called a hick.

The farmer should worry if mines are closed,
He toasts his toes with wood;
The mills may idle if so disposed,
He's fixed, though they shut for good.
The grocer can gouge and the dairy jip
The rest of us as they may,
He raises his own, so let 'er rip—
And he used to be called a jay.

The farmer peddles his grain—that is,
The government does it for him;
In motors he and his children whiz,
No traction troubles bore him.
Lockouts may come, and strikes may go,
But neither makes him a boob;
He's sailing safe in a sea of woe—
And he used to be called a rube!

GUY F. LEE.

Something to Keep Warm.

A well dressed man shimmied shiveringly into Mike Maloney's coffee house, formerly Stillson's bar, and pleaded with George Plant, manager, for a glass of whisky. He knew George had no whisky for him, and so did George. So they compromised on Java.

As they were talking it over a man garbed as a worker came in, ordered a cup of coffee. As he sipped he kept muttering:

"I won't pay it. I won't pay it. Three and a half is too much."

The well dressed man turned and asked:

"Where can you get it?"

"Over on Randolph, but I won't pay $3.50."

"Why," said the w. d. m., "I've paid $8 a quart and glad to get it."

"Say, wotta you talking about?" asked the worker.

"Why, booze,"

"Booze, hell!" responded the worker, "I'm talking about a flannel shirt."

HARLEY'S GOAL TRIMS BADGERS IN 3-0 BATTLE

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Madison, Wis., Nov. 15.—[Special.]—Wisconsin battled the highly touted, unbeaten Ohio State machine to a standstill today and conceded nothing except in the kicking department. That concession was sufficient, the department in which the Badgers were lacking proving enough to bring about their own downfall by 3 to 0. The sole points represent a bit of endeavor by the highly educated toe of "Chick" Harley, the Buckeye prize.

The Badgers should not have lost; neither should they have won. It was just one of those rip-snorting, slambang battles, devoid of thrills, in which the contenders were so evenly balanced on the whole that a tieless score would have done both justice. For the greater part of the battle Wisconsin's Cardinal completely eclipsed the Scarlet and Gray. The fact that the eclipse wasn't total can be attributed only to the lack of a gent who could boot 'em far and high.

Badgers Need a Kicker.

With a real kicker to do the business for Wisconsin, Ohio never would have enjoyed a chance to score—aside from the first period, when Harley attempted a place kick from twenty-five yard mark. The fact that the scoring opportunity dawned can be blamed on Gould. He made a miserably short kick just after Davey had fumbled, but recovered Harley's punt on the eighteen yard mark. That jugg[illegible] of the pigskin meant at least ten yards in Ohio's favor.

The toe of Harley horned into the fray with effectiveness shortly after the fourth period had gotten under way. The Badgers started the quarter with an enforced kick, Gould booting to Ohio's thirty yard mark. Harley returned the punt on the first down, and on this Davey dribbled the oval all over Badger territory before he finally snared it on his eighteen yard mark. Gould immediately kicked, but the pill had all height and no distance, rolling dead on Wisconsin's thirty yard line. A gain of twelve yards on a boot isn't much. Then the fireworks started.

Pass Not Allowed.

Harley went off tackle for a short gain and Ohio then uncorked a triple pass for the first time during the combat. When the Badgers finally figured out what was happening, Bliss had the oval on his opponents' thirteen yard mark. Ohio failed to advance in two downs and on the next play Harley started to cut across the field, after which he hurled the pigskin over the goal to Stinchcomb. Wisconsin's rooters went dead with the play, but broke forth with renewed energy in a moment when the referee called the ball back on the claim that Harley had moved to within five yards of the line of scrimmage before he sent the ball hurling into the scoring zone.

Having failed to score as planned, the Ohioans switched to the next best means of assault, so Harley dropped back a bit on the next play and calmly booted his drop kick over the bars while his mates were holding back the frantic Badgers. It was an easy boot, directly in line with the goal posts.

Badgers Keep Up Fight.

After that reverse the Badgers didn't

FORWARD PASSES OF PENN STATE DEFEAT CORNELL

Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 15.—Penn State defeated Cornell, 20 to 0, through long forward passes and superior work by the back field. Cornell at intervals put up a stiff defense and succeeded three times in holding for downs on the one yard line.

The first period was scoreless. In the second, Robb circled Cornell's right end for a touchdown. A few minutes later Penn State worked three spectacular passes, taking the ball to the two yard line, from which Hess plunged over for another score.

There was no scoring in the third period, and in the final period a long forward pass, Robb to Higgins, placed the ball on Cornell's one yard mark. Robb then bucked over.

PURPLE UPSETS INDIANA, 3 TO 2, IN FINAL PERIOD

Citizens Turn Out to See Final Home Game of N. U. Eleven.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Showing a better fighting spirit than it has displayed at any time this season, Northwestern came from behind and defeated Indiana yesterday on Northwestern field, 3 to 2, in the Purple's only victory over a conference eleven.

The game ended just as dusk was settling over the gridiron. There was scarcely two minutes left to play when the Purple obtained possession of the oval in midfield. Stellar end running and off tackle driving by Lane, the Purple half back, combined with Capt. Koehler's line plunging, placed the oval on the Hoosiers' twenty yard line.

Daley Makes Place Kick.

Quarter Back Brightmire then decided to take a long chance. Left Tackle Daley was called back for a place kick, and Lane, the half back, took his place in the line. Brightmire held the oval on the Indiana twenty-nine yard mark and Daley booted it between the posts from a difficult angle for the points which spelled a Purple victory.

As the game grew older, it looked as if the two points scored by Indiana early in the first period would decide the issue. The Indiana score was the result of a safety, a gift which the Purple has been generous with all season. Indiana won the toss and chose to defend the south goal with a strong wind it is favor.

How Safety Was Made.

The Hoosier offense worked well, but in the exchange of punts Indiana had a decided advantage because of the wind. The Purple were gradually forced back into its own territory until Scott was forced to punt while standing on his ten yard line. McCaw, the Indiana right tackle, broke through and blocked the attempt. The oval rolled back of the Purple goal line and Scott dropped on it for a safety, two points for Indiana.

Good and bad football was displayed by both teams, the Purple play being particularly poor in the first half. In the first two periods Indiana had all the best of the going and in the second period had the ball on the Purple one yard line. With a foot to gain on the fourth down for a touchdown, Williams lost his footing and was thrown for a two yard loss. Fullback Kyle had been making ground easily through the middle of the Purple line and it appeared certain he could have made a foot if he had been given the ball.

Visitors Check Advance.

In the final period Northwestern made a pretty advance to the Indiana eighteen yard line, where the oval was lost on downs. The Purple secured possession of the ball on its forty yard line and clever end running by Lane and forward passes, Koehler and Lane to the ends, netted good gains. As the Purple advanced, the Indiana secondary defense was drawn up and on a fourth down, with six yards to gain, a forward pass, Lane to Chester Bernard, was incomplete, and the ball went to Indiana.

The Purple was unable to fathom the Hoosiers' attack in the first half of the game and was continually on the defensive. When the Purple got possession of the ball it was helpless and invariably was forced to punt on the fourth down. Some of the kicks were sent away by eyelash margins, as the Hoosier forwards drove through relentlessly.

Battle in Enemy's Territory.

By use of the triple pass back of the line, which usually wound up with Brightmire carrying the oval and Lane's clever running, the Purple took the commanding hand in the final period and forced Indiana to fight in its own territory. During most of the final period the ball was either in the Hoosier territory or in midfield.

Capt. Koehler played a consistent game in his final appearance in a Purple uniform at home. Although stopped in the first half without making considerable headway, he drove through the Hoosier line and off the tackles for snappy gains in the third and fourth periods. Lane also played well ad Brightmire handled the team well from the quarter back position.

Half Back Bowser was the outstanding star of the Indiana team. He was seldom stopped in his ground gaining attempts. Williams and Kyle also played well, as did McCaw, Donovan, and Mathias. Lineup:

AGGIES BATTLE BUT FALL, 13-0, AT NOTRE DAME

Notre Dame, Ind., Nov. 15.—[Special.]—Notre Dame struck a tartar in the Michigan Aggies today and was forced to extend itself to the limit to defeat the East Lansing aggregation by a margin of two touchdowns. The score was 13 to 0.

Never did a Wolverine eleven fight harder than did the Aggies today. Never did a visiting team show more courage in the face of odds. But all the courage and fight that the Michigan clan could develop was not sufficient to stop the equally courageous and more powerful eleven which carried the colors of Notre Dame.

Forced to Use Regulars.

Coach Rockne started a complete second string lineup against the invaders. It was not long, however, until he saw the futility of attempting to down the scrappy Aggies with this combination and he rushed his regular back field and ends into the fray at the opening of the second quarter.

Amid the murk of defeat the East Lansing men, who journeyed here 300 strong, find one bright beacon light in the brilliant stand of their eleven when the locals ran the ball to the five yard line in the second quarter only to meet an impregnable defense. The visitors fought stubbornly for four downs and the ball went over when Bahan failed to make the required distance on the fourth down. Hammes punted from behind his own goal posts to the middle of the field.

Forward Passes Win Game.

A dazzling overhead attack in which Gipp and Kirk were the main cogs bewildered the Aggies at the close of the quarter and the locals advanced the ball to the three yard line, where Stackford promptly cut a patch through center for the first touchdown.

The other touchdown came in the fourth quarter. The period opened with the ball in Notre Dame's possession on its own twenty yard line. A long pass, Gipp to Kirk, netted ten yards. Bahn drove off tackle for three more. Another pass, Gipp to Coughlin, placed the ball squarely behind the goal posts. Bahn kicked goal. The lineup:

Great Lakes Wins from Battleship Team, 42 to 7

The Great Lakes football team defeated the second battleship squadron of the Philadelphia navy yard eleven, 42 to 7, at Great Lakes yesterday. The game was a loose contest, Great Lakes making touchdowns at will. The teams were battling on a muddy field that made the going hard. The Great Lakes eleven scored most of its touchdowns on line plunges, only two of the counters being by the aerial route.

BY ALBON HOLDEN.

In a delirious battle such as has not been seen on Stagg field in several years, Chicago yesterday nosed out the fighting Hawkeyes from Iowa City, 9 to 6. For thrills, wild excitement, brilliant play, and for a superb fighting defense put up by the Maroons in the last trench with Field Judge Thurber counting off the seconds as a referee in the boxing ring, the wild affair will go down in history of Midway football as one of the most frenzied of all.

When the final whistle lifted the extreme tension Iowa had the ball on the Chicago eight inch line and was gathering for a last attempt to dent the Maroon wall. The Maroons had the game apparently sewed up with a three point lead with less than two minutes to play. Coach Stagg sent Paul Hinkle in at left end to replace the fast tiring Halliday, and the big end was so keyed up that he could not control himself.

Mistake Nearly Fatal.

"Come on boys," shouted Hinkle, according to the officials who were just a few feet from the play, and immediately Umpire White pounced on "Hink" for speaking to his mates before a play was pulled off, which is against the 1919 playing code. Fifteen yards the ball was carried by Referee Means to the Chicago sixteen yard mark, and Iowa was given a first down.

The stunned Maroons seemed paralyzed and for an instant it looked as though the fighting Hawkeyes would queeze through. Capt. Lohman banged away for five yards through the demoralized Chicago front, and Aubrey Devine tore through for a ten yard advance, squirming to within six feet of a touchdown before he was brought down.

Hawkeyes Hit a Wall.

Just when the Midway fans were breathless from the sudden change in fortune the Chicago line braced under the exhortations of Capt. Higgins and the back field. The Hawkeyes were told that there was less than a minute of play left and gathered for the drive to victory. Aubrey Devine hurled himself at the center of Chicago's wall, but Reber and McGuire set him back a yard. Again he tried, this time squarely at McGuire, but the fighting Maroon guard, with his face smeared with blood, hurled himself into the opening and choked the attempt.

The third smash was intrusted to Capt. Lohman, for Field Judge Thurber had told the Hawkeyes they had fifteen seconds left for victory. Once more the charge came straight at the middle of the Chicago line, but Reber and his guards, Stegeman and McGuire, were under the play and the ball was laid to rest just eight inches from a touchdown.

Timekeeper to Rescue.

As the frantic Hawkeyes rose once more for a dying thrust Field Judge Thurber started swinging his right arm, tolling off the ticking seconds. Five times he waved and then blew his whistle and the air was filled with maroon colored head guards.

It was the most brilliant finish that has wound up any game on Stagg field in modern times and the students tore onto the field to cart the Maroon athletes to their dressing rooms.

Two men of the Maroon team wrote their names in indelible ink in Coach Stagg's record book—Charles McGuire and Percy Graham. McGuire, who has been on the sidelines with a water on the knee injury for nearly six weeks and had been allowed to scrimmage only twice since the Great Lakes game on Oct. 11, was a fighting fool in the Chicago line. Pitted against "Duke" Slater, the towering dusky tackle from Iowa, he put up an exhibition of gameness that will long be remembered by every Chicago fan.

Battered But Fighting.

With his nose pushed over on his face pointing southeast, and the blood smeared all over his countenance, McGuire fought through the whole second half when it looked as if each play was his last.

No man in the west can make this big dark boy from Iowa look bad, but McGuire held him even every step, and when the Hawkeyes three times tried to drive through him in the hectic finish McGuire stood his ground.

Red Graham, stung by the criticism of his work at Illinois, when a lot of folks thought he was playing too carefully and avoiding every possible bump, went out and put up the best exhibition of his career. Red smashed away at the line fiercely, diving forward when tackled, and at no time could the Hawkeyes feel sure that they had him stopped. Graham made the Chicago touchdown on a drive off tackle, he kicked the drop kick that won the game, and he made the longest run of the game, a thirty yard dash straight through the Iowa team.

Iowa Displays Stars.

For Iowa, Dusky "Duke" Slater accomplished all that the advance notices credited him with, and Aubrey Devine and Lester Belding turned out the flashiest running and passing game seen on the south side since the Easton-Wyman combination from Minnesota passed into history.

With Audrey Devine tearing around the wings at full speed and the lanky left end drifting slowly down the field, the Maroons tried to tackle the quarter back, but in a flash he repeatedly turned his run into a pass and shot the ball down the field to Belding, who half a dozen times leaped high into the air to grab it away from outstretched Chicago fingers. Late in the game Devine changed his tactics, starting out at a fast clip and then faking a pass. When the Maroons ran to cover Belding, Aubrey tucked the ball under his arm and shifted to high gear, several times dashing off brilliant runs.

Maroons Have Shade in Punts.

Capt. Higgins, playing his usual rugged game, Jackson, Elton, and Hanisch, were Maroon assets, and Glenn Devine, Parker, and Capt. Lohman were prominent figures for the Hawkeyes. Graham outpointed Devine by a shade. Belding and Crisler covered punts beautifully and there were few returns.

After an exchange of punts in the first quarter Hutchinson of the Maroons fumbled and Parker recovered on his own forty-three yard line. After one first down Iowa immediately opened up with the Devine-Belding combination. The first pass, almost a lateral toss, brought one yard; but another one put the ball on the twenty yard line. A third time Belding leaped into the air and the ball was on the ten yard line. Three plays got seven yards, and on a fourth down the Devines did the brother act on another pass, Aubrey passing and Glenn making the touchdown. Aubrey missed the goal.

Chicago Goes in Second.

Chicago completed one long pass in the first period, Graham to Crisler, but waited until the second period to show anything like a real drive.

Just as the second period began Parker fumbled almost on the identical spot where Hutchinson's muff had given Iowa her chance to score. Fouche dropped on the rolling oval. A forward pass was intercepted and A. Devine punted to the Maroon forty yard line, where Chicago opened up on the shimmy shift plays. With Elton, Hutchinson, and Hanisch battering away for three and four yard gains, and Graham helping with smashes off tackle, Chicago rolled sixty yards without losing the ball and Graham drove off tackle for the touchdown. Higgins also missed goal.

Just before the half ended the Maroons opened up with a similar crushing attack, making four first downs in a row, but the period halted the procession on the Iowa twenty yard line.

Maroons Held for Downs.

Chicago had a grand and glorious opening when Charlton fumbled Higgins' kickoff as the second half started. Hanisch fell on the ball on the thirty yard line, but Chicago could make only nine and one-half yards in four plays. Higgins threw Glenn Devine for an eight yard loss, but Brother Aubrey made up the setback and made first down and then shot a forward pass to Parker for six yards, but the attack failed after that.

While standing on his forty yard line, Graham made his bad punt and Aubrey Devine attempted a drop kick from exactly the middle of the field, but McGuire blocked the boot. The ball rolled on the ground for thirty yards, but took a sudden hop over Graham's head and bounded over the goal line. Graham was tackled while recovering the ball, but it was declared a touchback because the impetus which sent the oval behind the line was given by the kicker.

Graham Makes a Dash.

Both kickers traded spirals and on the last play of the third period Graham broke through on a spread play for a thirty-five yard gain, carrying the ball to the Hawkeyes' thirty yard chalk. Iowa checked the drive in the fourth period after the Maroons had marched to the twenty-three yard line. A. Devine punted out, but the Maroons came back close enough to allow Graham to kick his winning drop kick from the twenty-two yard line.

The Maroons played careful ball through the remainder of the period, while Iowa showered passes in an attempt to score. With three minutes to play Elton fumbled on his own forty yard line. Iowa recovered. A few seconds later Hinkle broke into the game and the wild finish after the penalty for his famous speech has been described. Lineup:

MAROON NOTES

Not a man on either team was seriously hurt, despite the fierce play.

A big crowd witnessed the dizzy proceedings. There were 18,000 in the stands, 500 of whom were Iowa students with their band.

The weather was perfect for football, and the gridiron, protected all week from frost by a covering of hay, was fast.

Chicago made fifteen first downs to ten for Iowa. The Maroons made ten yards nine times to three for the visitors in the first half, but Iowa made seven first downs to six for the Maroons in the second half. Chicago's gains were on straight smashes from shift plays, while the overhead game from fake end runs was Coach Jones' chief strength.

Iowa, too, was penalized because a man entering the game spoke to his mates before one play was pulled off. In the fourth period Kelly went into the Hawkeye backfield and after a shift of positions he tried to call the first signal, but Referee Means gave the signal for a fifteen yard penalty. It was not as costly as Hinkle's classic, because Iowa had the ball and could punt.

BOWEN TEAM AND SCHURZ WIN WAY TO 'PREP' FINAL

Fenger and Waller Fall in Hot Battles of the Lightweights.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Bowen and Schurz qualified to fight it out for lightweight honors in the second division of the Chicago High School league when they won the semi-final battles of the division from sturdy opposition yesterday. Bowen turned back the Waller team in the latter's homecoming for North Division graduates of former days, 26 to 6, at De Paul field. Schurz won from Fenger by a sensational run in the closing minutes, 6 to 0, at Whitman & Barnes field, in South Chicago.

As every other lightweight team of the second division has lost, the Bowen and Schurz battles were eyed with intense interest. Fenger outplayed Schurz through the first half.

Try the Passing Game.

The second half opened as a swaying struggle between the two thirty yard lines, with the game apparently destined to end a tie. Fenger tried time and again to complete a forward pass which would give a start toward a touchdown, but, while some of the heaves were completed, none amounted to more than slight gains against the watchful Schurz defense.

With two minutes to go, Quinn intercepted one of the Fenger passes and ran down the sidelines sixty-two yards to Fenger's eight yard line. The crowd rushed on the field, obscuring the referee's view, but with some difficulty the gridiron was cleared, and W. Bell in two more plays circled left end for the winning touchdown. Lineup:

Bowen Scores in Hurry.

Three minutes after play opened Bowen scored its first touchdown against Waller and the far south siders then piled up a triumph of 26 to 6 at De Paul field. Fenton scored the first touchdown, and in the same quarter Bowen was penalized when on Waller's three yard line. Two more touchdowns were chalked up in the second period, but Waller braced and forced the playing in the third, when Shore led the attack. Bowen put over a final score in the fourth quarter, Drea, Moline, and Fenton doing the heavy work.

LAKE VIEW SPLITS EVEN.

Lane and Lake View split in their double header at Cub park, the former taking the heavyweight fill in easy style, 40 to 7, while Lake View's battling minors took Lane into camp 13 to 6. Prigg of Lake View played a flattering game in the heavyweight clash. The lightweight affair was a feature fight all the way. Lane gradually giving away before the well drilled Lake View machine. H. Priest tore off numerous gains and Frische was an able second. The latter backed up the line strongly when Lane held the ball. Lineups:

HARRISON WINS AND LOSES.

The firm of Metz, Bryson & Fox added another Chicago league victory for Englewood's newly returned heavyweight champions yesterday, the Purple defeating Harrison, 25 to 0, on the Tech field. Metz made two touchdowns, Bryson one, and Smith one, and Reynolds added a goal kick. Crane never had a chance.

The lightweight half of the bill, in which Harrison opposed Parker, furnished a rousing exhibition. Harrison won the title, 13 to 0, after some exciting moments. It was the third consecutive victory for the Tech ponies, who found themselves after shedding Solfrank at the start of the season. Solfrank was the outstanding star. The defensive work of both teams was good. Lightweight lineup:

HYDE PARK TAKES PAIR.

Hyde Park won two games from Crane at White City. The heavyweights copped by 20 to 0, and the lightweights ran up a 32 to 0 contest, which kept them in a tie for the first division title with Lake View. The heavyweight game was the best struggle the Hyde Parkers have put up this year. Capt. Simmons and Landis featured. Crane was powerless to score. The sparkling backfield of Hyde Park lights ran away from the Crane line and secondary defense.

EAST AURORA, 13; ELGIN, 6.

Aurora, Ill., Nov. 15.—[Special.]—East High of Aurora defeated Elgin, 13 to 6, in an elimination contest for the championship of the Northern Illinois High School conference. Five thousand saw the game. East High gained principally by end runs, while Elgin relied on straight line plays. Lineup:

OAK PARKERS RALLY AT FINISH AND BEAT DEERFIELD, 14 TO 3

BY PREP.

Deerfield heavyweights gave Oak Park's Suburban league champions a hair raising scare at Highland Park when they entered the fourth quarter with a 3 to 0 lead, after Parcells booted a pretty thirty-five yard drop kick in the first quarter. The breaks of the game piled up against the home boys in the final eight minutes and Oak Park won, 14 to 3.

With eight minutes left, McElvain of Deerfield fumbled his center's pass on a punt formation, and an Oak Parker fell on the ball on the home team's twelve yard line. It took the required four downs for Oak Park to gain exactly ten yards, and Deerfield, fighting bitterly, threw back two more attempts on the two yard line before Steger went over.

Oak Park Scores Again.

Deerfield then made a hurried attempt to score before the final whistle, turning loose on passes. Wilcoxen intercepted one of these on the Deerfield thirty yard line and romped onward ten yards. The home team's morale slumped, and it was easy for Steger and Caruso to advance the remaining distance, Caruso scoring on a cross buck. Lineup:

Lightweights Also Win.

Oak Park lightweights made it a two fold victory for the day, trimming Riverside heavyweights, 29 to 0, in a practice tilt at Riverside. Oak Park started, scoring with Helfe's field goal in the first quarter and made a touchdown for each period. Lineup:

EVANSTON battled New Trier to a 7 to 7 tie at Kenilworth in a game which might have decided second place in the Suburban league heavyweight race. Play was close from start to finish, both punting frequently. Evanston scored first, Johnson going over from the five yard line late in the first quarter after the ball had been brought up by long runs by Flood and Pickard. New Trier came right back in the second period and Weinelke crossed the line after the ball had been brought into scoring distance by a long forward pass, Rand to Wright. PROVISO BREAKS EVEN.

A safety scored in the first half proved the margin of victory in the heavyweight game of Proviso against Waukegan High at Maywood yesterday, the visitors winning by 14 to 13. Proviso, which is most proud of its lightweights, got sweet revenge in the other half of the double header, scoring a 19 to 0 victory against Waukegan. PRESENTING a rock ribbed defense and a powerful attack against the line, Culver Military academy swept Loyola to a heavy defeat, 40 to 0 before 6,000 academic rooters at Loyola campus. The game opened sensationally, a Culver player returning the Loyola kickoff through the entire field for a touchdown, making the margin six points against the home preps almost before the watchers were aware the game had begun.

Behind their brawny line and aided by hard hitting interference, Culver then marched to successive touchdowns, with Loyola getting little chance to attempt advancing the ball. Culver looked the strongest academic team that has played on a Chicago gridiron this season. Lineup:

Williams an Easy Victor Over Amherst Team, 30-0

Williamstown, Mass., Nov. 15.—Williams easily defeated its time honored rival, Amherst, this afternoon in their annual football game, 30 to 0, the sensational playing of Capt. Bennie Boynton featuring the Purple victory. The attack of Williams was beyond expectations, the aerial offensive being especially noteworthy. Boynton's advances through the line were from twenty to eighty-five yards.

MORGAN PARK CADETS TIE.

Splendid defensive work almost put Morgan Park Military academy into possession of a tight victory over St. Albans school of Sycamore, Ill., but the latter scored in the closing minutes and 1,000 wild fans at Morgan Park were content with the 7 to 7 verdict. In the third and fourth quarters Morgan Park was forced to hold on its one yard line for four downs.

Cottrell of Morgan Park drove through center for a touchdown early in the fourth period, and the game seemed won, but St. Albans came right back, and it was at this point Morgan Park held, taking the ball on its one yard line, but when Gorham attempted to punt to safety from behind his goal, St. Albans blocked the kick and Drew fell on it behind the line. Fouls shone on defense for the cadets. Lineup:

OHIO-BADGER NOTES

Madison, Wis., Nov. 15.—[Special.]—The day was chilly and cloudy. About twelve thousand shivered through the exhibition.

The players were not numbered and the yard markers on one side of the field were covered by hay, all of which did not add to the comfort of those present, especially the scribes.

Badger backers didn't have much confidence in their team. Odds of 3 to 1 were asked, but the Ohioans didn't like the price and finally closed a few deals at 2 to 1. The Wisconsin demands kept the betting down.

As Wisconsin's new stadium is only about one-quarter built, it was an easy matter for the youngsters to sneak through free of charge. The kids were on the sidelines, in the press box, and everywhere else.

Most of Harley's long runs were directly across the field. They looked good, but didn't get him anything. Several times he was thrown for huge losses before he could get the ball away on a forward pass after cutting across the field.

Much of the effectiveness of Wisconsin's line on defense was due to Capt. Carpenter. Time and again he broke through Ohio's wall and nailed the man with the ball. Elliott also was a bear on defense.

quit. Quite the contrary. The ball changed hands via the kicking route a couple of times and Paul Meyers, former Badger captain, intercepted a pass from Harley and was downed in the field. Later on Davey intercepted another pass on his own thirty yard mark and then the Badgers set out with what had been expected of them throughout the afternoon. One pass, Davey to Gould, followed by another Davey to Elliott, drove the Ohioans back to their thirty yard mark.

There still was a minute left to play and the Badger rooters howled for results, but the spurt died as suddenly as it started when Slyker, just injected into the fray, intercepted a long pass and carried the ball back to mid-field just as the whistle sounded the end of hostilities.

Harley Fails to Get Loose.

That Wisconsin lost was no disgrace. The line looked as good as Ohio's, and the Badger backs gained more ground than did the Ohioans, probably because the Badger defense was so well perfected that the feared Mr. Harley was not able to break loose for any long gains. He did his share, but did not play the part of the west's great all-around back field worker. He may do better a week from today, and if he does Ohio State will find that Illinois's foe not to be trifled with. Lineup:

Owners of Holmes Improved Air-Cooled Cars Instinctively Set a High Mileage for the Avcrage Day's Run

THE REASON is the ease with which all roads are traveled. Where other cars are slowed down to 15 to 20 miles an hour by ruts, worn gravel, sand or mud, the Holmes steadily swings along at from 30 to 35 miles an hour without the slightest discomfort to the occupants.

The red blooded man or woman who takes pleasure in the keen out of doors air of Noyember finds the Holmes in full accord with their desires for a real spin into the country.

Full elliptic springs and a flexible chassis absorb the shocks of the road. The understructure steadily accommodates itself to the rough spots; the body moves along as evenly as though it were riding over the smoothest boulevard.

Steering is without effort; the flexiblity of the chassis keeps the wheels to the road with a steadiness which takes all strain off the driver and results in a high average of speed.

The ability to cover more miles in a day in perfect comfort to the occupants is obtained at an economy of operation hitherto associated only with small cars of restricted performance. 18 to 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline is the average fuel consumption. 10,000 miles to the set is the average tire mileage.

That such low operating cost can be obtained in a car of 126-inch wheelbase and seven-passenger capacity is proof that high operating costs are no longer necessary in a car of proper size for enjoyment.

REDS TRIED HARD TO TALK SOX OUT OF WORLD TITLE

Rough Stuff Conspicuous, But Cincy Won by Its Playing, Says Evans.

BY BILLY EVANS.
[American League Umpire.]

"Get their goat and we will defeat them."

Baseball has originated many a slang expression. Some of them are national institutions. "Atta boy," "Throw some pepper," "Ginger up," "Come on, boys, a little life," are a few expressions on the ball field. None is better known than "Get their goat."

In 1914 the Boston Braves made the Philadelphia Athletics look foolish in the world series. The Athletics were top heavy favorites, but the Braves won four straight. Since then it has been common talk that the Braves won because they, to use the slang of the ball field, "got the goats" of the Philadelphia players from the start and thereby to a great extent killed their effectiveness.

I know several players on the Braves and they insisted the way the Braves rode the Athletics was what made winning so easy. They told me personalities flavored with tobasco sauce were hurled at the Athletics. Family affairs and state secrets were dug up and told the world.

Braves Outplayed Athletics.

I have always taken such talk with a grain of salt. No one can make me believe the Braves won purely on conversation. I think the Braves won because the team played better ball, was favored with airtight pitching, if some one always was able to come through with a timely hit when opportunity to score was offered. In addition the breaks favored the Braves. Usually the breaks favor the winning team.

To top off the work of the Braves was a team that played with a confidence in its ability to beat not only the Athletics but any only team. I was always figured the Braves deserved to win because they outplayed the Athletics in all departments, not because there were a couple of fellows on the club who could say unkind things.

Disagrees with Evers.

Recently I read a statement by Johnny Evers, who assisted Manager Moran of the Cincinnati club in preparation for the series with the White Sox. Evers said no player on the Cincinnati club played a more prominent part in the success of the Reds than Smith. Perhaps many people will be surprised to know Smith was on the club.

Evers said Smith, by his personal remarks, so "got the goat" of a number of Chicago players that they were unable to do themselves justice. Evers mentioned Eddie Collins among the players affected. To me that was a laugh, knowing Collins as I do. Smith was a substitute on the Cincinnati club and he had evidently been appointed "rah rah leader of the Reds' crew of real getters."

It seems to me that Evers' statement in giving so much credit to Smith is hardly fair to the rest of the men that played such magnificent baseball.

What Really Won.

A résumé of the series makes it apparent the pitching of Ruether, Sallee, Fisher, and Ring had much to do with winning. Likewise, the timely hitting of Kopf, Duncan, Groh, Daubert, and Roush had considerable to do with the Reds finishing on top. Incidentally, the brilliant work in the field by Eddie Roush and the splendid catching of Wingo and Rariden played an equal part.

It seems to me that to give a substitute who contributed nothing more than conversation a higher rating than the players mentioned is unfair to those players, and a bit of a knock to the game from a sportsmanlike viewpoint. Don't get the impression that "personalities" were not indulged in. I admit they were to a decided degree. Don't get the impression that the Reds were the sole offenders. The battle of wits was started by the Reds, probably led by Smith, since Evers gives him so much credit.

World series games are peculiar in many ways. The games are played under the rules of the league, where the contest is staged. That is, in games played on the National league grounds, the construction of the National league places on many things that can come up is observed, and vice versa on the American league grounds.

Assail Eddie Collins.

Both games in which I was the "umpire in chief" were played at Cincinnati. I make this statement to explain the incident when Collins came to bat for the first time in the second game. He was greeted by a chorus of personal remarks from the bench warmers on the Cincinnati club, the purpose being to "get his goat."

A like incident in an American league game during the regular season would have caused me to stop the contest and warn the offending players. A repetition of the incident would have caused dismissal of the offending players. There is a league rule in the American that a player so offending is automatically suspended for five days.

"The Reds are getting a little rough, Bill," I remarked.

"Don't pay any attention to them," answered Bill Rariden, who was catching. "They are harmless and believe they must earn their share some way."

Never Fazes Eddie.

How to combat the statement by Evers that Smith got Collins' goat, which will prove Collins as a gentleman and real sportsman. The chatter from the bench continued.

"I don't know whether it is customary to allow such talk in the National league games," I remarked to Rariden, "but it seems some of the boys are overstepping themselves a bit."

"Forget about it, Bill," replied Collins, "those fellows are not bothering me, and if you stop the game and go over to the Cincinnati bench and try to stop them it will be embarrassing for you. You will get nothing better than a 'razzing.'"

PURDUE'S END RUNS AND LINE SMASHES BEAT DE PAUW, 24-0

Lafayette, Ind., Nov. 15.—[Special.]—Purdue had little trouble in disposing of De Pauw on Stuart field, 24 to 0, the Boilermakers starting their scoring a few minutes after the game opened and adding to their count steadily as the battle progressed.

De Pauw made use of an aerial offense that was effective at times, but Purdue baffled the Tigers whenever they got within striking distance of the Purdue goal. Shortly after the first kickoff Meeker went over for Purdue's first marker. The ball had been carried steadily goalward by Huffine, Daly, Wagner, and Meeker, Daly doing most of the ground gaining.

Quickly Score Again.

Before the first period ended the Boilermakers had scored another touchdown. Daly intercepted a forward pass and Wagner skirted the De Pauw end for a twenty-five yard gain. Huffine, on a trick play, dashed for a touchdown.

In the second period Daly intercepted a De Pauw pass on the Purdue forty yard line. Huffine, Church, and Wagner tore off substantial gains, and finally Church dashed around end for a fourteen yard run for touchdown.

Church Makes Final Score.

A thirty yard run by Huffine after the kickoff in the third quarter was chiefly responsible for Purdue's last score. Meeker and Church added more gains and then Church darted ten yards for the fourth score.

BROWN TOPPLES DARTMOUTH INTO RANKS OF LOSERS

Boston, Mass., Nov. 15.—Dartmouth lost all claim to the eastern gridiron championship when defeated by Brown at Braves field today, 7 to 6. The game was contested bitterly until the final minute, when Dartmouth failed on its last opportunity to score. Many players were injured. Jemail, Brown right half, was carried from the field unconscious, only to return to the game in the next period.

Dartmouth was leading 6 to 0, in the third period, when Capt. Nichols Brown's right guard, broke through the Green line, blocked Grundman's punt on the forty yard line, and ran through an open field for a touchdown. Armstrong kicked the goal.

In the second period, after a steady advance down the field, Ekberg of Dartmouth went over for a touchdown on an end play. Dartmouth missed an opportunity to kick the goal when Grundman fumbled the punt out.

Youngstrom missed an atttempt at a drop kick from the thirty-five yard line in the last minute of play and the game ended with the ball in Brown's possession on its own twelve yard line.

HAMMOND PLAYS DETROIT TODAY

The Hammond All-Stars, which played Jim Thorpe's Canton eleven to a 3 to 3 tie last Sunday, will meet the Detroit Heralds today at the Cubs' park at 2:30 o'clock.

Hammond has been strengthened by the addition of Hauser, former Minnesota player, who probably will play tackle. Capt. Des Jardien, who was injured in last Sunday's game, will play only part of today's contest. Rydewski will be shifted from tackle to center.

Wyman and Baston, the famous Gopher forward pass combination, will play full back and end, respectively, for Hammond, and the other positions will be filled by the same players who have played all fall.

PRINCETON VICTOR AT SOCCER.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 15.—Princeton won the soccer game with Yale today, 1 to 0.

HARVARD EMERGES AS ONLY UNBEATEN TEAM AFTER TUFTS CONTEST

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 15.—Harvard, with many substitutes in the line, had little difficulty in defeating Tufts today, 23 to 0, although there was no scoring during the first half, and at the end of the third period Harvard led only 3 to 0. In the fourth quarter, however, with Arnold Horween, who was substituted for Hamilton, at right halfback, furnishing the driving power, Harvard scored three touchdowns, two of which were followed by goals.

Harvard's victory made the Crimson the only undefeated team of consequence in the eastern football world.

Fumbles Are Costly.

Many fumbles and poor punting contributed to Tufts' defeat. In the first half Tufts worked several long forward passes for substantial gains, but in the second half the Harvard defense stiffened against this form of attack.

Harvard scored a field goal in the third period after Church had brought the ball well into Tufts territory by long runs. Felton replaced Johnson at quarterback and booted a goal from the twenty-five yard line. Two previous attempts at field goals by Gratwick had failed. Tufts also failed to score a field goal from the forty yard line.

Pound Tufts Line.

In the fourth period Church again brought the ball far into Tufts territory by long runs, and Horween bucked the line for the first touchdown. The same tactics were immediately repeated, Nelson carrying the ball through for another touchdown. The third touchdown was also made by Nelson, who scored after Smith of Tufts had fumbled on his fifteen yard line and Harvard had worked a forward pass to the three yard line. Lineup:

PENN AND PITT PLAY TO 3-3 STALEMATE; EACH SHAVES DEFEAT

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 15.—Pennsylvania and Pittsburgh university teams played a 3 to 3 tie on Franklin field. Capt. Bell scored Pennsylvania's three points with a field goal in the first period. A goal from placement by Hastings of Pitt evened the score in the second quarter.

It was a clean, hard, and fast game, both elevens having narrow escapes. Pitt showed to advantage during the first half, but in the second it was Pennsylvania that displayed fine staying qualities and versatility in play.

Penn's three points came shortly after Davies of Pittsburgh fumbled a pass on his own forty yard line. The Red and Blue worked the ball a short distance toward the Pitt goal, and failing to budge the fighting Panthers further, Capt. Bell dropped a field goal from the thirty yard line.

In the second period Hastings made two tries at placement goal, the first failing from Penn's fifty yard line. He then sent the ball over from the Quaker thirty-seven yard mark, tying the score.

DENTON BREAKS 2 WORLD MARKS IN CUE CONTEST

Runs 50 Points in 30 Frames and Scores 17 in One Inning.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 15.—Two world's records at three cushion billiards were broken today by Tiff Denton of Kansas City. Denton scored fifty points in thirty innings in his match with Byron Gillette of Buffalo, in the three cushion billiard championship tournament, breaking the previous record of thirty-six innings. Gillette scored twenty-four points.

Denton also broke the world's high run record for a championship match or tournament game by scoring seventeen points in the fourteenth inning. The previous record was fourteen. Denton's run was within one point of the world's record run in competition made by Charles Morin of Chicago in a tournament at St. Louis. Following is the inning score:

DENTON—1 0 1 0 4 2 1 0 2 1 1 0 0 1 7 3
0 1 0 5 0 0 0 2 0 1 0 4 1 0 3—50.

This is the first tournament Denton ever played in. In the second game of today's program, Hugh Heal of Toledo won from Clarence Jackson of Detroit, 50 to 23, in 47 innings.

In tonight's play Charles Otis of Brooklyn won from Pierre Maupome of Milwaukee, 50 to 45, in sixty innings. Maupome had a high run of nine and Otis' best inning was an eight. In the second game Otto Reiselt of Chicago beat Jess Lean of Cincinnati, 50 to 43, in sixty-one innings.

CUE MEN READY FOR STATE PLAY

After several weeks of preliminary tournament play the winners in ten districts of the state amateur pocket billiard championship conducted by the Illinois Billiard association have been determined. Tomorrow night, at Mussey's Madison street room, these players, each of whom has won a gold medal emblematic of the district championship, will compete for the diamond state championship medal.

It will be a round robin event, each game being at seventy-five balls. Five of the players are from Chicago districts and five from other districts in the state. The visiting players are Harry Wurzberger, Forrest, Ill., tenth district; Chalmers Woodyatt, Dixon, seventh district; Herman Brink, Lawrenceville, fifteenth district; Harry Upkoff, Minonk, ninth district, and L. G. Perkins, Lincoln, twelfth district. There is a possibility that Alton, which is in the fourteenth district, also will send its champion.

The Chicago players are C. A. Vaughn, loop district; Hendrie north side; Curley, northwest; C. De Oro, west side, and Moriarty, south side.

DUNDEE DECIDES TO KEEP MONEY EARNED IN RING

Dismissal of His Pilot Starts Old Argument in Pugilism.

BY RAY PEARSON.

Can a boxer handle his own business affairs as well as the stuff that happens in the ring and score a success? That's an old question in the pugilistic game, but it never ceases to crop up, because of the efforts made by numerous boxers to get along without managers.

It is a question that never has been answered satisfactorily, but it can be said without much fear of contradiction that those who take the stand that a managerless scrapper is handicapped to an extent that is damaging have always had the better of the argument. But along comes little Johnny Dundee of New York, who cut the strings binding him to his manager, Scotty Montieth, several months ago, with the statement that he is getting along nicely without a manager and making more jack than he ever did before.

Dundee Successful So Far.

The Italian lightweight, we must admit, is making money and, judging by his recent performance in the ring at Milwaukee when he defeated his old enemy, Willie Jackson, the fellow who once hung a knockout on his chin, Johnny is perfectly capable of arranging bouts, fixing the terms, and collecting the dough, as well as picking sparring partners, etc., to help him prepare for contests.

Perhaps Dundee may be an exception to the general run of scrappers in this respect and it is our opinion that he is the exception. There's a reason for that. Johnny many moons ago figured out that he wasn't collecting as much coin for his efforts in the ring as he desired. He wasn't getting as many bouts as he wanted and while he was getting cash in fair seized chunks he wasn't satisfied. So he figured it out that he had to do something to reduce expenses as the first move.

Favors Action All the Time.

The reduction business was what hit Montieth and knocked him out of the good job of managing the Italian lightweight. What percentage Scotty was getting out of Dundee's earnings, the writer doesn't know, but evidently it was a nice cut or Montiet would still be acting manager. So Scotty had to be dropped to fatten the Dundee bank roll. Next Dundee, acting as his own manager, started out to land bouts and a lot of them. He had it doped out that a lot of scraps for fair money was better for the bankroll than a few battles at big coin which didn't come any too frequently.

So what does Dundee do but get a guy to assist him at the typewriter and pretty soon promoters in various parts of the country receive letters from the Italian lightweight notifying them that Dundee would fight for them for a guarantee of $1,000, or a percentage if the percentage ran better than the guarantee. Getting Dundee for $1,000 in these days of high prices naturally makes a hit with the promoters, with the result that the Italian is getting plenty of bouts. It is almost possible for him to battle once every week in the ring.

Plenty of Bouts Offered.

Now, brother, there are fifty-two weeks in the year, and if Johnny scrapped fifty-two times, he just naturally would be pulling down $52,000 or more. And he doesn't have to split any of that jack with a manager, because he's fighter and manager in one. He has to spend a bit here and there, but not enough to cut heavily into his income. Of course Dundee can't battle fifty-two times a year, and doesn't want to, but even so, he can get enough bouts at $1,000 per, so that he can practically make his income what ever amount he wants it to be.

Pal Moore, the little Memphis bantamweight who made a world-wide rep. by twice battling Jimmy Wilde, champion of England, is another boxer who has decided to try to "make it" minus a manager. Moore, in fact, had two managers (one firm) in Nate Lewis and T. Walsh, but he severed relations with them last week when his contract expired. He says that he isn't going to "adopt" a new manager, but is going ahead with his own business affairs. As Pal is just starting the managerless career it will be some time before he will be able to tell whether or not it is a success.

Willard Without a Manager.

There have been several examples of scrappers who found they couldn't fight up to the standard and manage their affairs at the same time. Jess Willard was without a manager when he fought and was defeated by Jack Dempsey at Toledo on July 4, although he did have Ray Archer to look after some of his business.

Some scrappers say that a manager is absolutely essential, the kind of a manager who can look after the box office stuff and be of assistance to a fellow when he is fighting by directing him from the corner.

Woods and Waters by LARRY ST. JOHN

MORE DOPE FOR YOUNG DUCK HUNTERS.

GET an early enough start in the morning to be "all set" for business before sunrise. Put your gun together, unpack your bag, and lay out your stuff before you go to bed. All this takes time and unforeseen delays may hold you up in the morning.

Just a few hints on clothing: Two thin suits of underwear are much warmer than one heavy suit—the air space between is the reason. A pair of thin cotton or woolen socks under a heavy pair of wool ones will keep the feet warm except in very cold weather, when a pair of old fashioned felt boots, well filled with socks, will be none too warm.

Do not wear anything black. This sounds like useless advice, but we have noticed recently a good many hunters dressed in dark clothing. A hunter in a black coat or hat could not be more easily seen by ducks if he stood up in his blind and waved a three foot flag—even the tan colored boots are preferable to the black.

For rainy weather the tan motor coat is a fine garment. It slips over the head and snaps and puckers at the throat and puckers at the wrists. It covers you to the ankles and, being made of lightweight rubber, it is absolutely waterproof and raintight, besides being a protection against wind. One of these coats is the first thing that goes in our duffle bag when we go hunting or fishing.

When you row or pole into your blind and drive out ducks, do not shoot at them. The chances are seven in ten that they will come back. If luck and weather are on your side, they will come trooping in in small bunches and give you some lively shooting.

If your equipment should be a belt or pocket ax for cutting willow and other wood for building or repairing a blind and a strong knife will be found useful for cutting rushes and other work.

If possible have your blind so situated that the wind comes from behind or across your decoys. When setting out blocks it is a good thing to keep in mind that teal and mallards prefer to drop in the middle of a stool; pintails to the lee, and open water ducks, such as bluebills, canvasbacks, and redheads to the windward.

If you have live callers keep them inside of your blocks and depend mainly on their calling; if you have a duck call use it with moderation unless you can "talk duck" with it.

Still more restraint is necessary when it comes to shooting. The temptation to shoot too soon is hard to resist, and young hunters, and some not so young, often cut loose and spoil a good shot for their companions. Usually this is the result of thoughtlessness rather than selfishness, but it should be overcome.

The man on the right end of the blind should let a few birds pass before he shoots when they come from his way and he has a right to expect the same from the other end of the blind. Never should a hunter stand up in the blind to shoot without giving his partner due warning—distressing accidents have happened by ignoring this rule.

It is a curious fact that one can often crouch for hours in a blind without seeing a duck; then he can stand up to take a look and a seventh inning stretch, and scare a flock heading right for him. Other times when ducks are usually seen is when you lay off to eat lunch or when you go out to chase a cripple or to take in your decoys.

The only comforting thought when these things take place is that the ducks have to get some of the breaks on the luck or there wouldn't be any ducks.

When you get home with your birds you still have the job of cleaning them. Now picking ducks is no fun, especially the heavy feathered ones, but here is a stunt that is worth while, the idea being handed to us by W. A. Senne of Kenosha, Wis.:

Melt paraffin in a large pan of some kind. When the melted wax begins to cool take your duck by the bill and feet and dip him in it, swabbing him around so that the wax will get under the feathers. When the wax has hardened take a knife and make a cut from the duck's neck to the base of the tail; cut across the tail and bend tail back until the feathers are loose. Then begin to peel the waxed feathers from the bird as you would peel an orange.

We tried this stunt the other day and it works fine. It takes off all of the feathers, down, pin feathers, and all, leaving the skin as clean as the palm of your hand. Figure about three-fourths of a pound of paraffin to each bird the size of a mallard. When you have finished put the feathers back in the pan, melt the wax, strain out the feathers, and you can thus salvage almost all of your paraffin. This idea will be appreciated by those who have struggled through the endless layers of feathers that clothe many of our ducks, such as the canvas back, for instance.

WOMEN GAINING SHARE OF GLORY ON RACE TRACKS

Many of 1919 Winners Owned by Members of the Fair Sex.

BY O'NEIL SEVIER.

In racing, as in politics and other fields of human endeavor the fair sex are getting their share of the honors. No longer can the ladies be regarded merely as ornamental features of the sport, agencies to lend color to clubhouse crowds on big days and to give the reporters of the big papers who come to write feature stories something to talk about, and to make vivacious conversation between races.

Mrs. Payne Whitney has just scored her second successive victory in the $3,000 Elkridge steeplechase, the most popular of the country's cross country events for 3 year old fencers and one of the attractive features of the Pimlico fall meetings.

Prize to Mrs. Jeffords.

Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords of Philadelphia, back in August, sent to the post the winner of the sportsmanlike Saratoga Special, the greatest of American 2 year old events and the most popular because it is a weight for age affair and a real championship event. The competing horsemen make the purse and the Saratoga association contributes nothing save a piece of plate which the winning owner cherishes as a reminder of a piece of good fortune that comes to few horsemen in a lifetime and to none oftener than two or three times. Mrs. Jeffords is the only woman owner fortunate enough to win the Saratoga Special.

New York Woman Buys Jumpers.

Mrs. Ambrose Clark of New York has developed several of the best steeplechasers about. She has not yet had the luck to which she is entitled, but her leapers were bought with a shrewd eye for conformation, quality, and racing ability, and there will be other seasons. Mrs. Clark is one of the most patient of women.

Mrs. Joseph E. Davis has been represented on American tracks this season by Ophelia, one of the three or four 3 year old fillies that has stood up through five months of rigorous campaigning and is still on winning form.

Kentucky Woman Sells Colts.

Miss Elizabeth Daingerfield of Kentucky brought to the Tranter sales ring at Saratoga in August a quartet of fine looking yearlings which sold to a discriminating bunch of hard-fisted buyers for the unusual sum of $26,600, an average of upward of $6,600 a head.

These woman are in racing and thoroughbred production to stay. Racing horses is not a transitory fancy with either Mrs. Whitney, Mrs. Clark, Mrs. Davis, or Mrs. Jeffords. Thoroughbred production has been adopted as the life work of Miss Daingerfield, who is a daughter of the late Maj. Foxhall Daingerfield, who, as manager of the famous Castleton stud of the late James R. Keene, his brother-in-law, was through ten years the most successful of thoroughbred producers the world over. Miss Daingerfield was her father's confidante and helper.

Mrs. Whitney is the veteran among the sportswomen of the east. She has been a devoted follower of racing these eight or ten years, and in her time she has developed some first class horses, mostly steeplechasers, and notably Cherry Malotte, Syosset II., Web Carter, Debadou, Tetan, Marcellinus, Roi Craig, Wyndover, etc.

I say advisedly that Mrs. Whitney developed these horses. Mrs. Whitney has a capable trainer in James Owners, who a few seasons back was a first class steeplechase jockey, but she personally supervises the schooling of her horses. She knows every move they make. She watches the saddling of them before they leave the paddock for good or ill luck, and generally she has something to say to the jockeys who ride them.

ON BASKET FLOORS

THE WAUTANA A. C. 125 pound basketball team defeated the Leewood basket tossers, 15 to 6, at Kosciuszko park yesterday. The game was an easy affair for the Wautana team, who led all of the way and who made several substitutions in the last half.

St. James' basket tossers defeated the Tabor team, 15 to 11, at Hamlin park. This is the third victory for the St. James team and it appears as if St. James, which has held the Concordia Lutheran championship for the last three years, will cop the title again this season.

The Eckhart Imps defeated the Seward Park Meteors, 38 to 32, at Seward park. This is the first defeat the Seward Park team has suffered in the last three seasons. The victory makes the Imps a strong contender for the public parks title.

Share in this Golden Stream of Almond Profits

$250 to $300 an acre from almonds? "Too far fetched," said some.

Dividends of 100% on actual cash invested? "I-M-P-O-S-S-I-B-L-E!" emphatically declared others.

(It's strange, isn't it, how so many people who are always shouting "impossible" are constantly being confused by someone up and doing it?)

That's exactly the way things turned out in the almond-growing industry at Paso Robles, California. Many who were the most skeptical—who said "it's impossible" and who most obstinately refused to believe that real money—BIG MONEY—could be made out of almond growing at Paso Robles, are the very ones who are now most emphatic in their declarations that YOU could not possibly make a safer, more profitable investment than to place your idle funds in a Paso Robles almond orchard.

We have been telling the public that $250 to $300 an acre from almonds is a most conservative estimate of net returns because we have made this estimate on the basis of 25c per pound—70 trees to the acre—20 pounds per tree, or 1400 pounds per acre, from 8-year-old trees, after making a most liberal deduction for all expenses incidental to growing and harvesting the crop. Last year the price was 25c. Now read this quotation from the New York Commercial, date of Wednesday, September 10, 1919:

> The California Almond Growers Association yesterday made public their prices on new crop almonds. The prices were as follows: Nonpariels, 32½ cents per pound; I. X. L.'s, 31½ cents per pound; Ne Plus Ultra, 30½ cents per pound.

Do you wonder that, with bumper crops at from 30½c to 32½c per pound, the almond growers in the Paso Robles district are glad beyond measure that they invested their surplus earnings in this great enterprise? Do you wonder that they are urging their friends to grasp the same opportunity now which they, themselves, grasped just a few short years ago?

There's a dependable income from almond growing in California for YOU—an income that you can conservatively figure on at from

$2500 to $3000 a Year For Life From Only 10 Acres

This estimate is based on an average price of only 25 cents per pound. Yet the figures show that there has been a constantly increasing demand for California almonds in the past with a corresponding price advance. Today the demand is greater than the supply and prices are higher than ever. Growers at Paso Robles confidently predict that next year's price will be as high as 35 cents, and perhaps higher. So you can easily see how increasingly profitable the almond industry in the Paso Robles district is. Recent crop yields have been more than 20 pounds per tree—from 25 to 30 pounds from 8½-year-old trees come nearer telling the true story. Figure the additional profits on this basis.

Investigate This Opportunity—Now

We want you to get all the facts about this remarkable investment opportunity. We want you to meet personally the men who are pushing this big almond-growing project so rapidly to the front. We want to show you how easy it is to own an Almond Orchard, share in the yearly profits and live in plenty for the rest of your life.

We members of the Associated Almond Growers of Paso Robles have secured a tract of almond land near the city of Paso Robles in the heart of the beautiful Salinas Valley, about 16 miles from the Pacific coast and about midway between San Francisco and Los Angeles.

We have divided this tract up into 10-acre units —AND THEY ARE GOING FAST.

Monthly Payment Plan

A small initial payment and balance in monthly payments —these are our easy terms by which you secure one of these properties which will increase in value every year. Where else can you invest your money so safely and have an assured life income—and that in California?

The Crops Pay Half the Price

You pay only half the purchase price in cash. For the balance due we accept the receipts from sales of almonds after the trees come into bearing. Your crops pay for half the purchase price—which means that before we are fully paid your orchard must be paying you.

PASO ROBLES

The Natural Home of the Almond

Desirable almond land is scarce. The acreage is less than desirable lemon land. A careful and exhaustive investigation of soil and climatic conditions throughout the entire state of California made by Mr. G. A. Nehrhood, the leading almond authority on the Pacific coast, convinced him that the conditions for almond growing in the Paso Robles district are far more favorable than in any other part of the state. Mr. Nehrhood, who is our Field Manager, made the selection of our holdings for us. Our tracts comprise the very choicest almond land in this district. No irrigation, no fertilizing required. It is soil that produces sturdy tree growth and sure crops of big, meaty nuts. In fact there has not been an almond crop failure in this district for 35 years. The full story of the peculiar sea marl adobe soil formation is most interesting. Read all about it in our book.

We Plant, Care for and Guarantee a Full Stand of 700 Bearing Trees

You must make a sharp distinction between this investment opportunity and an ordinary real estate transaction. We are not selling land in the sense that a farm is sold. We are giving you an opportunity to buy a ready-made income on easy terms.

When a 10-acre almond orchard is turned over to you, you have something more than land. We guarantee to you a full stand of 700 bearing almond trees—trees of pedigreed stock, the finest that can be grown. From the time the trees are planted the land value begins to rise. Conservative estimates place the increase at the rate of $100 per acre per year. We furnish the trees and they are planted and cared for by our almond experts under the direct supervision of Mr. Nehrhood—all without extra charge. Where is there a possible chance for you to lose? Where could you make a safer investment or one that is anywhere near as profitable?

Your Interests Absolutely Safeguarded

One of the largest trust companies in California (Capital and Surplus $2,500,000) which is custodian of the development fund of these properties, holds title to the ground and will deliver your deed when the contract is completed. You are thus safeguarded both by the responsibility of the association and by one of the largest financial institutions in California.

Make Reservation at Once for This Season's Planting

Last year many were disappointed because they did not make their reservations early enough to have their trees set out at last season's planting time. It is almost a certainty that a great many more will be disappointed this season than last. Even with our large field force and complete equipment, we can plant only a certain number of acres each season. The planting season will soon be here. The 10-acre tracts are going fast. We urge you, therefore, to come to our offices at your first opportunity and make your reservation in time to get in on this season's planting. Your share in these almond profits will begin coming your way just that much sooner.

MINNESOTA NEAR BOLSHEVISM, IS BEDE'S WARNING

Tells of Power Held by the Nonpartisan League.

"Minnesota in 1920 will go either bolshevik or American. It's an easy bet now that she will go bolshevik. The Democrats haven't a chance to carry the state. The Republicans have just a shade of advantage over the Democrats."

This was the cold blooded statement of former Congressman J. Adam Bede, made yesterday before a crowded house at the Hamilton club.

May Decide Presidency.

"The strangest situation that ever could be imagined in the face of a presidential election is being staged in Minnesota, the two Dakotas, and in the northwestern states generally," Mr. Bede said. "Take my warning now and let yourselves get next to the idea that the next presidency may be determined by a group of electors, named by the Nonpartisan league, that will bear no relation in practice or theory either with the Republican or the Democratic parties. As has been said, it is a condition and not a theory that confronts the nation, and the only noninterested party, apparently, is the nation itself."

Prepare for Struggle.

Republican managers in Illinois began taking stock of the situation that is likely to arise from the requirements of the amended primary act that is now in effect. Under the new law the thirty-five ward committeemen, Republican and Democratic, in Chicago, will have unquestioned control of party affairs until the next committee is elected in April, 1924.

The powers of the committee to be chosen on April 13 are manifold. Aside from holding the management of the party machinery during the big primary fight next September, the new committee, by law, will nominate directly all judicial candidates, Supreme, Circuit, Superior and otherwise. The committee will name the regular organization slate for mayor and city officers in 1923; and will choose the delegates from Cook county to the state conventions in May of next year, in 1922, and probably in 1924.

Two Ohio Committees Pledge Support to Wood

Columbus, O., Nov. 15.—[Special.]—Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood had an open declaration of support for the presidency from the Republican state central and the Republican state advisory committees of Ohio today. George H. Clark, chairman of the advisory committee, made public a statement in which he said it had been unanimously decided at a session of both committees to support Wood's candidacy.

OFFER REWARD FOR FUGITIVES.

Sioux City, Ia., Nov. 15.—Citizens of Le Mars, Ia., today raised $2,500 reward for the capture "dead or alive" of the five prisoners who escaped from the Le Mars county jail last night after one of their number shot and wounded Sheriff Hugh Maxwell and his son William.

LANDIS HOLDS BANKRUPTS AND CLERK TO JURY

Judge Landis put a whirlwind finish to his investigations into dealings of the defunct Consolidated Cloak and Suit company last night by ordering I. and J. Alter, the two heads of the bankrupt company, and its bookkeeper to the grand jury under heavy bonds.

"Fifteen thousand dollar bonds will be about right for Isaac and Jacob," he ordered, concluding the night court hearing. "They are commercial buccaneers and I cannot take the responsibility of letting them go. Hold the bookkeeper, too."

The Alter brothers failed in October and the Central Trust company was named receiver. Investigations by attorneys for the receiver and creditors disclosed irregularities in the company's stock manipulation. In the hearing Judge Landis also discovered that both brothers had attempted to conceal assets, one having stored $3,000 worth of goods in a warehouse for safe keeping when the legal proceedings started. A total of $59,000 in liabilities and about $39,000 in assets was announced and the judge refused the offer of the brothers to make cash settlement of 50 cents on the dollar.

Lawrence Kujavski, bookkeeper, was held because of his reluctance to testify.

FIRE IN SANTA'S FACTORY BURNS $30,000 IN TOYS

Six women working overtime in the finishing department of the Chicago Toy Manufacturing company, 1815-19 Orchard street, were driven from their benches on the main floor late yesterday afternoon by a mysterious fire on the second floor of the two story structure. Thirty thousand dollars' worth of toys intended for the Christmas market were destroyed.

Fire which the police believe was caused by a cigaret tossed into some rubbish caused damage estimated at $50,000 in the three story brick building occupied by the Sisco Brothers Candy company at 616 South Racine avenue. Much of the loss was in candy stored for the Christmas holidays. Hundreds of boxes of chocolates and bonbons were thrown into the street and children fought for the sweets. Special police were required to drive the crowd away.

All the employés with the exception of caretakers had left at noon.

Three families were made homeless when fire swept three frame dwellings at Fifty-seven street and Princeton avenue. Acting Captain Joseph Schumacker was severely cut and bruised when he fell through the second floor of one of the buildings.

FRANKLIN CAR Reliability and Air Cooling Superiority Again Demonstrated by a 98.2 Mile Non-Stop Low Gear Run Ending at Top of Famous Mt. Washington

ON August 17th, a Franklin stock model touring car ran all the way from Portland, Maine, to the top of Mt. Washington in New Hampshire on low gear without a stop. This remarkable feat is the latest public proof of the superiority of Franklin Direct Air Cooling (no water to boil or freeze).

Direct Air Cooling, eliminating Radiator, Water, and 176 other Delicate Parts, means less Weight, less Trouble, greater Simplicity, and better Results, as this test shows.

This car, just such a one as thousands of Franklin owners are driving all over the country, carried three official observers besides its driver and averaged 11.1 miles per hour—on low gear.

The Franklin had already run ninety miles on low gear without a stop before reaching the base of Mt. Washington—in itself a test never duplicated by other cars.

Then, without halt, came the real test the Franklin had set out to perform—a climb to the top of Mt. Washington, an elevation of 6290 feet.

Rain soaked, slippery roads; no chains; no stops permitted—these were the added difficulties to a performance generally considered impossible even under the best conditions. But the Franklin reached the summit overcame the final obstacle of a 27% grade in perfect running shape and returned to Portland the same day.

By official observation, the Franklin did not show the slightest trace of wear and tear or overheating, its engine performing with absolute regularity on all grades as well as on level going.

Ability for eighteen years to demonstrate consistently this kind of performance is what has made the Franklin known as the most practical fine car.

Winter's Icy Blasts Will Soon Be Here

SAVE yourself trouble. Save yourself discomfort. Save your family colds and illnesses. Install Scientific Combustion now.

Thousands of homes will be scientifically heated this year. Will you go along the old way? Remember, coal is costly. Every pound saved is money in your pocket. Cold rooms are a menace. Dependable, scientific heat means less illness—less expense.

Let Science, through the wonderful Weil-McLain Scientific Combustion Boiler, guide your heating. In this modern boiler each part and each function is the result of most careful study and scientific analysis. Here you find no odd or eccentric features. Simplicity and dependability are predominant. For Science, during 29 years of boiler analysis, has proved that exaggerated "selling features" are a positive detriment to heating efficiency. They distort the functioning of the boiler. They cause "boiler indigestion"—which means waste of fuel and loss of heat energy.

In these modern boilers Scientific Combustion has been perfected. It is one of the great heating achievements. It means a wonderful advance in home heating and a minimum of waste, as hundreds of owners can tell you.

Now is the time to investigate. Weil-McLain Scientific Combustion Boilers are naturally in great demand. Our production is strained to the limit. Whether or not you will be able to have one this year will depend entirely upon how promptly you act.

Visit our display rooms at once. See your architect or steamfitter. In the meantime write for our catalog and descriptive literature.

CROSSED WIRES MARK CITY FIGHT ON PHONE RATES

Experts Put in Position of Opposing Move That Bemis Urged.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

The city of Chicago is in a queer position in fighting part of the proposed rate schedule of the Chicago Telephone company.

The administration is presenting its opposition through Special Counsel Chester Cleveland. The city council, through the committee on gas, oil, and electric light, has employed W. H. Crumb as "a practical telephone expert."

They work together before the utility commission, opposing the company and representing the phone users.

Are thay opposing the proposed abolition of commuted trunk lines? Are they fighting the proposed elimination of flat rate business lines? If they are aiming in those directions, they will find that fires have been built behind them.

Where the Wires Cross.

Edward W. Bemis, an expert who was employed by the committee on gas, oil, and electric light, has advocated the abolition of those services. He did it as an employe of that committee. He did it in an official report to that committee, dated Jan. 31 last. The report favors the company's program.

In his report, the professor asks: "Are the present rates discriminatory?" and then answers in the affirmative. He says:

"There are two rates, and fortunately only two, that under the recent practice of the Illinois and other state commissions probably would be held discriminatory, if the case ever came before our state body.'"

That is exactly the spot at which it is resting at present.

Large Users Involved.

Continuing, his report reads:

"Only two classes of consumers, aggregating less than 10,000 out of about 500,000 telephone subscribers within the city, are involved, and they are the large users.

"In 1913 the city council, with the hearty indorsement of the telephone company, agreed that two classes of business service, namely, commuted trunks and flat service lines, should not be open to new subscribers. It is the tendency of commission regulation to hold a rate discriminatory and illegal when it is not open to all similarly situated. . . .

"A brief survey of the two rates within the city will show the situation.

"Commuted Trunks—This service consists of a pair of wires, sometimes called a trunk, extending from the subscriber's station to the central exchange, at a rate of $1 a day, with no charge for messages going over it. A business house having a large number of outgoing messages will throw as many messages as possible on to such a line."

Backs Council Move.

After telling of the decrease in these lines and a test of the number of messages per trunk which had been made, Prof. Bemis reiterates that this service is discriminatory because it is not open to every one. It is not open because the city council closed it, and the professor in a statement at the time, dated May 12, 1913, indicated his sympathy with the extension of measured service.

On Jan. 31 last Prof. Bemis confirms this interpretation as follows:

"This service (commuted trunk) comes under the usual definition of discrimination used by state commissions, being a service that is not open to every one who may be willing to pay the charge. The favored few large users enjoy this special privilege. If the commuted trunk service be abolished, it is estimated by Mr. Cummings that . . . the revenue would increase from $599,330 from those commuted calls to $718,584, or $119,254."

Flat Rates Barred, Too.

Switching to flat rate business lines, the report goes on:

"The only other Chicago rate that is usually recognized as discriminatory by our state commissions is that of the flat rate business lines, for which $125 a year is paid. Since June, 1913, no new subscribers could obtain this service, while the small users heretofore taking this service were tempted by new rates in 1913 to switch to measured service.

"Consequently the number of subscribers retaining this service fell from 12,994 on June 30, 1913, to 7,923 on July 31, 1918.

"It has been computed by Mr. Cummings that the abolition of the flat rate business service, leaving all the subscribers to take the limited flat rate if they desire, would . . . increase the revenue $314,060 yearly."

Cites Combined Gain.

The professor then sets out the estimated increase in revenue of $433,314, combining the two items.

It is not expected the city can get far in combating the company's desire for the abolition of these two services with the former city adviser and expert saying they are discriminatory.

He concludes his report with: "Nothing is here presented with respect to the other flat rates which the company has asked us to abolish, and nothing is presented upon the general proposition of flat versus metered service, but these matters can be taken up later if desired."

If he made a subsequent report, it has not been given out for publication.

STAR GAZING AT 1 PLAY 26 DAYS BORES STATE AID

William Price of the division of factory inspection is getting just a little bored with this Rialto life. Bill has been at every performance of "Daddies," the attraction at Powers' theater, since its opening on Oct. 20—twenty-six days ago. His business is to attend the show, observe whether Lorna, Aida, Mildred, and the two other juvenile stars appear on the stage, and then return to his office and write charges against the theatrical management for violation of the Illinois child labor law. To date 168 cases have been filed with the clerk of the Municipal court.

"It's very annoying, you know," said Bill yesterday, lifting an imaginary monocle to his eye. "If the bloomin' playwright had made the infants come on in the first act I would not object, but one child blows into focus in the second act and the others don't arrive until the fourth.

"I know all the lines in the piece now. When we win out in court Monday I'll be able to take the place of all five of those kids."

The theater management was given ample warning that the state would prosecute, according to Robert S. Jones, chief state factory inspector.

"They came to me about two weeks before the show arrived in town, and I told them that my duty under the law compelled me to file charges against them if they allowed the children to appear," he said. "The Illinois child labor law, which prohibits the employing of children under 16 in any theater, is very strict. The minimum fine for each child per performance is $5, while the maximum is $100."

The case was originally called for Oct. 28, after thirty identical charges had been filed against the management, but it was continued. It will be heard tomorrow in Judge Holmes' court.

On the same day in the Juvenile court Judge Arnold will hear the plea of the Juvenile Protective association asking that the little stars be declared delinquent.

OLD BOND EVILS BOB UP AS LIEN LAW IS REPEALED

Forfeitures on Increase and Crooks Escape Through 'Sharks.'

Bond forfeitures in the Criminal court branches of the Municipal court have increased at the rate of $1,500,000 a year since the repeal of the law making the scheduling of real estate as surety a lien on the property as long as the bonds were in force.

Chief Justice Olson said yesterday he is at his wits' end to remedy what he termed a serious situation. All sorts of offenders are at liberty under such forfeitures.

The law repealed by the legislature was in effect until June 30 last, and under it owners of real estate were careful about going on bonds, fearful of forfeitures and loss of property.

Some notorious criminals have taken advantage of the repeal, it is declared, and it has become necessary for the chief justice to add weekly to the list of disqualified bondsmen. But "sharks" have bulle up a remunerative clientele by scheduling fractional bits of property in outlying sections.

Some Typical Cases.

The forfeited bonds range from $500 to $10,000 and were supplied as surety for every description of offender. An assault with intent to commit murder was charged against J. Horstman before Judge Holmes some time ago. There were two charges of this character against him and two bonds were exacted, one for $10,000 and the other for $3,500. A. Lieberman appears as surety in both instances. The list issued yesterday of persons disqualified as bondsmen contains the name of Annette Lieberman.

William Zimmerman was arrested for the alleged receiving of stolen property. His bonds were fixed under two charges in the sum of $5,000 each and were signed by John J. Meyers and Marie Rabinovitch. Both names appear on the "blacklist."

In August forfeitures in state cases in the Municipal court totaled about $30,000. In October they had mounted to $125,000 and at least sixty defendants failed of appearance. Among these were two pay roll bandits, bonded for $30,000, who "jumped," but were recaptured by the police.

Olson Tells Situation.

In a statement berating the activities of professional bondsmen, Judge Olson said yesterday:

"Professional bondsmen are taking advantage of the change in the law to obtain title to pieces of property and schedule them on bonds in serious cases, in the confidence that if the bonds are forfeited they can transfer their property to others and escape any serious penalty.

"In one instance recently a man who had been placed on the list of disqualified bondsmen because he had caused property on which he claimed an equity of only $10,000 to be accepted on bonds of $30,000, transferred the property through a third party to another bondsman, who scheduled it on five bonds amounting to $11,000 by going to three different judges.

"Two bonds for $1,000 and $2,000, respectively, in which Bondsman No. 1 scheduled the property have been forfeited within a few days, and yesterday one bond for $2,500, in which Bondsman No. 2 scheduled the same property, was forfeited.

"This property has been placed on the blacklist and cannot be used again, but there is nothing to prevent other persons from using other pieces of property in a similar manner."

Auto Suspect Confesses $9,000 Theft from Armour

George Waldson, alias George Wedden, of Indianapolis, one of three alleged automobile thieves seized several days ago in the New Southern hotel, is said to have admitted yesterday to the police that six months ago, under the name of Wedden he fled from Jacksonville, Fla., with $9,000 belonging to Armour & Co. He said he was a cashier for the firm.

NO SECRETS IN LANDIS' COURT, WITNESS TOLD

Forced to Bare Facts in Pan Motor Hearing.

Confidential facts may be safe in the offices of consulting engineers, but in the court of federal Judge Landis they're open to the world.

F. L. Holman, Chicago automobile expert, learned this at first hand yesterday when he took the stand in the Pan Motor company trial and testified he believed that in 1916 the Pan company could have produced Pan cars at a cost of about $475 each. The defense brought out this testimony to justify the wholesale advertising promises which were made to prospective purchasers of Pan stock.

Nothing Is Confidential.

"Upon what do you base your estimate?" the witness was asked by Attorney Epstein for the prosecution.

"The details are confidential," he replied.

"Mr. Witness," interposed Judge Landis, "nothing is confidential in this courtroom. We don't know the meaning of the word. The judge will take responsibility for broken trade confidences."

The witness then declared he based his conclusions upon the production of 50,000 cars, all parts of which should be made in the Pan plant.

Puts Cost Higher.

N. T. Planche, another auto expert, of Flint, Mich., testified he believed the Pan company could have made cars back in 1916 to sell for from $675 to $700 with a profit of $75. Pan advertisements announced the "Queen of the Highway" with features of the best cars on the market to sell for about $500.

Character witnesses for the Pan directors testified during the remainder of the hearing.

State Senator J. D. Sullivan of St. Cloud, Minn., testified that he assisted in framing the blue sky law of Minnesota and was instrumental in getting the license for the Pan Motor company to sell stock in that state. Under the agreement on which the blue sky law permit was issued for the sale of the stock, the company was to receive 75 per cent of the sales and the promoters were to receive the other 25 per cent.

Pandolfo objected to this after the license had been granted and the directors, according to the testimony of Senator Sullivan, held a meeting and settled the differences which had arisen by voting to allow Pandolfo an additional 25 per cent for advertising the car.

The case will be resumed Monday.

MODERN KNIGHT IN GALLANT FIGHT ON CORSET TAX

Whoops, my dear, but have you bought your winter corset yet? If not, see Attorney Byron W. Wight before you are off with the old and on with the new. Maybe Friend Hubby won't have to pay that luxury tax.

In a petition to Congressman James R. Mann, Attorney Wight asks that he use his best "influence and efforts to secure favorable legislation repealing the luxury tax on ladies' corsets of the value of $15 or under, as the same is a necessity and not a luxury. Furthermore, said tax is a discrimination between small and slender persons and large and portly persons, and is in violation of the constitutional rights of women."

Among the signatures affixed to the petition are those of Mrs. Vincent Walsh, Mrs. John C. Black, Mrs. R. C. Williams, Miss Betty Scott, Mrs. W. D. Curtis, and Miss Kittie Payne. David R. Forgan and Dennis J. Egan are among the male signatories.

The Columbia Motors officials are intelligent, progressive, practical men who know the automobile game and have proved their knowledge of manufacturing and finance by bringing the company through the war period. They also have a keen insight regarding what the public wants, as in our opinion there is no doubt but what the lines of the Columbia Six are as attractive as those of any medium priced car on the market. In short, we believe the management is good, that the production is excellent, and we know positively that they have plenty of capital with which to finance themselves, and could market twice as many cars as they are producing at present.

In view of the existing conditions in the automobile industry, and the prosperity which is in store for this industry during the next four or five years, we believe that Columbia Motors offers investors and speculators a chance to participate in a stock that should be a large dividend payer, and will probably sell at a much higher price. We advise its immediate purchase.

Health in Apples

"There ain't goin' to be no core"

What our doctor told Dad—

"We gotta WHOLE BOX o' Rome Beauty apples at our house!

"Good? Oh, boy! You just TRY one!

"Dad used to lock 'em up to keep us from eatin' so many, but he's learned different.

"You see, my kid sister was sick, an' when the doctor came, he looks little sis over, gets her to poke out her tongue, an' when she did that he said, 'Ah-h-h! Uh-huh!' 'cause he knew right away what was the matter.

"He turns to dad and says, 'I can give you pills an' things to fix her up, but after she gets O. K. this time, I know a better way to keep all the little folks in fine trim. You know that old sayin', "An apple a day keeps the doctor away"? Well, there's more truth than poetry in it.'

"It sounded funny for a doctor to be knockin' the pill box an' prescribin' apples, but he's a good doctor, been doctorin' our family long as I can remember. He chucks you under the chin an' cheers you up when you're feelin' bum.

"'I'm a kind of a 'chinest doctor,' he says. 'I believe in KEEPIN' people well instead of curin' 'em after they get sick. There's so much sickness in the world to keep a doctor busy that people who CAN keep well ought to do it.'

"Then the doctor turns to me an' says, 'How about it, Billy? Wouldn't you rather have a box of apples come to the house than me?' 'You bet your life,' I said, an' then I felt kind o' 'shamed, 'cause the doctor is such a good scout, an' I said, 'No, I didn't mean that; I like to see you an' the apples too!'

"He an' dad laughed; an' then the doc went on an' told how we ought to eat apples every day. He said they helped give a feller good red blood, 'cause they got iron in 'em. I don't mean nails; I mean that bitter stuff mother used to give me out o' a bottle when I was 'nemic an' run down after havin' the Flu. It's funny how iron can be in apples—they taste so GOOD.

"An' then he went on to tell how an apple was a natural drug store. It's got calcium, phosphorus, potassium and a lot o' other stuff with names too long for me to remember, but he said they were just what growin' children ought to have.

"Well, I'M growin' to beat the band, ain't I?

"The doctor told dad that one o' the good things about eatin' lots o' apples was that people didn't have to take pills an' oils an' things so much to keep their system workin' right. He said, 'When your youngsters eat between meals, let 'em eat apples—they are lots better for 'em than most of the other truck they eat.

"'Then,' he said, 'an apple makes a good toothbrush. Eat an apple at night an' there's something in the juice that helps clean your teeth.' Gee! I'd rather brush my teeth with an apple any night than a toothbrush. He didn't say we could quit toothbrushin', but he said apples would HELP.

"When dad asked him what kind of apples to get, he said, 'Get the best; you won't save anything buyin' any other kind.' So dad ordered a whole box of Rome Beauties from our grocer. They grow out in the northwest where the snow-capped mountains are. I've seen the pitchers in my geography. An' good? Oh, boy! You just oughter eat a baked Rome Beauty for breakfast—SOME feed! Mother says the Washington-Oregon-Idaho Rome is the best bakin' apple in the world, an' SHE KNOWS. She says these apples cost less a pound, than most other foods do by the pound. An' there ain't no waste in these apples, no bad spots an' things. I eat 'em core an' all. Mother feeds baked apple and scraped fresh apple to the baby, an' you bet he likes it.

"Well, we're havin' a big time out at our house. Dad says a box of Rome Beauties don't cost as much as the doctor's visit an' medicine—an' it's a lot more fun.

"There's Spitzenbergs, an' Delicious varieties, too, an' they're mighty good. Some like 'em better'n Romes—but if they're packed in a box (it holds a bushel) an' come from Washington, Oregon or Idaho, you can bet your life they'll be fine an' full o' flavor.

"Come over an' see us some time an' I'll let you try a Rome Beauty for yourself—an' say! You can eat 'em in the dark.

"Yours for a good feed, a good time an' good health, BILLY BOOSTER."

Largest shipping orders of the week featured the hog trade yesterday and after a weak start prices advanced 10c over Friday's close, with competition lively between packers and outside buyers. Best sold at $14.55, with general average $14.30, being narrowest "spread" since June. Closing prices were 80@90c lower than previous Saturday, while pigs closed steady, best 110 lb averages outselling top hogs 20c at $14.75.

Week's receipts of hogs at 206,800 were largest since June, while the estimated average weight at 226 lbs was lightest since last January, standing 30 lbs lighter than the closing week of August. Average previous week, 232 lbs, and a year ago, 225 lbs. Traders are looking for a good run next week, but are counting on higher prices Monday.

Notwithstanding a liberal supply of cattle the last week, trade was in healthy shape, with prices strong to 50c above the close of the previous week for most kinds. Late trade in sheep and lambs was highest of the week, with choicest lambs quotable at $15.25.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 14,000 cattle, 42,000 hogs, and 40,000 sheep, against 35,974 cattle, 51,567 hogs, and 36,440 sheep the corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's estimated receipts, 95,000 cattle, 215,000 hogs, and 140,000 sheep.

Investors Tired of Waiting.

If every person in the United States who has an ownership interest in railway and electric traction securities should write to the lawmakers at Washington and the rate makers at the various state capitals these representatives of the people would experience the surprise of their lives. They know now that there is an urgent need of putting the companies on a sound basis. The flood of letters would show them that the need is backed by the demands of many millions of people.

The result might be an end of dodging the issue and the beginning of an earnest effort to meet the situation and apply adequate remedies.

It is well known to everybody that the credit structure of the country rests in great part on railway and utility bonds and that these securities have been shrinking in average market value for some years, with only occasional and temporary interruptions. Yet, with a large part of the population directly interested in having the process stopped and simple justice demanding it, the goal seems to be almost as far away as ever.

It appears to be much easier to shilly-shally and becloud the issue with incidental questions than to meet it squarely. The fact is that the various lines of transportation must be operated and the cost of operating and maintaining them must be met. The simplest and fairest way to meet the expenses is for the people who use the lines to pay a fair price for service rendered. Any other attempted solution will be more costly in the end.

Wisconsin Valley Electric.

A. G., Berea, O.—The Wisconsin Valley Electric company operates electric railways, and furnishes power and light, serving a population of 18,000. There were outstanding at last accounts, $925,000 of refunding bonds, subject to $237,000 of underlying issues. Gross earnings have increased steadily for years. Net increased till 1918, when there was a small decline, but, even with that, interest was earned two and one-half times. The refunding bonds are well secured. The market for them is narrow.

Brief Answers.

W. S., Delta, O.—The St. Louis and San Francisco income bonds are entitled to interest only if earned. Interest was not earned last year, but was paid out of government compensation. Earnings are better this year. Indications are that this interest will be earned in full.

M. L.—The new stock recently authorized by the Sinclair Consolidated Oil corporation was offered to stockholders at $60 a share.

CHICAGO CURB STOCKS

Price changes in local unlisted securities have been irregular, most issues acting in sympathy with the New York market. Butler Brothers, after selling at 277, reacted to sales at 258, but regained most of its loss at the close, 270 being bid, with stock offered at 273. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply was in good demand the forepart of the week at 240, but sold off to sales at 238, very little trading taking place. Gossard Corset common was steady, trades being made at 40. Linderman Steel and Machine had a substantial rise to sales at 28, but was freely offered at this price, and 24 was the best bid at the close. Considerable inquiry existed for Wahl preferred, advancing 3 point to sales at 88½, closing at 87 to 89. Harris Brothers was unchanged at 59 to 62.

Bucyrus preferred was the feature of the implement group, advancing to 95 bid with stock offered at 96½. The common was unchanged at 33 to 34. Avery common was in good demand at 118, with stock offered at 123. Transactions were reported in Moline Plow preferred at 99½, stock was offered at this price at the close, with bids of 98½. Emerson Brantingham preferred was neglected at 92 to 93, while the common changed hands at 20¾.

Sugar issues were inclined toward dullness, Columbia declining to 19½. This price was bid at the close with stock offered at 20. Holland sold at 17, but closed at 17½ bid, offered at 18¼. Michigan was quoted 13½ to 14, and Utah Idaho 8⅜ to 9¼.

Quite a volume of trading took place in Continental Motors between 12½ and 13, closing at 13 to 13½. Paige-Detroit was easier at 43 to 45, and Hupp at 12¼ to 12¾. Stearns was traded in at 85, but closed stronger at 84 bid, offered at 86. Reo declined to sales at 30, closing at 31½ to 32½.

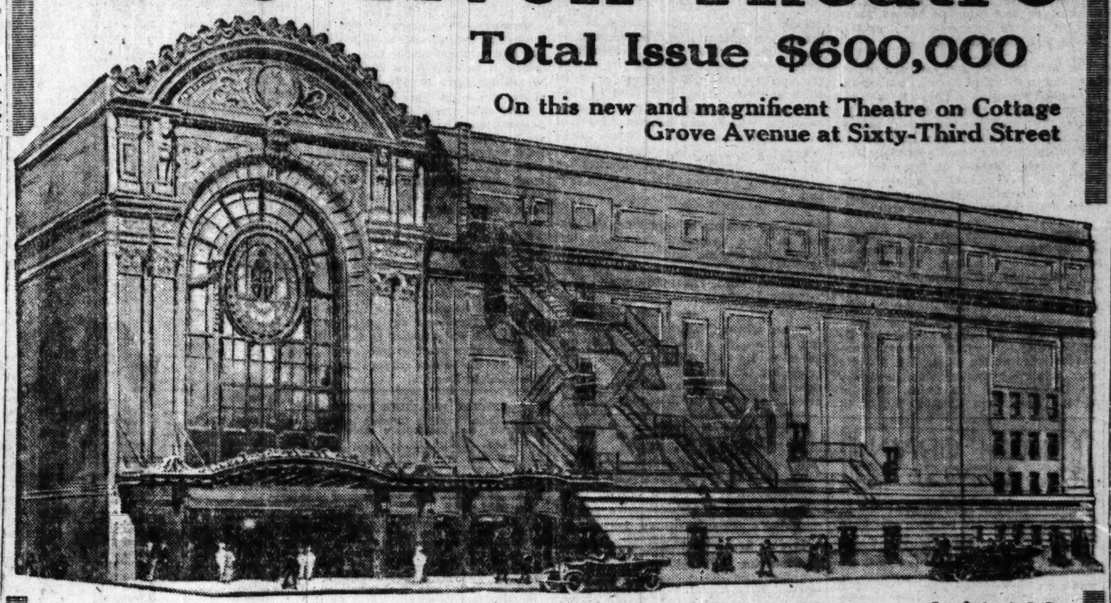
First Mortgage Bonds—Secured by

6% Balaban & Katz Tivoli Theatre

Total Issue $600,000

On this new and magnificent Theatre on Cottage Grove Avenue at Sixty-Third Street



Serial Gold Bonds in Denominations of $100, $500 and $1,000

OFFERED AT PAR and accrued interest, subject to prior sale. Dated November 1, 1919, with semi-annual payments of $20,000 on and after November 1, 1921, and $400,000 November 1, 1926. Redeemable at 103 in reverse numerical order.

THE SECURITY

A First Mortgage on the land, 225 ft. frontage, and the new Tivoli Theatre now under construction, including the furnishings and equipment. At completion this theatre is to be the most modern of this class in the city—a seating capacity of 4,000, with lobby and promenade for 1,200 additional waiting for admittance; will also include stage 125x40.

THE LOCATION

of the Tivoli, near the elevated, at a prominent transfer corner, surrounded by a nearby population of over 500,000, one of the best locations for a place of amusement outside of the Loop. The place is easily accessible by transportation and therefore will be favored by a patronage from outside the immediate neighborhood.

VALUATION—INCOME

The land, building, furnishings and equipment are estimated to be worth $900,000 at completion. The annual net income of the Tivoli, based on that which is derived from the other high-class houses operated by the same owners and managers, estimated about four times the amount required to pay the maximum interest charge.

SAFEGUARDED

Ample Security; Sufficiency of Income; Monthly Deposits of one-twelfth annual requirement to pay interest and maturing bonds; ideal location for improvements of this character; Chicago Title and Trust Co. guarantee of title; Fire Insurance to protect bondholders; careful preparation of the Mortgage and Bonds and all legal details.

ESTIMATED EARNINGS

The Balaban and Katz Theatres have been extremely profitable and the annual earnings from this magnificent 4,000 seat theatre are based upon the receipts derived from their other Chicago properties, the "RIVIERA" and "CENTRAL PARK" theatres. The Bonds are also the personal obligation of Balaban and Katz in addition to being a First Mortgage on the property.

RESERVATIONS

May now be made for immediate or future settlement. Ask either of the joint underwriters for additional information. Ask for complete descriptive Tivoli circular now in preparation—read it. These Bonds are recommended as a safe investment in any amount: $100, $500, $1,000 or more.

PARTIAL PAYMENTS These Bonds can be bought on a monthly payment plan and the smaller denominations can be exchanged without cost when securities of larger amounts are purchased.

CANDY STOCKS

Stocks in the leading Candy enterprises of the country have had a remarkable advance during the past year. This is due to the splendid prosperity enjoyed by the industry and its bright outlook for the future. While many of the Candy stocks now listed on the different exchanges may advance in price from their present market levels, it is our recommendation that investors who are seeking the greatest safety, together with the best chance of quick profit taking, should give first consideration to such an issue as American Candy Company shares now being offered at a low underwriting price. The common stock is earning about 25% after all taxes on the present offering price and will, in our judgment, attain a much higher market value in the near future. Application will be made to list this stock on the Chicago and St. Louis Stock Exchanges. Write for descriptive circular giving details and showing earnings during the past 25 years.

LARGE RECEIPTS BRING DROP IN PRICE OF CORN

Close at Lowest, with Near Futures the Weakest.

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Weakness in cash corn here and in outside markets, with expectations of increased receipts, furnished the basis for a great deal of liquidation and a switching from December to May, with the principal weakness in the near delivery and a close at almost the lowest, with losses of 2⅝c.

Distant futures were off 1¼c to 1⅞c, the latter on January. In oats there was more pressure on sellers, with losses of ½@⅝c, December leading. Shorts were the buyers of rye and gains were ½@⅝c, while barley, after being strong early, slumped at the last, and futures lost 3¾@3¼c, while cash prices were higher. Southwestern corn markets were ⅜@⅝c lower, December leading the decline. Oats in Minneapolis lost ⅝@¾c, and in Winnipeg ½@⅝c, although receipts there were only 121 cars.

Closing trades, compared with a week ago, reported losses on corn of 2½@5c, the latter on December. Oats, however, gained ⅝@1¼c, and rye was 1¾c lower to 1½c higher, while barley futures were up 3@4c. Lower prices were made for all provisions, with losses on shorts 80c, Lard, 60@87½c, and short ribs, 25@60c.

Corn in Weak Close.

A bad break in foreign exchange, with sterling and marks at new low figures, combined with increased receipts, lower cash prices, and prospects of 300 to 400 cars being received Monday, resulted in corn futures weakening materially. Sentiment became very bearish, and there was scattered liquidation by commission houses at times.

At the low point prices were off 1⅜@3c, with December leading. Week end evening up on the part of shorts and buying against bids checked the decline, and the finish was with December at $1.27¾, May at $1.23½, and July at $1.22⅝.

Clear and cold weather prevailed over the belt, and the weekly forecast indicated generally favorable conditions for the coming week, with occasional rain or snow storms. Receipts were 134 cars, with sample values 2@6c lower, closing at the low point. Eastern demand was moderate, with shipping sales 60,000 bu.

Oats Have Narrow Range.

Commission houses were fair sellers of oats early, but later there was good buying against bids, and by some of the early sellers, and the close was fractionally lower, with December at 71⅞c and May at 74⅝c.

There was little in the new developments that attracted attention, and the general disposition was to await some radical change in the situation. Domestic call was slow, with shipping sales 30,000 bu. Sample values were unchanged to ⅜c lower, with receipts 53 cars.

New High for Barley.

Spot barley advanced 3@4c to a new high figure on the crop, with sales at $1.40@1.50. Receipts, 21 cars. Maltsters and shippers were good buyers. Futures were firm early, but broke toward the last on scattered selling that found the market poorly supported.

Rye was in good demand. The heavy covering by shorts on Friday absorbed the surplus in the pit, and shorts found little for sale. Futures closed ½@⅞c higher. Spoht No. 2 sold at $1.35¾. Receipts, 10 cars.

Provision Prices Lower.

A little pressure on provision futures, combined with limited support, carried prices down. Liquidation was on in November lard and it lost 30c. The entire list closed at the bottom with moderate net losses. Cash demand for lard and meats was lighter, although there was little business in domestic meats. Weakness in corn and hogs were the depressing factors. Shipments of lard and meats for the week were 43,556,000 lbs, or 3,500,000 lbs more than the previous week and 11,000,000 lbs in excess of last year. Packing here since Nov. 1 aggregates 366,000 hogs, or 117,000 short of last year. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

A feature in the corn trade that is encouraging short selling, particularly of December, is the difficulty in finding buyers for corn offered to arrive from the country. This has been noticeable for several days, but was strikingly so yesterday. Buyers who usually are in the market for corn for shipment within five to ten days are indifferent about making any bids, even at big discounts under the market. Evidently buyers are fearing an increased movement from the country, which is likely this week, although the run the last week was the smallest at this time in recent years, Chicago getting only 906,000 bu, or 847,000 bu less than last year.

The principal demand for corn of late has been to fill sales for the first half of November shipment in the east, which is being satisfied. It was noticeable that houses that were on the selling side of December for several days were the best buyers on the late break yesterday, covering shorts. Selling of December and buying of May was on to a fair extent, with the December off 1¼c at one time, while May practically stood still.

Longs in December oats were changing to May yesterday at 2⅞c. A week ago the spread was 3½c to 3¾c. The seaboard intimates that the demand for heavy oats is mostly over, but it is claimed that they will have to take lighter weights later. No. 2 white oats in the sample market, although selling at 4¼c over December early in the day, were not wanted at that price at the close. No. 3 whites were relatively weaker, compared with the December, at the finish. Receipts for the week were 1,216,000 bu, or the lightest at this time in over five years, and 1,123,000 bu short of last year.

A Nebraska grain dealer who operates a large number of stations in that state and is regarded as one of the best grain men in the trade says that Nebraska farmers have sold very little corn and are asking $1.50. He does not expect that they will sell any corn before January. Heavy rains have prevented picking and cribbing and little corn has been removed.

That the supply and demand is the greatest regulator of prices is seen in the action of wheat values, which have advanced to the highest of the season for springs with No. 1 dark northern $3.10 and No. 1 northern $3.00 in Chicago and Minneapolis. There is no speculation in wheat, and millers have had to advance prices to get it. These prices are 82c above the government's basis. All wheat prices in the open market are a shade over the basic for the same reason.

Primary receipts of wheat for the season to date aggregate 249,962,000 bu; corn, 7,405,000 bu, and oats, 77,023,000 bu. Last year wheat receipts were 280,925,000 bu corn, 12,241,000 bu, and oats, 126,535,000 bu.

Spring wheat flours are $14 to the retail trade and an advance of $1 per barrel within a short time. Spring wheat prices are the highest of the season, with light offerings. Millers in the northwest are buying wheat in Chicago.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

Shipping sales of cash grain at Chicago Saturday were 60,000 bu corn and 30,000 bu oats.

Spring wheat at Chicago advanced 5@10c to a new high level on the crop, and closed at 5c premium over Minneapolis. Offerings were small and demand good. Hard winters were firm and red unchanged to 1c higher. Receipts, 63 cars.

Offerings of cash corn were larger and in excess of the demand. Prices declined 2@6c with new leading, and closed at the bottom. Receipts, 134 cars.

Cash oats were relatively firmer than the December, and sample values at Chicago and Peoria were unchanged to ½c lower. Receipts, 53 cars.

COTTON HEAVY; LOSSES CLOSE

New York, Nov. 15.—Buying support was poor. Heavy selling by one of the largest houses that recently bought on a large scale lowered prices. The market closed near the lowest, with near futures off 30 points and distant ones off 78 to 130 more. Wall street and western longs have been liquidating heavily, and there has been considerable short selling. Spot cotton in the south does not respond to the break in futures.

METAL MARKETS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—No improvement has been reported in the copper market during the last week with buyers evidently holding off for more settled general conditions. Prices have been more or less nominal in consequence with the larger agencies quoting electrolytic at 20¼@21c today, while the quotations at second hands ranged from about 20@20⅜c. Iron was unchanged.

Tin market continues steady. A better movement of supplies on docks here is reported. The price is said to be around 54½ cents per pound for Straits tin, available for immediate delivery.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—LEAD—Firm at 6.75. ZINC—Slab, steady at 8.00c.

FINANCIAL NOTES

The Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit accounts for the week ending Nov. 12, 1919, reported by 186 banks in 23 leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $1,070,763,000, compared with $1,108,759,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit accounts in twenty of these clearing house centers were $1,049,322,000, compared with $809,202,000 for the corresponding week of last year.

Members of the syndicate which underwrote the 900,000 shares of stock of the Sinclair Consolidated Oil corporation which were offered to the stockholders for subscription at $60 a share face a sharp cut in their profits. There remain 180,000 shares unsold, and a 20 per cent payment by the members has been called for by Tuesday. The syndicate soon will be dissolved and the unsubscribed stock distributed. It is understood that the stock was underwritten by the syndicate at about $56.50 a share. The closing quotation on the stock yesterday was 53¾.

Although a majority of the stocks of the Maxwell Motor company and the Chalmers Motor corporation have been deposited under the merger plan, the readjustment committee states that further deposits are necessary to give full effect to the merger, and so the time for deposit has been extended to Dec. 31. The bankers' agreement to purchase $10,000,000 notes of the new corporation has been extended to Dec. 15.

NEW YORK BANKS DECREASE LOANS IN LAST WEEK

Statement Does Not Fully Reflect Change in Conditions.

The New York associated banks decreased their loans in the last week by $65,847,000. This does not appear fully to reflect the changed conditions in the loan market occasioned by the fall in stocks in the first four days of the week.

A loss of $59,534,000 in cash appeared in the statement, and a decrease of $10,547,000 in net demand deposits. The loss in cash resulted in a decrease of $49,182,200 in the excess reserve, bringing that item down to $47,119,050. At this figure the surplus averages fairly with that shown in a number of months. But it is probable there will be some further explanation of the entire exhibit.

Figures for Week.

The treasury department reduced its balances by $36,761,000. The treasury deposit now stands at $149,780,000. The figures:

Local Banks Expand.

The banks in the Chicago federal reserve district made a large expansion in their loans at the reserve institutions. The total aggregated $24,867,573. On government securities the banks made additional loans of $7,296,093 and on other collateral, presumably commercial paper, an increase of $20,271,440.

There was a considerable demand on the city banks by commission houses following the extortionate rates charged in New York.

The reserve institution loaned to other reserve banks $3,380,000 and bought in the open market commercial bills to the extent of $11,271,967.

The figures show a considerable expansion in credit, the full significance of which is not yet apparent.

United States Deposits Gain.

Government deposits increased over $2,249,000, while federal reserve notes showed a contraction of $2,207,565. The figures:

Banks Shift Blame.

The New York banks are now accusing the commission houses of being responsible for the break in stocks because the commission houses increased unduly their loans.

It would appear that the banks cannot escape responsibility, since they were willing to lend the money, and knowingly, that the commission houses borrowed. If the loans were too large last Monday, when the decline actually began, they were too large because the banks permitted them to be so. It will stick in the general public mind that it was extremely profitable to the money interests to correct the speculative situation.

UNION TRUST COMPANY ADDS $500,000 STOCK

The Union Trust company, which recently passed its half century mark as a Chicago banking institution, will issue $500,000 additional stock, which will be offered to stockholders at $200 a share. The $1,000,000 thus derived will be divided equally between capital and surplus, making the capital $2,000,000 and the surplus $2,500,000. The bank's stock was quoted yesterday between $300 and $325 a share.

In the ten year period ended Sept. 12 the bank's deposits increased 197 per cent from $13,294,006 to $39,410,159. In percentage of increase it stands fifth among the larger Chicago banks for the ten year period.

The National Produce bank of Chicago is increasing its capital stock from $100,000 to $600,000, and surplus will be increased from $100,000 to $150,000. Its total deposits are about $6,000,000. The directors have voted to give employes a bonus of 10 per cent of yearly salaries.

LOAN TO NIGERIA.

The underwriting of a £6,200,000 6 per cent loan to Nigeria has been arranged in England. The 6 per cent rate marks a new record for a trustee investment in London.

PRICES ERRATIC, WITH RALLY IN LAST 15 MINUTES

Covering of Short Contracts Over Week End Is the Cause.

The New York Times.

New York, Nov. 15.—[Special.]—The final stock market session of the week brought erratic and nervous price movements which were forecast by the unusual action of quotations in preceding days.

The vigorous rally in the last quarter hour reflected the covering of short contracts by traders who wanted to be free of commitments over the week end and the earlier decline seemed to disclose a lack of buying power for the long account which was not surprising in the light of the money market situation.

Prices Irregular at Close.

The lineup of prices at the stroke of the closing gong on the stock exchange presented an irregular appearance that told of nothing new of market-wise import. The clearing house bank statement and the weekly report of the federal reserve bank were worthy of study jointly, chiefly to the end of finding whether or not the suggestions by reserve bank officials had had effect. It was clear enough that the banks had done something in the way of lightening their loans at the central institution.

New Low for Sterling.

Sterling exchange opened weak, in fact, the initial quotation made a new low record at 4.10¾. Franc exchange improved slightly as compared with Friday's closing quotation. As has been noted before in comment here on the pressure against sterling, the large increase of cotton exports during the week brought about a substantial expansion in offerings of bills.

The promise of this week in the stock market is of continued high call loans, for both the federal reserve bank and the member banks' statements disclosed important steps toward correcting an over-large loan account which, presumably, will be carried further.

CHICAGO....STOCK TRANSACTIONS

The Chicago stocks were again irregular, with no pronounced tendency in prices. Wahl stock showed an advance at one time of better than 2 points, but lost most of the gain. Chicago Pneumatic Tool held steady at 108, with small offerings.

Stewart-Warner did little in a market way. Trades were made in the new stock (when issued) at 43 and 42¾. After approval by the stockholders the present shares will be divided into four shares for one. A price of 43 for the new stock, therefore, is equivalent to one of 172 for the old. The closing price of the latter was 189½.

There is an impression in the market that Libby-McNeill should advance, although it did not gain yesterday. Swift & Co. shares were steady.

The Prodigal Son

In the well-known story, after the prodigal son blew in all that he had, he had to go back to work—be a producer. Then he came to himself.

Labor is at present re-enacting the first scene of this story, wasting its substance in strikes and non-productiveness.

As the workingmen of this country come to their senses, or, rather, as the sound Americanism of the workingmen in general asserts itself, employers will meet them more than half way, and the reunited family will be a happy one. There is no need for labor to descend to the stage where it "begins to be in want."

What the world needs is production—collective and individual.

THE MARKETS OF THE WORLD FILTER THRU OUR DOOR

"Oh, East is East and West is West,
And never the twain shall meet—"

So sang the poet Kipling in his immortal Ballad of East and West. He sang of the people and of the customs rather than of the products of the Orient and of the Occident. For verily the four corners of the earth do meet and become intermingled in the mighty Fuller-Morrisson stocks.

Literally do the markets of the world pour their wares through our doors. The list of the earth's market-places from which come raw ingredients, and much of the merchandise sold by us, includes almost every known land.

From far away Japan come menthol and camphor and brushes of clever workmanship. Sunny Spain and Italy contribute talc, casks of mellow olive oil, slabs of fragrant Castile soap, and saffron. South America sends us ipecac and saltpeter, while the East Indies supply oil of sandalwood, shellac and castor beans. Shipments of brushes and vials of perfume come from France. Out of Africa's dark river-heads come oil of rose geranium and buchu leaves. Asia sends civet and musk from far-flung Baltic provinces.

All these, and many other products of foreign lands, filter through Fuller-Morrisson's doors to the druggists of America. In buying power and distribution we function as one of America's best known and most efficiently systematized wholesale drug houses.

1852 marks the birth of the Fuller-Morrisson idea, which today—as then—reflects supremacy in leading those institutions having for their cornerstone—SERVICE!

Gotham's Most Beautiful Girls

From the photographs on this page, the young women pictured were awarded prizes aggregating $13,500 in the contest conducted by the New York News to discover the most beautiful girl in Greater New York. The judges were David Wark Griffith, George M. Cohan and Harrison Fisher. They did not see the prize winners, nor any of the contestants, until after the awards were made, basing their decisions entirely on the merits of the 7,500 photographs submitted. When the successful contestants were notified of their good fortune it was found that all three are working girls. Each declared that her photograph was entered in the contest because of the insistence of friends and without any serious idea of winning a prize.

Miss Alice Louise Secker ~ First Prize $10,000

PHOTOGRAPH BY REMBRANDT STUDIO COPYRIGHT BY NEWS SYNDICATE CO., INC.

Miss Secker, who won the first prize of $10,000, was born on the east side of New York 23 years ago and has been employed in a corset factory. Asked what she was going to do with her money, she said she was going to take a rest for a week at least. Having worked ever since she was 13 years old, she felt she could enjoy a vacation. She has gray eyes, light brown hair and a fragile, wistful type of beauty. Her real ambition, she declares, is to become a dressmaker. Miss Yopp was educated at St. Xavier's academy in Chicago. She moved to New York with her family two years ago and is a manicure at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel. Miss O'Brien is head of the children's millinery department in a New York department store, where she started as a cash girl.

A Finer Typewriter at a Fair Price

You can now buy the $100 Oliver direct from the factory for $57. A new Oliver No. 9—the latest and finest product of our factories—at $43 less.

This is the identical Oliver Typewriter formerly priced at $100. And you get it now at a saving to you of $43.

We are able to save you nearly half because of our radically new and economical method of distribution.

During the war we learned many lessons. We found that it was unnecessary to have such a vast number of traveling salesmen and so many expensive branch houses throughout the country. We were able to discontinue many other superfluous sales methods. As a result, we can afford to sell at $57 the very same Oliver formerly priced at $100.

The Utmost in a Typewriter

The Oliver Nine is a 24-year development. It is the finest, costliest and the most successful model that we have ever built.

It has every wanted feature, every modern improvement. It is noted for its sturdiness, speed and fine workmanship. It is handsomely finished in olive enamel and polished nickel.

It is exactly the same commercial machine used by such great concerns as Columbia Graphophone Co., Baldwin Locomotive Works, Hart, Schaffner & Marx, U. S. Steel Corporation, New York Edison Co., Diamond Match Co., and others of like prominence.

If any typewriter is worth $100 you will agree that it is this magnificent Oliver, now yours at the sensational price of $57.

But we do not ask you to accept our word for the superiority of the Oliver. We know it to be such a success that we are willing to let the Oliver sell itself through a free trial.

No Money in Advance

Not a penny down. No deposit. No obligation to buy. Let us send you the Oliver for five days' free trial in your own home or office.

Use the Oliver for five days as if it were your own. Type all your letters or other work with it. Put it to every test you wish. Compare it with any other $100 typewriter. Compare it for simplicity and strength of construction. For ease of operation. For speed. For quality of typing. You are the sole judge.

Then if you decide that it is the greatest typewriter value regardless of price, and want to own it, you may pay at the small rate of $3 a month. If after 5 days' free trial you wish to return it for any reason, send it back express collect. We even refund the outgoing transportation charges, so the trial does not cost you a cent.

Only 10c a Day

The Oliver payment plan is so easy as to average only about 10 cents a day. Why buy or even rent a second-hand machine when you can get the $100 Oliver for $57, and pay for it in monthly installments of $3?

And—remember—you have the use of your Oliver while paying for it.

Who could make such an offer of free trial and ship without payment on deposit unless they had absolute confidence in the quality of their product, proved by years of experience?

MARGUERITE CLARK is married 'n' everything—but she doesn't look much more than four in this picture, does she?

She was "snapped" thus while listening to her master's voice—in other words, her director's—as he suggested a bit of "business" for her latest picture, "Luck in Pawn."

Her life's history has been detailed in this section before. But this is such a cunning picture we thought you'd better have it for your album. Y'wekkum!

MISTAKES WOMEN MAKE IN THE CARE OF THEIR COMPLEXIONS

Much homeliness is caused by three common little mistakes

FIRST, many women powder the wrong way. Many women who appreciate the importance of powdering fail to understand the right way to do it. Again and again during the day, on the street, in the shops—everywhere—they are powdering, in a frantic effort to overcome a shiny face.

Yet the ugly glisten keeps cropping out.

This is because people make the mistake of applying the powder directly to the skin.

If powdering is to be at all lasting, the thing to do is always to apply a powder base. Before you powder, take just a little Pond's Vanishing Cream on the tips of your fingers. Rub it well into your face. Instantly it disappears, leaving your skin softened and refreshed. Now powder, and don't think of it again.

Pond's Vanishing Cream has no oil, so it cannot come out in a shine. More than this, it holds the powder fast to your face two or three times as long as ever before.

Dermatologists say that such a powder base is a protection to the skin. It keeps its texture from the coarsening due to exposure.

Wind and dust ruin your looks

A day in the wind and dust plays havoc with your complexion. It chaps it; it dries it; it blows away the powder. Before going out, protect your face and hands with Pond's Vanishing Cream. For years it has been famous for overcoming chapping and roughness. Without making your skin shiny, it will keep it soft and prevent the dust and powder from working into the pores. Applied over this protecting cream, the powder stays on two or three times as long as it ever did before.

Failing to freshen the complexion when you dress

When you are preparing to go out for the evening, do, do remember that the most important part of dressing is the freshening of your complexion.

Some women make the mistake of overlooking this.

You may feel and look exhausted. Yet there is no excuse for letting your skin look tired, drawn.

Lightly smooth a little Pond's Vanishing Cream over your face. The cool touch, the delicate fragrance, will make your skin actually feel fresher. At once this greaseless cream vanishes. Your poor tired skin drinks in all its refreshing softness. The tense, drawn feeling is relaxed. The dullness has gone, leaving a soft, transparent look. More than this, the soothing cream keeps your skin soft and smooth, and prevents chapping and roughness.

Never neglect this Pond's Vanishing Cream freshening before going out. It makes all the difference between looking commonplace and looking beautiful.

It is a bad mistake to omit the cold cream cleansing

Because you have learned to depend upon Pond's Vanishing Cream for a powder base, for freshening the skin and protecting it from chapping, do not forget the importance of cold cream.

The very oil which makes cold cream impractical for use before going out is what the skin requires at other times. The pure, creamy oil base in Pond's Cold Cream makes it the most perfect cleanser you have ever known.

When you are all ready for bed, rub some Pond's Cold Cream into your pores and wipe it off with a soft cloth. You will be horrified to see how much dirt comes out. Yet it will please you so to realize how much cleaner the pores of your skin are than ever before that you will make this face bath a regular habit. In this way your skin will be kept clear and free from dullness.

If your skin is dry or rough, leave some Pond's Cold Cream on over night to make up for the deficiency of natural oil in your skin.

Subtract a few years from your age

When you are feeling all tired out, yet have to look your best, rub a little Pond's Vanishing Cream into your face and neck. At once the drawn feeling around your mouth and eyes goes. Your skin takes on a fresh, transparent look. This cream disappears instantly and will not reappear in a shine.

You will find, too, that you can give yourself a wonderful massage with Pond's Cold Cream. It has just the consistency that is perfect for working well into the skin.

Every skin needs two creams

The creams that your skin needs are each very different from the other.

It is Pond's Vanishing Cream that you should use as a powder base, as a protection from cold and dust, and to freshen the complexion. Pond's Vanishing Cream is without oil. It is based on an ingredient which physicians have recommended for years for its softening, beautifying properties.

On the other hand, for cleansing, for supplying a lack of oil, and for massage, Pond's Cold Cream should be used. Its formula was especially worked out to supply just the amount of oil required for these uses.

Neither of these creams will encourage the growth of hair on the face.

Get a jar or tube of each cream today at any drug or department store.

The dust will shock you!

You have no idea how much dust can work into the pores of your skin until you see how much comes out in the first Pond's Cold Cream cleansing. Your skin needs this wonderful oil cream cleansing at night.

PEGASUS PERFORMS FOR THE MOVIES—Wars may come and wars may go, but the cinema must be served (to mix quotations a bit), even in Germany. The stunt here pictured was staged recently in the suburbs of Berlin by a purveyor of thrills named Harry Piel. Piel tied a horse to a sausage balloon, mounted him and proceeded to show how the flying steed of Greek mythology really looked. At a height of 280 meters he cut loose and descended via parachute. Neither horse nor rider was injured, but the horse seemed rather surprised.

Never cut the cuticle. Cutting makes rough, ragged edges and causes hangnails a few days after manicuring.

Wrap a little absorbent cotton around the end of an orange stick and dip it into the bottle. Carefully work the stick around the base of the nail, gently pushing back the cuticle. Almost at once you can wipe off the dead surplus cuticle. Then wash the hands.

Every Day your nails can look well kept

Apply Cutex Nail White underneath the nails directly from tube.

Cutex Cake Polish gives the nails a brilliant finish.

It is not difficult to have your nails look exquisitely well groomed all the time. It is simply a matter of knowing how.

Remember not to cut the cuticle. When the cuticle is trimmed or cut, the skin around the base of the nail soon becomes dry and ragged. It roughs up, forms hangnails and makes your whole hand unattractive.

You can have shapely, symmetrical nails without clipping or cutting. Cutex was scientifically prepared to meet the need for a harmless cuticle remover. It is absolutely harmless.

People who have been cutting the cuticle find that no matter how much they have abused it, Cutex soon smooths away the rough skin around the base of the nails and quickly makes it even and firm. Follow the directions given under the illustrations.

A few minutes once or twice a week will make and keep your nails always in the most perfect condition. Do this regularly as you file or cut your nails, and you will always in future be proud of your hands.

Cutex, the cuticle remover, comes in 35c and 65c bottles. Cutex Nail White, Cold Cream and Cutex Nail Polish, in cake, paste, powder, liquid or stick form, are also each 35c.

The hours women spend on their complexions

Endlessly groping—but there is a way to make your skin clear and flawless

WHAT infinite care, what trouble, what risks even, a woman will take to possess a beautiful skin!

Not the smallest defect that goes unnoticed in the daily scrutiny she gives herself before her mirror; not the slightest imperfection she will not make tireless efforts to correct.

Yet thousands of girls and women fail to achieve the lovely skin they long for because they never really study their skin and learn its individual needs.

Learn to know your own skin. Look at it every day in a full light before your hand mirror. Under the strongest light does it show clear, flawless? Or, when you come to examine it closely, do you find conspicuous nose pores? Do embarrassing blemishes mar its delicate smoothness? If so, you may be sure that you are not giving your skin the kind of care it needs.

The famous treatment for conspicuous nose pores

Often a skin that is otherwise almost flawless will be spoiled by conspicuous nose pores.

The pores of the face are not as fine as on other parts of the body. On the nose especially, there are more fat glands than elsewhere and there is more activity of the pores. These pores, if not properly stimulated and kept free from dirt, clog up and become enlarged.

You can overcome this trouble by using every night this treatment:

Wring a soft cloth from very hot water, lather it with Woodbury's Facial Soap, then hold it to your face. When the heat has expanded the pores, rub in very gently a fresh lather of Woodbury's. Repeat this hot water and lather application several times, stopping at once if your nose feels sensitive. Then finish by rubbing the nose for thirty seconds with a piece of ice. Always dry your skin carefully.

Before long you will find that this treatment reduces the enlarged pores until they become inconspicuous.

The cause of skin blemishes

A frequent cause of worry and embarrassment to women are the unsightly little blemishes that often mar the smoothness of a complexion. Authorities on the skin now agree that these are commonly caused by bacteria and parasites which are carried into the pores through dust and fine particles in the air. By the right kind of treatment you can entirely free your skin from these disfiguring blemishes and as the new skin forms each day, you can make it as smooth and clear as you would like to have it.

Just before retiring, wash in your usual way with warm water and Woodbury's Facial Soap, finishing with a dash of cold water. Then dip your fingers in warm water and rub them on a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap until they are covered with a thick cream-like lather. Cover each blemish with a thick coat of this, and leave it on for ten minutes. Then rinse very carefully with clear, hot water, then with cold.

Use this treatment every night, and the blemishes will gradually disappear. The regular use of Woodbury's in cleansing your skin will discourage the tendency for new blemishes to form.

You will find treatments that exactly meet the need of each individual type of skin in the little booklet that is wrapped around each package of Woodbury's Facial Soap. Get a cake today and begin using it tonight. You will find Woodbury's Facial Soap on sale at any drug store or toilet goods counter in the United States. A 25 cent cake lasts a month or six weeks.

Let us send you a trial size cake

For 6 cents we will send you a trial size cake (enough for a week of any Woodbury facial treatment), together with the booklet of treatments. Or for 15 cents we will send you the treatment booklet and samples of Woodbury's Facial Soap, Facial Powder, Facial Cream and Cold Cream. Girls! Beautify Your Hair With "Danderine"

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength, and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?

THEIR HOMECOMING—Flag-draped caskets containing the bodies of Lieuts. Cecil H. Connolly and Frederick B. Waterhouse on the deck of the destroyer Aaron Ward, which brought them to San Diego. The two aviators were killed by Mexican fishermen after losing their way in a border patrol flight. Last messages to their mothers were found scratched on the wings of their airplane.

THE EX-KAISER TODAY—This is the best of the snapshots of the former German emperor obtained by Ruben Velleman, the photographer who disguised himself as a peasant and drove along the wall of the castle at Amerongen on a hay wagon. The pictures, which are the first to show the ex-kaiser with a beard, were published in "The Tribune" on Nov. 2.

New Way to Wash Your Face Beautifies Your Complexion

Beauty specialists agree that the secret of a perfect complexion is a thoroughly clean skin. A specialist has perfected a new substance, Ara-Mara, which is not only excellent for washing the face, but it cannot injure the most delicate complexion. It will not, cannot grow hair. All you do is to gently massage it into the skin and wash with plain warm water. It not only cleanses thoroughly, but it lightens the complexion much better than lemon juice or face bleach. It is surprising to see how fresh, clear and wholesome the skin becomes, even after only one proper treatment. Those who use it declare it has done more real good than any complexion treatment they ever used. It's a wonderful treatment for enlarged, cloggy pores and irritations. It certainly is a great blessing to those who are afraid of wrinkles and who have dull, sallow, lifeless complexions. You can always get Ara-Mara at any big store. If you live out of town and your home dealer has not got it, you can order 50 cents' worth of Ara-Mara by mail of Herbert Roystone, 16 East 18th Street, New York.

La-May Face Powder Is Harmless to the Most Delicate Skin

A specialist has at last perfected a pure face powder that is guaranteed pure and harmless to the most delicate baby skin. It beautifies wonderfully, because it helps to clear and lighten the skin and protect the complexion from blemishes. And it really stays on better than any other face powder. Of course, every one knows the famous La-may Powder (French, Poudre L'Ame). This is the powder that does not contain starchy rice powder or dangerous white lead to make it adhere. White lead is a deadly poison and rice powder turns into a gluey paste that ruins the complexion by causing enlarged pores, blackheads and rice powder irritations. All dealers carry the sixty cent box, and many dealers also carry the generous thirty cent size. Be sure to try La-may. Then you will really know a perfect face powder. You will be sorry if you take a substitute. When you use this harmless powder and see how beautifully it improves your complexion you will understand why La-may so quickly became the most popular beauty powder sold in New York. Because La-may is so pure and because it stays on so much better it is now used by over a million American women. We will give you one thousand dollars if you can buy a better face powder anywhere, at any price. Herbert Roystone, 16 East 18th St., New York. Save this notice.

LEVY

By Bruno Lessing

ILLUSTRATED by HERBERT MORTON STOOPS

"But der marriage litsence," cried the Rabbi. Levy handed the document to him. "Now, come, Rabbi," he said. "Remember I'm an orphan and I've got to catch a train."

What's a Nation or Two When There's a Kiss to Be Had for Indemnity?

'TWAS in the month of June. In June the roses bloom, the hills and fields are clad in garments green, and the air is redolent with the fragrance of flowers and blossoms. This botanical bunk, however, applies only to the rural districts. In town it begins to get hot in June, the air is apt to be stuffy, and noise and odors which you didn't notice in cold weather begin to get on your nerves. Those who have money, leisure, and intelligence leave town in June. All of which is as it should be and shows how wonderful is nature, aided and abetted by man. While it has no bearing upon this story, it might just as well go in as a matter of record.

This story is confined entirely to Levy, Casey, Dora, Dora's father, Max Elberg, Lipsky, Fogarty, a couple of rabbis, and a few others that sort of hang around the background. The scene is laid in New York's Ghetto, but it includes an excursion to a Long Island graveyard and touches lightly on the problem of Ireland and Palestine. Should this synopsis not look promising, the gentle reader can save a lot of time by turning to the sporting page.

The truck and livery firm of Casey & Levy on Suffolk street had dissolved. In the vernacular of the east side the partnership had become machullah, which may be translated as bankrupt, busted, or "up the spout," according to individual taste. The partners had parted in seeming friendship. It is true that Casey had taken Levy into the back of the stable and had given him a sound thrashing, but Sam Levy was not the sort of chap to bear ill-will for a trifle of that kind. Or, if he did, he had a genius for concealing it.

"Y'see, Sam," Casey had explained, "ye didn't pay any attention to business. When I was driving a truck and leaving you in charge, you was playing the races. Ye're a nice lad and I like ye, but it was your being out of the office that made us lose the last big order. So, before we break up, I'm going to teach ye a lesson, so to speak."

A week later Levy dropped into the stable where Casey had found employment.

"I'm a new man, Casey," he said. "Everything what you said about me was right. I was a good-for-nothing and I don't blame you for that licking you gave me, only you might have left out that last kick. I got a fine job, I don't gamble any more—I don't even smoke. I turned over one of them new leafs and I settled down to business."

"I'm glad to hear it, Levy," said Casey. "Ye got a good head and if ye stick to business ye'll get away with it."

"How is things by you?" asked Levy.

"Oh, I can't complain," replied the stableman. "I got a good boss and the wages is good. Fogarty—that's the boss—comes from near my home in the old country. He's a—you know."

Casey winked significantly and Levy nodded.

"How's the cause coming on?" asked Levy. Casey shrugged his shoulders.

"It's only a question of time," answered Casey. "The people of England is with us but it's them damned aristocrats what's holding us down. If me and Fogarty could get them aristocrats in the back of the stable, ten at a time, Ireland'd be free in a month."

"It's the same with Palestine," said Levy. "Our people ain't got a home in the world and the big bugs won't let 'em go to Palestine to live."

Levy's notion of Zionistic doctrine was as clear as his views on esoteric Buddhism—and interested him about as much. But, during his partnership with Casey, he had listened so many times to the latter's denunciation of England's attitude toward Ireland and the woes of his fellow countrymen that, merely in order to keep in the conversation, he had brought up the woes of the children of Israel as another instance of man's inhumanity to man. He had found that any recital of woes touched Casey's heart.

"You're right, Levy," said the stableman. "The Irish and the Jews got a lot in common."

"I was wondering," said Levy, "in case I want to get a carriage some day next week, if you could get your boss to listen to reason."

"Any time you want a rig," said Casey; "Fogarty's the man to give you a special rate. But what in the devil would you be wanting with a rig? Are ye thinkin' of driving around the park by yerself?"

And now Levy blushed.

"Don't ask any questions," he said. "Maybe I'll come around for a rig and maybe I won't. There ain't no telling."

Levy ought, really, to be described, but this obligation is more easily recognized than fulfilled. To understand him thoroughly one must first know his race, then one must visualize the centuries of oppression which the Russian fragment of that race underwent, and then one must have observed some of the effects of the sudden freedom from bondage which came with the transplanting of their life roots to this new land of their adoption—effects that traverse the entire gamut of tragedy and humor.

Levy was 25. At the age of 10 he had been left an orphan, practically upon his own resources. Friends of his parents looked after him, in a desultory fashion, but, in the main, he was left to work out his own salvation. Certain elemental traits, such as honesty, kindheartedness, temperance, and an imagination that struggled incessantly after vague, ill-defined, and ill-understood ideals, tended to keep him straight.

The credit of these belonged to the thirty centuries behind him. Other traits, equally elemental, such as irreverence toward his fellow man, a dislike of a humdrum existence, a preference to live by wits rather than by toil, and an easy come, easy go habit of mind, tended, just as strongly, to get him into constant mischief. Between these two tendencies he managed, on the whole, to get along rather well. Above all, he was always

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

THE DUNCE SIMPLY CAN'T KEEP OUT OF MISCHIEF

by WM. DONAHEY.

IT was Wednesday afternoon. The Teenie Weenie washing had been done, the old tea pot had been scrubbed out, and Zip had gone for the rest of the day. The Chinaman stuffed a lead pencil log into the stove and wrapping up the Doctor's weekly wash he set out to deliver it at the hospital. It was fully ten minutes later when the little fellow returned and he was scared half out of his wits, as he came in sight of the tea pot, to see great clouds of smoke rolling out o' the door and windows.

"Flire! Flire! Helpie, klick. Flire!" screamed the little chap, and he ran at full speed to the school house, where he furiously rang the tiny fire bell. In a few moments the fire department came clanging up to the tea pot with ladders and hose.

"Savie me irons! Savie me irons!" shouted the excited Chinaman.

"Your irons won't burn," smiled the Doctor. "They are absolutely fire proof."

The smoke came out of the doorway in such dense clouds that it was quite impossible to enter the laundry, but after the hose had been put into the window and the old pot flooded for a few minutes, the smoking stopped.

The firemen hurried into the old pot and could not find any signs of fire.

"This is certainly strange," said the Policeman. "Where in the name of stewed prunes did all that smoke come from?"

"It must have come out of the stove," answered the Turk, as he watched a tiny stream of smoke curl out of the crack around the door. "I'll bet the chimney is clogged up some way or other."

An examination of the chimney showed that the Turk was right, for the fireman found a cork tightly stuffed into the spout, which answered the purpose of a smoke stack for the laundry.

"It looks to me as though some one was trying to play a joke," growled the Cowboy.

"Allie same I betie Dunce he know something about it," shouted the Chinaman. "Me saw him and Clown hangin' round when me wentie over to hospital."

The Dunce and Clown were questioned by the General and they admitted that they had put the cork into the chimney for a joke.

"Well," said the General very sternly, "we'll carry the joke a little farther and you and the Clown can clean the water out of the tea pot and when that is done you can both go to bed without a bite of supper."

Fortunately no damage had been done, but the old tea pot was quite wet and it took the Teenie Weenies until after dark to mop up the water and place the laundry in good shape.

The Policeman watched the two Teenie Weenies to see that the work was properly done and then he took them over to the shoe house, where he saw them undressed and safely in bed.

"Well, anyhow," giggled the Clown as he crawled into bed, "it was certainly worth all the work we had to do to hear that chink holler. He certainly was scared."

"Well, it wasn't worth missin' supper," growled the Dunce. "For they are goin' to have baked raisin stuffed with hickory nut for dessert."

Levy

cheerful, always hopeful, and always eager.

If this brings you any kind of picture of Sam Levy, you are welcome to it. Or, if you should care for an entirely different analysis of Sam Levy's nature, that of Dora's father, old man Seligman, is perfectly simple and comprehensible.

"That fellow Levy," was Seligman's verdict, "is the biggest bum, the worst low-life, and the freshest loafer I ever seen in my life."

It was in Seligman's printing and book-binding establishment that Levy had found not only employment but the sudden desire for a better and higher life. His employment is easily explained. Seligman wanted more orders and Levy had convinced him that he could go out and get orders. That in a general way, is the basis of political economy, supply and demand and all that sort of efficiency stuff. When, however, a man suddenly finds out that he isn't good enough and wants to be better, the explanation is apt to be more complicated. Well——

Her name was Dora. She was the boss' daughter and she happened to be sitting in her father's office when Levy breezed in with quite a profitable order that he had obtained. She had pink cheeks and curling hair and sparkling eyes and—you know—all that sort of thing. And Levy just gasped when he beheld her. She, too, felt a wee bit of a thrill, but, being a girl, she did not betray herself openly as Levy did. Levy, you must remember, was exceedingly good looking—not very tall, but slender, well formed, bright eyed, and with frank, engaging features.

He laid his new order upon his employer's desk—never once taking his eyes from the girl's face—and pointed to the sum total.

"Maybe that's bad for a beginner," he said. Seligman grunted, absent-mindedly.

"D'ye mean to say," Levy went on, "that you ain't going to introduced me to the young lady?"

Seligman's absent-mindedness vanished with startling suddenness. He wheeled around in his chair and glared at his new salesman.

"Get out!" he cried, pointing to the door. Levy thought that he detected just the faintest expression of protest in the girl's eyes as she looked at her father and, somehow or other, he felt happy.

"Sure I'll get out," he said, amiably. "And, to tell you the truth, Mr. Seligman, I don't blame you at all. All my friends say I'm too fresh. But I—I just couldn't help it. She's so beautiful!"

Some fifteen minutes later Dora Seligman, coming out of the building, beheld Levy waiting at the door, his hands behind his back.

"I was waiting to apologize for being so fresh," he said. She smiled in a friendly way.

"Oh, that's all right," she said.

"No, it ain't all right at all," said Levy, quite earnestly. "I mean just what I said." I never seen such a beautiful girl as you in all my life. I don't know anything about girls at all. Only I didn't had any business to say anything. Was you looking for a job?"

"Mr. Seligman is my father," said the girl.

"Oh, you don't say," said Levy, not the slightest whit abashed. "Well, Miss Seligman, my name's Levy—Sam Levy—and I just want to tell you that I was happy today just to look at you and, before you go home, I want you to take this along. Please take it! I promise I won't say another word."

He pressed into her hand a small cluster of roses that he had been holding behind his back. The girl, embarrassed, shy, and not knowing what to say, held the flowers in her hand. Levy bowed to her and entered the building.

Oh, Sam Levy! A year—two years, at the most—of schooling, might have perfected your grammar and equipped you with the conventional social graces, but ten thousand years in the university of life could never have improved upon the unconscious adroitness of your appeal to a girl's heart!

When Levy returned to his desk he took from his pocket a package of cigarettes and tossed it into the waste basket. No other act could have expressed so vividly to him his sudden desire to mend his ways. He also decided to work hard, lead a regular life, abstain from all bad habits, and marry his employer's daughter. It was on the following day that he called upon his former partner, led up to the subject of Ireland and Palestine in order to engage his sympathy and made sure that he could hire a carriage at a reasonable rate. He intended to invite Dora to ride with him.

Not being a trained thinker, Levy of course could not review the situation logically and systematically and work out a coherent plan of action. But, starting from the one, indisputable fact that he was crazy about this girl his mind evolved a series of impulses which, in the end, led to practically the same conclusion that any philosopher would have reached. He went to her father.

"Mr. Seligman," he said, "I know you think I'm fresh, but I'm just crazy about your daughter. Couldn't you fix it so that I could see her once in a while? She's awfully nice and—and I'm sure we'd get on together fine."

Seligman surveyed him contemptuously from head to foot.

"What do you think you are? A millionaire gentleman? Get out of here! Another word from you and you get fired."

Levy contemplated him deliberately for a moment and then he smiled. Levy had a very winning smile.

"No use getting mad about it," he said. "Maybe we talk about it some time in the future when you're feeling better."

Then he telephoned to Dora. The telephone operator in the office, thinking that he was delivering a message for his employer, promptly connected him with Mr. Seligman's house.

"This is Sam Levy," he said. "Could you come for a little ride around the park with me this afternoon?"

"Oh, no," was the answer. "I—I couldn't do that."

"It's very important," said Levy. "I just had a talk with your father and I got to have a talk with you. I'm coming up in a carriage at 3 o'clock.

"Does—does my father know you're coming?"

"Oh, my no!" said Levy. "But listen to me. You just be ready at 3 o'clock and I'll explain everything. It's very, very important."

"But I—I couldn't. Really, I couldn't," protested the girl.

"I'll be in front of the house at 3, sharp," said Levy.

Levy was glad that Casey was unable to drive the carriage himself; for this occasion he preferred a stranger. The carriage had hardly come to a stop in front of the house when Dora came down the steps. Levy was delighted to see that she had her hat on. He alighted quickly from the vehicle to greet her.

"You needn't think that I'm going with you," she made haste to say. "If you have anything to tell me you can say it here."

They were in full view of two idle servants gazing from the window of the adjoining house and in hearing of the driver of the carriage.

"All right," said Levy, smiling. "I'll tell you right here. I just told your father that I was crazy about you and I might just as well let you into the same secret. I never loved anybody before in my life. If you knew what I've been thinking about you ever since I saw you, you'd have to like me a little bit. I want to work like a slave to make you happy as long as you live. It isn't only because you're so beautiful but I sort of feel like I have loved you all my life. Couldn't you care for me a little? I know I'm terribly fresh, but—couldn't you? Just a little?"

He had never been so eager and yet so humble in all his life. The girl had listened with parted lips and shining eyes. And now a sudden wave of color swept over her face.

"I'm—I'm engaged," she said, hardly above a whsper. "I'm to—to be married in two weeks. You—you didn't know?"

Levy seemed suddenly to wilt. His face grew a shade paler and his lips twitched. The revelation was so unmistakably a blow that the girl's eyes filled with tears.

"He can't love you as much as I do," said Levy quietly. The girl hung her head and began to twist her kerchief into knots.

"Do you love him very much?" he then asked. Dora made no answer to this impertinent question, but Levy observed that her fingers had suddenly become intent upon tying the little kerchief into a most hopeless snarl. And then, from out the vast empyrean, there came to him a sudden, unreasoning impulse.

"I guess," he said, smiling, "we'd better ride around the park—just once—because—well, if I make a mistake today I'll be unhappy all my life and if I let you make a mistake I'll never get over it as long as I live."

And, apparently unable to resist and hardly aware that she was yielding, Dora, a moment later, found herself in the carriage with the most audacious young man she had ever met in her life seated at her side.

The process by which it all was accomplished would probably appear idiotic if it were recounted, step by step. Youth speaks a language which only youth can understand. Yet words, gentle suggestions, and persistent coaxing which, to the ears of elders, would seem the most hopeless gibberish, were, to Dora and her companion, pregnant with startling significance. Do you know the road that runs around Central park? It really doesn't matter if you don't. But it has landmarks.

By the time they had reached the menagerie, Dora, thoroughly at ease, had told Levy that she never had had an opportunity of meeting young men. Her father, intending to be strict, had been tyrannical. He had made up his mind that, when his only daughter married, it would be with his consent and approbation.

By the time they came to the obelisk, Levy heard of Max Elberg. Dora wouldn't say a word against Max Elberg for the whole world. He had a kind heart and was good to his mother. Only she did not understand why her father had brought him around to the house and had suggested that she marry him.

By the time they came to the Pass tavern, Levy learned that Dora had simply drifted into her engagement, guided, coaxed, and persuaded by her father. Alas! it was now inevitable.

At the head of the park, a few of Max Elberg's faults came to the surface. He was nearly ten years older than Dora and he wasn't a bit good looking. Half way down the west drive Dora began to weep. She just hated the idea of marrying Max Elberg. As they reached the entrance to the park, she declared that if her father had not already hired a hall for the wedding, had not engaged a rabbi and had not sent out the invitations, she would break the engagement no matter what consequences might arise. And then there came to Levy one of those inspirations which, as Balzac said, required only a greater theater to make it immortal. He told the driver to ride around the park again.

Before they had traversed a quarter of the second lap Levy had convinced Dora beyond all doubt that he loved her. The fact that he had permitted her to rest her head against his shoulder while she wept was proof of it. Before they reached the Pass tavern for the second time Dora had as much confidence in Levy's resourcefulness and strength and steadfastness as he had himself.

"You leave everything to me," said he, as they were passing the reservoir. "I'm going to get you out of that engagement. You do just as I say and I bet your father will let us get married. Poor little girl! You never even had a chance!"

"Do you know," said Dora, "I feel as if I had known you a long time. And, just think, I only met you once before."

Yes. Levy understood exactly how she felt. In fact, he felt that way himself. And then he said to her.

"My dear, I'm just dying to kiss you. So help me God, I won't kiss you until the minute we're married!"

And then Dora knew that she had found her hero. O, youth! Thou canst not be beaten!

. . . . . .

Levy found Max Elberg at breakfast in his apartment the next morning.

"My name is Sam Levy," he said. "You don't know me, but I'm a friend of Miss Dora Seligman. Do you think it's fair for a man like you to make a girl marry you because you got a pull with her father?"

Max Elberg was a rather sallow looking individual, neither brave nor particularly interesting.

"It ain't none of your business," he retorted.

"That's where you're wrong," said Levy. "I'm going to marry her myself."

"If you don't get out of here right away," said Elberg, "I'll call a policeman."

"I guess you're right," said Levy. "I could talk to you for ten thousand years and you wouldn't do the right thing."

When Levy reached his place of employment he found the manager waiting for him on the sidewalk with a package in his hand.

"I'm sorry, Levy," said the manager, "but you're fired. Somebody called the boss on the telephone and he got hopping mad. He made me take all your things out of your desk. Here they are and here's all the money that's coming to you. He says he doesn't want you to come into the building."

Levy grinned. His respect for Max Elberg had suddenly increased.

"Thanks, old man," he said to the manager. "Tell the boss I ain't got any hard feelings toward him. We'll be good friends some day."

Within an hour Levy had found another position with a rival printing establishment. And then he began to get very busy.

. . . . . .

"Casey," said Levy, confidentially, "there's some dirty work against Ireland going on in this neighborhood."

"Who's doing it?" demanded Casey, indignantly.

"I ain't sure yet," said Levy, "but I'm keeping my eye open on your account. I think a lot of you even if you did lick me. I'm working in a printing office and that's a place where you hear a lot of secret things that's going on. Well, all I know is some Englishman is over here trying to make connections with some of our people. I don't know what the game is, but I'm watching it."

Casey was profoundly impressed.

"If ye point him out to me," he said, "I'll break every bone in his body."

"Just hold your horses, Casey," replied his former partner. "So soon I know the details I put you wise."

A few days later the plot thickened. Levy reported that the Englishman was a lord.

"Now keep this under your shirt," said Levy, "and I'll tell you something. This Englishman is trying to get in touch with a fellow what's the leader of the Friendly Sons of Benjamin. D'ye see? Well, we got to stop their game. They must never meet."

Casey nodded with exceeding gravity.

"What's the guy's name?" he asked. Levy shook his head.

"You got to wait," he answered. "The time ain't ripe yet. I got to find out just when and where they're going to meet and then it'll be up to you to prevent it."

"You just leave it to me," said Casey. A few days later Casey received an excited telephone message from Levy to be sure and be in the stable at 6 o'clock that evening with a carriage ready and some friend whom he could trust. At the appointed hour Levy, wearing full evening dress and a silk hat, entered the stable, pale and agitated.

"It'll all fixed," he said, breathlessly. "Casey, it's the chance of our life." Casey pressed his lips together tightly and stuck out a pugnacious jaw.

"The Englishman," continued Levy whispering close to Casey's ear, "is over at the Star assembly rooms. He's waiting for a fellow named Max Elberg. That fellow Elberg would sell his grandfather's bones for a dollar, so you can imagine what he'd do to Ireland."

"Go on! Go on!" said Casey. "What was your idea?"

"My idea is you should get some friend to drive the carriage to his house. I already sent word to him that the English lord would send a carriage around. You stay inside the carriage. The moment he gets in you put your hand over his mouth so he don't yell and then drive him out in the park or in the country—anywhere at all, so long as he can't get together with the lord. D'ye get me?"

"It's a great idea," said Casey. "Fogarty 'll do the drivin' and I'll sit inside. What about you?"

"Well, y'see," said Levy, "I'm going to bluff that Englishman and make him think I'm Elberg. See? And then I'll get on to his little game."

"Levy," said Casey, admiringly, "ye've got a great brain. Soak him one for me, will ye?"

"Now you got to be careful, Casey," said Levy, warningly. "Don't bungle the job tions; but these gentlemen, on the other hand, treated it as a good joke and, after a brief interview, departed.

At 2 a. m. all our raiding parties had returned, and we found that the total results of our descent upon this locality were highly gratifying to us as well as to the French—our capture netted us a total of twenty men wanted for various crimes; the French secured over sixty. The French chief congratulated me upon the success of the raid, and we both felt convinced that among the number arrested there were the two men who had been committing the crimes.

Exhausted by the arduous work, I returned to my room and retired. I had just fallen asleep when I was awakened and, to my dismay, was told that another Frenchman had been murdered, even while we were conducting our search through "Spanish Town." This last murder, perpetrated while we were all on the street on watch, spurred us on with renewed effort. I then determined to employ a decoy in an endeavor to apprehend these bold murderers.

We planned a trap for them and, as I wanted to be present when they were caught, I determined that I myself would be the bait. So I selected five of my men who were expert shots with a rifle and, dressed in civilian clothes, we went down to the river front. Here, after instructing my men to shoot to kill if they saw any one attempting to rob me, I had them secrete themselves in a doorway, while I sat down on a curb not far away, pretending that I was intoxicated. Three nights of this vigil passed and I was unmolested. On the fourth night, just as I was about to quit and admit being beaten, out from somewhere two Algerian soldiers suddenly appeared.

The command: "Hands up!" in French, convinced me that at last I was face to face with the criminals. After taking all my valuables, I was ordered to undress. I so maneuvered as to be out of the line of fire, so that when my men began to shoot they would not hit me. Not daring to resist these Algerians, I slowly undressed, all the while expecting to hear the report of the guns that would lay these robbers low. I heard no such welcome sound, however.

Meanwhile, these two crooks stripped me clean and left me standing there on the street, clothed in nothing but my underwear. All this time I was simulating drunkenness. Apparently my condition was such that they concluded it was not necessary to knock me unconscious, so they slipped away as quietly as they came—for which I was duly thankful.

I went over to learn why my men had not fired a single shot, angry clear through; nor did my anger cool when I found them all asleep. Not only had I lost all my clothes, but I had also been made a fool of by the very men whom I had hoped to capture. I ordered the soldiers all to the guard house under arrest, and, after preferring charges, had them tried and sent to the coal-pile for punishment.

Dodging through the back alleys, I at length reached a taxi-stand; and stepping into a taxi, I was driven to my hotel, where I had the porter bring me my uniform. I then went to the quarters of my detective force and, arousing them all, we started on a search for the two men who had stripped me. A French gendarme told us that he had seen an Algerian going toward the wine market. So we first directed our attention to that place.

Part of the large park in Bordeaux is used as a wine market, where there are thousands of barrels of wine. Searching among these barrels, we finally located one of the Algerians asleep. He was wearing some of my clothes and my watch, so we knew then that we had one of the guilty parties. Upon questioning this man he told us that his comrade in crime had returned to the French barracks and gave us the name and number of the latter.

After sending the first prisoner to our guard house under a guard instructed to shoot him should he attempt to escape, the rest of us went to the French barracks. We aroused the French commandant and from him obtained permission to search the barracks for the other man. We finally located him. Underneath his mattress we found the balance of my clothes and the marked money which they had taken from me. I persuaded the French commandant to allow me to take this prisoner over to our prison and confine him with the other one, promising to secure the necessary confessions from them both.

At our police headquarters was a cemented cell in the ground, about ten feet deep and ten feet square. The French called it the "Cave of Oblivion"—a most appropriate name. We never knew just what they had used it for, but it made an ideal place in which to confine these two Algerians. We were after the confession that we had promised the French commandant we would secure; so as they were Mohammedans we planned to play upon their religious belief and their superstition.

We offered them bacon to eat, threw bacon rinds down among them, and, after telling them that we buried all our dead there, we brought them up to question them. While they were being interrogated and told that the hole was the Christian hell, one of our men dropped down into the cell, and with wood-alcohol made marks on the floor. He came out again and the Algerians, since they had refused to tell us anything, were placed back down in the cell. A lighted match was at once dropped down on the alcohol and we then closed the trap door and rattled heavy chains on it. The alcohol ignited; and the fire following the marks on the floor seemed to these two Algerians like fire snakes. This, with the terrific din made by the chains on the iron door, was too much for these men and they offered to tell us all we wanted to know if we would only take them out.

The French chief of police was summoned and then they were once more questioned. They confessed to several crimes which they had committed. When they hesitated, a threat to put them back with the Christian demons was enough to loosen their tongues again, and before they were done they had told us of a series of robberies and murders that made one's blood run cold to hear, admitting that they had killed ten French civilians during the last month.

Their trial quickly followed and within a week from the time we had arrested them, they were publicly guillotined in the square. Although we had proved conclusively that the Americans had been unjustly accused by the French authorities, they did not see fit to acknowledge their mistake, and we never received the apology that was rightly ours.

Lansing Fisher, Promoter, Journeys There for a Sordid Purpose.

HE had an office with his name and the name of his company written on the frosted glass of the door. The elevator boy knew him as a man in the early fifties who radiated an atmosphere of one who was getting on in the world. There were times when he carried a cane, although he was not lame. There were stretches when he was not in his office at all, and again there were many inquiries for Mr. Lansing Fisher.

Lansing Fisher was a promoter—the kind of a promoter who sold stocks in companies that existed only on paper. His success lay in interesting others in propositions that were without merit—the less the merit the stronger his selling talk. He had at times attached himself to legitimate organizations, but his forte was exaggeration, making promises that could not possibly materialize.

Fisher sat in his office one afternoon, having for a visitor an acquaintance of boyhood who was sojourning in the rapidly growing southwestern city.

"I guess we've both changed a good deal, but I guess neither of us is apt to forget those kid days together in Prairie Junction. Have you ever been back there, Lanse?"

"Not in twenty years."

"Nor I," said the other. "I've been on the stage, you know, ever since I left. Had my own company once, before the movies got so strong. I'm out this way now to look into the movie game. The season I had my own company we went back and forth through the middle west, but I made it a rule never to try to play the old home town."

"I don't see why," laughed Lansing Fisher. "But I suppose all of us have our little rules and mottoes that we pick up from our experiences." He reached in his desk and, shuffling among his papers for a moment, brought out a tiny red book. "Here are a few mottoes that I've jotted down from time to time, but they all read this way: 'Be sure to have a fountain pen handy and be sure it works.' 'Remember that everybody is looking for something for nothing.'"

"I see," nodded the actor. "And I see you've done well, Lanse."

"Well, lately it has been rather dull," answered Fisher, slowly. "It's up to me to make a killing soon. I might say that I'm worse off today than I have been in years. Of course, what I'm telling you is from boyhood friend to boyhood friend, you understand that."

As they lunched together the rapidly growing southwestern city hurled its noises at their ears. They reminisced of apple orchard adventures and vacant lot games removed by two decades and two thousands of miles. Lansing Fisher was given a new train of thought, and when he returned alone to his office he reflected for a moment and then selected one of his most alluring "come on" letters, attached to it a brief personal note, and addressed it to Maj. Willis in Prairie Junction.

Maj. Willis must own pretty much of the entire county by now, mused Lansing Fisher. He had been prosperous enough with his general store when he, as a boy, had known him. Since then land had gone up. Odd, he had not thought of Maj. Willis and other of the home folks before.

Lansing Fisher waited through two dull weeks before receiving an answer to his letter and prospectus. Then the answer came in the rather feeble handwriting of Maj. Willis. On his general store stationery, Maj. Willis expressed pleasure in hearing from the son of a fellow pioneer and he was glad to know that he was doing well.

Lansing Fisher smiled over the letter. Unloading a bundle of stock on the major would be like taking candy from a child. He locked his office door and went to the hotel and packed his grip. On the train that was to bear him more than half way across the continent he was entirely the promoter rather than a man about to revisit the scenes of his youth. Immediate members of his family had long since departed Prairie Junction, and he had never been particularly interested in the place. It was still a small center for an agricultural region, no doubt—prosperous now, he had been told, after having passed through its period of struggle with which it was associated in memory. But Maj. Willis had been a power even during that period of struggle. And his holdings now!—well, it would be well worth the trip. Such a trip should have been thought of before.

He reached Prairie Junction on a quiet autumn afternoon. The sun rested tenderly upon the garden patches. The fire had gone from the sun's rays and where they blended into the cool shadows there was a glint of gold. Feverish summer had fled before the touch of the early morning frosts.

There would be those who would remember Lanse Fisher, but he knew he would never be suddenly hailed as he walked down the familiar unfamiliar street. The change in him had been too great. Recognition in his case could only come after a rubbing of specs and an exchange of anecdotes. And, anyhow, the street, even for a quiet street, seemed strangely quiet.

The Maj. Willis house had always been a huge, square frame affair with a white picket fence about it. Lansing Fisher recalled the picket fence and the grape arbor and the Dutchess apple tree that had spread its shade near the back porch.

Well, there had been little change—the landmarks had just lain there among the cornfields in much the same old fashion during all the weather shifts of the years. The right kind of a deal with old Willis ought to help some, and about three days of laying wires ought to bring it about. Hello—the Maj. Willis maple shaded lawn was filled with people!

Lansing Fisher paused, threw away his cigar, hesitated, clicked his way through the gate. A quartet had just finished singing, the voices softened by the out of doors, the alto somehow lingering in the heavenly stillness. Mr. Fisher removed his hat and sought a place at the edge of the crowd. The atmosphere of a funeral is unmistakable. By lifting his chin and inclining his best ear Lansing Fisher could hear the speaker distinctly.

"Maj. Willis dies poor in this world's goods," the speaker was saying. "He goes to the peace of his grave this afternoon, leaving behind nothing but the love and respect of the community upon which he has placed the stamp of his rugged character. And we have gathered here this afternoon to pay tribute to his memory.

"Sixty years ago Maj. Willis came to these unsettled prairies, in the vigor of his youth, to battle with hardships. He came with a vision—the vision of an honest, law abiding, prosperous American community. And he fought for it—fought for a school on the hilltop and a church in the valley. Fought for it through four hard years, when he was first to enlist from this community, that the country in which he had such faith might not be severed. And he came back to take up the fight again. During his sixty years in this developing section he has been first a man and a patriot—a business man after that. There are those who say he was too lenient in extending credit. Perhaps, from a business standpoint, he had too much faith in his fellow man.

"His roof has been a hospitable roof. He has been a neighbor and a friend. He has had his enemies, for he was a stanch party man, and, while he never asked for an office himself, he was until the end interested in candidates for public office, and his stamp of approval, until the very last, was sought. It is such men as Maj. Willis—these men of the period that is passing—that has made our great republic possible, though his name has seldom traveled beyond the community in which he lived and died."

Lansing Fisher listened as the town listened. A man had passed.

The town returned from the cemetery and the shadows lengthened and the insects sang in the gold of the corn. Lansing Fisher found the major's wife in the quiet of the darkened porch. She remembered him well enough as Lanse the boy. She remembered his mother—recalled in detail the day he had come into the world.

"They say you've done well out there, Lanse," said the old lady, softly, in the conversation that followed the greeting and condolence. "Perhaps if the major had tried it elsewhere he might have done better. But he loved it so here."

"The major was meant for here," Lansing replied.

He was fingering the edge of his closely cropped mustache. It was a habit of his when one of his transactions reached a tense moment.

"You are left alone now, Mrs. Willis," he began, rather huskily. "I understand that in later years the major lost much of his ability in business matters. His insurance had lapsed, I believe, and there are mortgages." He slipped a check into her faded fingers. "I want you to use this," he finished.

She thanked him with a motherly kiss, and Lansing Fisher, promoter of fake stocks, went back across the town to await a train going back west. There was a hint of frost in the air that further hinted of the kind of winter that did not come to the rapidly growing southwestern city. As he waited for the train the red orb of a moon hung itself among the trees that shadowed the road that led to the mill pond. The train came.

Three days later Lansing Fisher, carrying a cane, strode breezily into the elevator of his office building. And had the elevator boy followed, he would have seen him unlock his desk and take therefrom a tiny red book, to write therein this new motto, among others gathered there: "Never try to play the old home town."

Levy

by Bruno Lessing

Don't let that fellow see you inside the carriage until he gets in himself and then be quick about it. And you needn't hurt him."

"How'll I know he's the right man?" asked Casey.

"O, that's easy. He'll be all dolled up—just like me—and if you tell the driver to ask him where he wants to go to, he'll say, 'the Star assembly rooms.'"

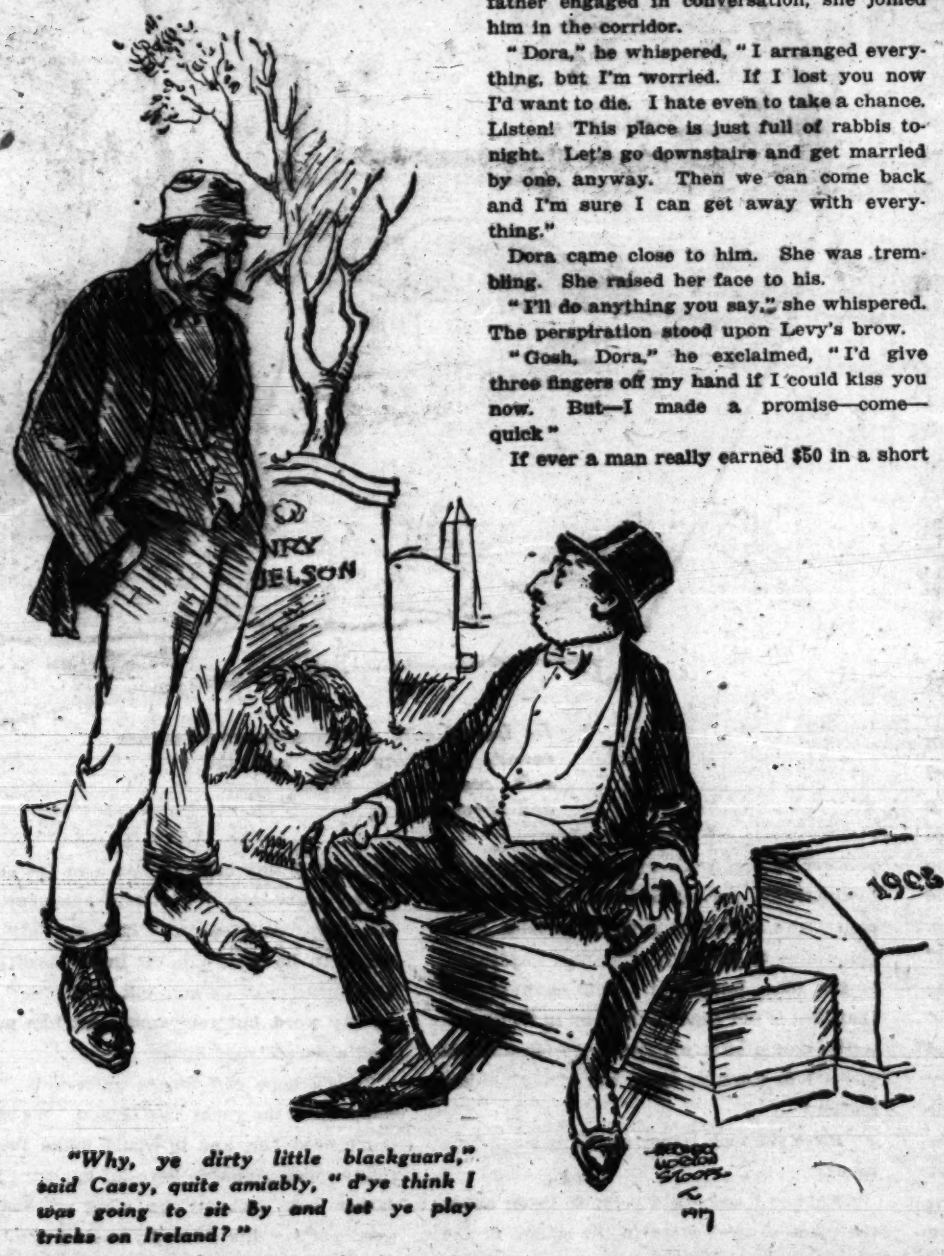
"That'll be a give-away, won't it?" said Casey. "Well, I guess we'd better be hurrying."

Levy gave him the address a second time and they shook hands over the dire conspiracy.

. . . . . .

A street urchin informed Max Elberg that a carriage was coming to take him to the wedding.

"That's mighty liberal of Mr. Seligman," he thought. "I didn't know he was like that."



"Why, ye dirty little blackguard," said Casey, quite amiably, "d'ye think I was going to sit by and let ye play tricks on Ireland?"

He was watching from an upper window and saw the carriage drive up. He hastened downstairs.

"Where to?" asked the driver with an eager interest in the question which Elberg failed to detect.

"The Star assembly rooms on Clinton street," he replied. The next moment a powerful arm, extended from the interior of the carriage, had clutched him by the collar and lifted him inside as if he were a feather.

"One word out o' that mouth of yours," whispered a ferocious voice in his ear, "and ye'll die a traitor's death."

Not a word did Elberg say. The curtains were drawn, the interior of the carriage was dark as pitch, and Elberg had not the faintest idea in what direction they were going. Casey lit a cigar and began to smoke.

. . . . . .

It is the height of military genius to be able, upon the spur of the moment, to change the entire plan of attack in order to take advantage of an unexpected opportunity. Both Alexander the Great and Napoleon were adepts at this. It was Alexander who, at the battle of Arbela—but, no!—Let us stick to Levy and the battle of the Star assembly rooms.

It was a busy night for this popular meeting place. Lipsky, the manager, was standing in the doorway when Levy arrived.

"Hell, Levy!" exclaimed Lipsky. "Going to the Cohen wedding?"

"The Cohen wedding?" said Levy in surprise. "Ain't the Elberg-Seligman wedding here tonight?"

"Sure," said the manager. "We got three weddings, two banquets, and a lodge meeting tonight. But the Cohen wedding is the swell affair. Old man Seligman just took the little room on the third floor."

For one instant Levy stood plunged in thought. Then he seized the manager by the arm.

"Say, Lipsky," he said, "maybe you'll be able to do me a big favor tonight, and if you do there'll be $50 in it for you."

"For that price it ought to be a murder," said Lipsky, grinning.

"Please just wait down here a little while and I'll come back and tell you all about it," said Levy. He hurried upstairs. Seligman's guests had begun to assemble in one room while Seligman and his daughter were with a few intimate friends in an anteroom. Dora caught sight of Levy's face at the door—hers was as pale as his—and, seeing her father engaged in conversation, she joined him in the corridor.

"Dora," he whispered, "I arranged everything, but I'm worried. If I lost you now I'd want to die. I hate even to take a chance. Listen! This place is just full of rabbis tonight. Let's go downstairs and get married by one, anyway. Then we can come back and I'm sure I can get away with everything."

Dora came close to him. She was trembling. She raised her face to his.

"I'll do anything you say," she whispered. The perspiration stood upon Levy's brow.

"Gosh, Dora," he exclaimed, "I'd give three fingers off my hand if I could kiss you now. But—I made a promise—come—quick"

If ever a man really earned $50 in a short space of time it was Lipsky, the manager of the Star assembly rooms. Within five minutes he had brought a bewildered rabbi to an unoccupied lodge room.

"I'll be one witness," he said. "How'll a waiter do for the other?" Levy nodded.

"But der merriage litsence," cried the rabbi, evidently hoping that Levy did not possess one. Levy handed the document to him.

"It was made out three hours ago," he said. "Now come, Rabbi. Remember I'm an orphan and I've got to catch a train."

"And he's a friend of mine, Rab," said Lipsky. "Everything's all right and I'm responsible."

The ceremony was brief but binding.

"Come on, Dora," cried Levy when the last word was spoken and the certificate had been signed. "You must go upstairs now. The real business is going to begin." But Dora did not move. She stood gazing reproachfully at her husband. And then Levy saw light and gave a great cry. Lipsky drew the rabbi out of the room.

"You'd better go upstairs and finish that Cohen job," he said.

The waiter who had been the second witness rubbed his eyes with his napkin and tiptoed out of the room. Levy kissed Dora as a man kisses a woman but once in his lifetime.

. . . . . .

Dora found her father looking at his watch and frowning.

"I don't know what's keeping Max," he exclaimed, peevishly.

"Let's go out in the other room," said Dora, whose face was now flushed with radiant happiness. "The guests will be impatient."

There were perhaps twenty people in the room, and, as Seligman entered, the first person he beheld was Levy, walking rapidly toward him.

"Hello, Mr. Seligman," cried the young man. "Can I have two minutes with you?"

"How did you get here?" asked Seligman, dumfounded.

"I took the Clinton street car," said Levy. And then Seligman suddenly became aware of the fact that his daughter had taken the young man's hand. It was Dora who led her father to a corner of the room.

"Look here, Mr. Seligman," said Levy—and Dora thought he looked so manly that she wanted to kiss him then and there—"you never gave Dora a chance. If she'd 'a married that Elberg she would have been miserable. And you would have felt bad, too. So we decided to save you. We love each other. If you was young like us you'd know what it means. I got a couple of thousand dollars saved up and I got a good job. I don't need a cent from you and I ain't going to take it, either. But I'm going to marry Dora. That Elberg fellow ain't going to show up. I fixed it—me—Sam Levy. If I have to go to jail for it, I'll go to jail. But I just wanted to show you that I'm in earnest. Now, what's your proposition? Do you want to disappoint all these people or do you want to have a wedding? If I go out now, Dora will come with me. Do you want everybody to give you the ha-ha, or do you want to tell these people that there was just a mistake in the wedding announcement, and the name was Levy instead of Elberg? And—I'll tell you something more, Mr. Seligman—just to show you I mean what I say—you ain't going to have more than two seconds to think it over."

Seligman leaned against the wall, dazed. His daughter took his head between her hands.

"Please say 'yes,' papa," she said. "Please make me happy."

Levy gazed at her father's face. He was quick to detect the indecision written there. He turned to the assembled guests, who, aware that something unusual was transpiring, had become restless.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he began. But Seligman, suddenly roused, seized him by the shoulders.

"What are you going to say?" he demanded. Then Levy smiled for the first time.

"I was just going to ask where the rabbi is," he said. And now Dora stepped forward, ignoring them both, and filled with a sudden, high resolve, turned to the guests. Her eyes were shining, her countenance fairly glowed.

"I've broken my engagement with Mr. Elberg," she said. "I found that I—I had made a mistake. It's all very sudden, but—but I love my—I'm going to marry Mr. Levy."

"My God!" cried Levy. "Ain't that a wife to be proud of?"

And, before then all, he clasped her in his arms and kissed her passionately.

To describe the scene that ensued and make the description at all coherent would be as tedious as it would be unsatisfactory. The women, sensing romance, flocked about the girl, and all talked at the same time. The men, more awkward, congratulated Levy—some even congratulated the bewildered Mr. Seligman—and then began to chatter of other things. Levy, however, sought out the rabbi.

"Say," he whispered fiercely into that dignitary's ear, as, at the same time, he pressed a roll of bills into his hand, "get this business finished, quick, won't you? I got to beat it out of here."

There fell a hush upon the gathering. Levy and Dora took their places under the canopy and the reading of the marriage ritual was begun. Seligman, nervous, disconcerted, excited, worried—oh, thoroughly miserable—kept moaning a sort of wailing undersong to the rabbi's recital.

The moment the ceremony was completed Levy threw his arms around his father-in-law's neck and kissed him upon the cheek.

"Now you just be a good scout," said he, "and don't worry. You'll never be sorry. I'm going to be a regular son to you."

As he turned away Seligman, his mind all a-whirl, called after him, "You dropped something."

Levy picked up a sheet of paper that had fallen from his pocket, glanced at it and smiled.

"That's the wedding certificate we got downstairs," said he. "I ain't taking any chances."

. . . . . .

Having started over the Williamsburg bridge, Fogarty, from force of habit, drove to the cemetery. Here he stopped to light his pipe while Casey and his prisoner alighted.

"I guess," said Casey, looking at his watch, "an hour here will be long enough. After that I'll be taking ye back. What d'ye think, Fogarty?"

"From what ye told me that Levy said," answered Fogarty, "an hour ought to be enough."

Max Elberg seated himself upon a tombstone. Throughout the ride Casey had not spoken a word. The prospect of being taken back to town filled Elberg with relief.

"Could you excuse me," he asked, "if I want to know why you took me away?"

"Why, ye dirty little blackguard," said Casey, quite amiably, "d'ye think I was going to sit by and let ye play tricks on Ireland?"

"Ireland?" repeated Elberg, blankly. "I got nothing to do with Ireland."

"O, of course not," said Casey with a sneer. "Maybe ye wasn't on your way to the Star Assembly rooms to meet a friend o' yours."

Elberg's bewilderment was too sincere for even Casey to ignore.

"I was on my way to the Star Assembly rooms to get married!"

Casey's cigar dropped from his fingers. He stared at his prisoner.

"Ye wasn't going to meet an Englishman?" he asked. "Are ye lyin'?"

"On the Torah I swear," cried Elberg, earnestly, "I was going to be married with Miss Seligman tonight."

Casey's face fell. A sudden misgiving found its way into his consciousness.

"D'ye know Levy?" he asked. Elberg shook his head.

"I know a dozen Levys," he said. "One of them came to me and said he wasn't going to let me marry Miss Seligman because he wanted to marry her himself."

Casey's mind, as a rule, worked slowly. But now, with astonishing swiftness, a panoramic review of his past relations with Levy flashed before his mental vision. He looked up and met the gaze of Fogarty, his employer.

"Is it likely," asked Fogarty, "that your friend Levy could be telling a lie?"

Casey drew a long breath, which issued from his lips in the form of a profound sigh.

"He's been known to," said he.

"I guess," said Fogarty, "we'd better be drivin' back. You can telephone to the Assembly rooms and find out about that wedding matter. But I'm thinking, Casey, you're a goat!"

. . . . . .

The letter came to Casey from Niagara Falls.

"I know you're sore," it ran, "but if you knew how happy I am you'd think twice about it. I'm a new man, Casey, and I owe a lot to you. My father-in-law fixed everything with that Elberg fellow so he won't sue you for damages. You wouldn't have done it if I'd told you the truth. But I was in a hole and you was the only man who could help me out. Besides, you remember the time you licked me? Well, there wasn't any reason for that last kick. So now we're square.

"When we get back we're going to invite you to dinner with us. My wife says she's a great cook. Now, don't be sore. I always stood by Ireland, didn't I? And ain't we having enough trouble with Palestine? I told my wife all about you, and she says she's going to give you a kiss when we get back."

Casey read and re-read the letter many times. Then he turned to Fogarty.

"I'll bet ye," said he, "if Palestine ever gets free that fellow Levy'll be president of it some day."

The ALGERIAN MURDERERS

This is the eighth of a series of short stories by Maj. C. E. Russell, a provost marshal with the A. E. F. in France. Each of these stories is based on actual experiences of the major while in France and throws light upon a side of the service which has been little understood.

"THAT, general, was the finish of the wine swindle. We were successful in arresting all the leaders, and now I hope things will run quietly for a while. We have, I believe, completed all the big cases, consequently I am planning on taking it easier and giving my men a chance to rest; so, if the general is willing, I will give some of them seven days' leave with permission to visit Nice."

This conversation took place in the office of the commanding general of base section No. 2, on the day after my return from Paris, where I had been attending the court-martial case of those men whom we had arrested in the wine swindle.

"I am sorry, major, but I do not wish you to let any of your men go on leave just now. For the last two weeks this city has been the scene of five murders and twelve holdups—the victims in each case being French civilians. The French claim that the crimes were committed by two American Negroes. It may be so—their statements may be true—but I doubt it. However, it's up to you to ascertain the truth and capture the criminals, for the French police seem powerless to apprehend them."

"But, general," I replied, "that surely is a matter for the French to handle—it is a civilian and not a military case."

"Possibly so!" said the general, "but Gen. Halloran (the French commandant of the district) has been making quite a stir over this, claiming that we are the ones who should handle the case since the criminals are evidently American Negroes."

Regarding this, I believed that there was some mistake, for the military police were very active; moreover, orders had been issued that no Americans could be in the city after 9 o'clock at night and the police were arresting all who did not obey the order.

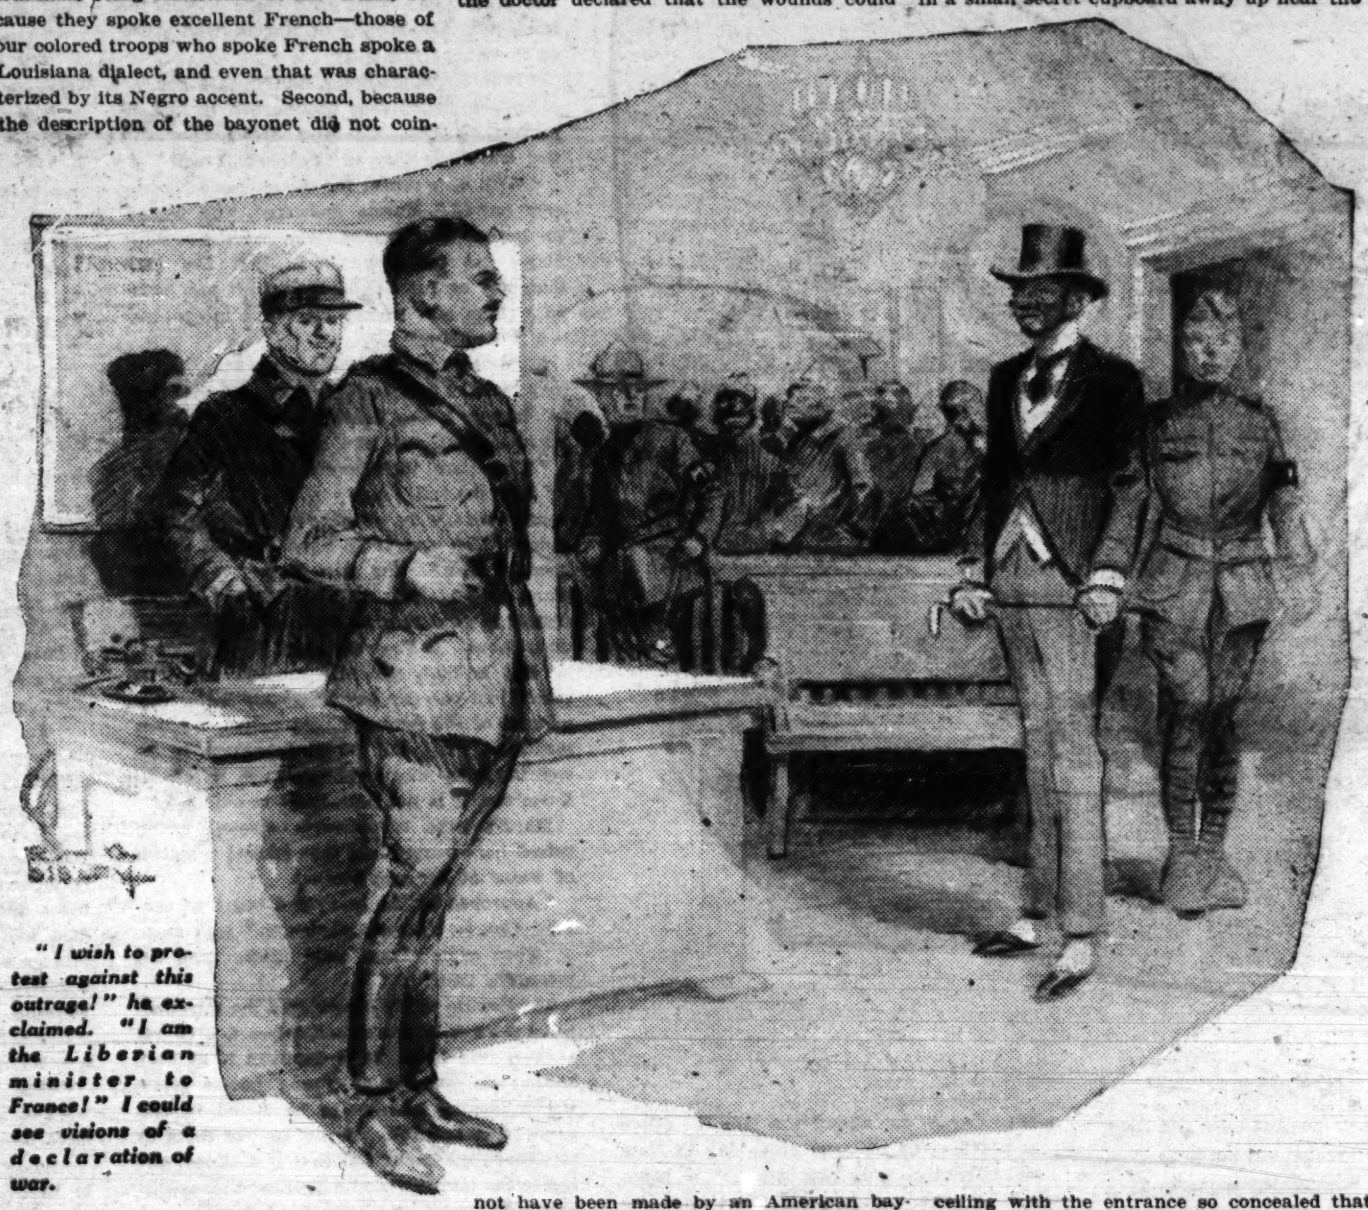
I summoned Capt. B——, who was my assistant and in charge when I was away, and from him I learned that every morning for the last two weeks reports were received from the French police regarding either a murder or a holdup—and the victim was always a Frenchman. The reports always stated: "Without doubt the crime was committed by two American Negroes. The French authorities request prompt action on the part of the Americans to prevent these desperadoes from committing further crimes."

I was well aware that the French were prone to insist that all crimes were perpetrated by the Americans. Experience had shown that it was always the Americans who committed the crimes and, even when we had proved that the criminal was French, they would assure us that it was remarkable that a Frenchman would do such a thing or so far forget himself as to commit a crime, and that while in this case the criminal surely was a Frenchman, still the case was unique, as there were no real criminals in France now—the war had changed them all. Never an apology would we receive for the false accusations.

I asked Capt. B—— what steps had been taken to capture the criminals, to which he replied: "I have had men in civilian clothes out each night, but the force is so small and the city is so large that we have not been able to accomplish anything. They may be American Negroes, as the French claim, for investigation at the camp at Bassens proves that there are over twenty American Negroes posted there as deserters. It is almost impossible to find them, however, owing to the fact that we have Algerian, French, English, and American Negroes throughout the city."

My first move was to have all the people who had been robbed brought to my office, where I interrogated them. Their stories were all similar: The victim was stopped in a dark spot by two Negroes dressed in khaki who, with bayonets in their hands, ordered: "Hands up!" If the victim attempted fight he was killed. They searched the man, took all his valuables; and if his clothes appealed to them, they proceeded to take them also. After robbing the man, they hit him over the head with the butt of their bayonets and, while he was unconscious, made their escape. Further questioning brought out the fact that these two Negroes spoke excellent French, that they were exceedingly black, and that their teeth were not white like those of our own men. They wore regulation uniforms and overseas caps. Not one of those who had been held up could, however, give us a clear description of either the men or their uniforms. The only statement that they could make was: "American Negroes dressed in American uniform."

An analysis of these stories soon convinced us that there was a grave doubt about these criminals being Americans at all. First, because they spoke excellent French—those of our colored troops who spoke French spoke a Louisiana dialect, and even that was characterized by its Negro accent. Second, because the description of the bayonet did not coincide with the bayonet issued to the American troops—however, it did answer the description of the French weapon. (Of course due allowance had to be made for the fright and excitement of the victim.) Third, because practically every American Negro has exceptionally white teeth; and white teeth are the exception rather than the rule among other types of colored men that we met in France—even the better class of French people remarked many times upon the characteristic trait of good teeth that both the white and the colored American soldier possessed.



"I wish to protest against this outrage!" he exclaimed. "I am the Liberian minister to France!" I could see visions of a declaration of war.

Our deductions were one thing; the next was to prove them and capture the criminals. Careful plans were laid and then put into execution. Our first move was to quietly strengthen the military police force, and for this purpose police from the outlying stations were called into the city. These men were instructed in detail and then placed on patrols around the town. Then one morning I had the commanding general issue orders that for forty-eight hours no troops were to be given passes to come into the city. Orders were also issued that all American soldiers who were employed in the headquarters offices in the city should be given a special form of pass. Even these men were not to remain on the streets, but were to pass from their offices directly to their quarters. Instructions were issued to the military police to arrest every American found on the street during this forty-eight hour period who did not have a proper pass giving him the right to be in the city. Guards were placed on all roads leading into Bordeaux, with instructions to refuse entrance to any one unless on urgent official business and even in that case they were obliged to have a pass signed by a staff officer.

This plan netted us a motley crowd of soldiers and a few officers. We arrested several Negroes who were A. W. O. L. That night I was congratulating myself upon the success of the plan, meanwhile intending to have the various persons who had been robbed try to identify the prisoners, when my telephone rang. It was the French police.

They reported that they had just found under the bridge leading to Bassens the body of another civilian stabbed to death. I jumped into my auto and immediately went to the scene of the crime, taking the headquarters medical officer with me. We found the French police there by the body. Examination showed that the man had been killed by a sharp, narrow bladed knife, and the doctor declared that the wounds could not have been made by an American bayonet. The pockets had been rifled and once again even the passport had been taken.

At the Bassens end of the bridge I had stationed an officer and four of the military police to prevent any American from passing over the bridge to the city. I at once crossed this bridge and, upon questioning these men, all swore that no one had passed over the bridge that day.

It was very evident that our plans had failed to capture the criminals and that they must be laughing at us, even while we were cleaning up the city. Detectives whom I had placed in Spanish Town (the slum and dive district of Bordeaux) reported that there were Negroes of all types in that part of the city. Ever since I had been in charge at the base I had placed Spanish Town "off limits" and military police had been stationed at every street that led into the district; furthermore, I knew that no one in American uniform could pass through this cordon. It was impossible, however, to overlook the fact stated in the reports of my detectives, so I called in the French for a conference.

As a result of the conference we planned to concentrate our efforts upon this district and raid the entire locality in an endeavor to clean it up. Arrangements were made accordingly, and at 9 o'clock we descended upon this place with a regiment of American troops, a battalion of French military police, a score of American and French detectives, and my entire organization of military police. The French chief of police was there, and with him all his commissaire de police and the entire force of police dogs. At each street intersection leading into this district I placed three American soldiers and a French policeman. These men were given orders not to allow any one to pass out, but to admit any who desired to enter the district. Raiding parties of one French policeman with a dog, one American, and one French detective with five American military police, all commanded by an American officer, visited every house in this district and searched it thoroughly. When you realize that this district covered thirty square city blocks, you will understand something of the gigantic task we had set ourselves to do. The place was divided off into sections and the raiding parties started out. The French chief and myself, establishing headquarters in the center, awaited results.

The orders were to bring in all who were colored, regardless of nationality. Some were found in clever hiding places. One house that netted us three had them hidden in a small secret cupboard away up near the ceiling with the entrance so concealed that it was not noticeable until the police dog attracted our attention to it by trying to climb up the wall.

By 10 o'clock the prisoners began to arrive. Algerian, French, English, and American Negroes—some deserters and some civilians—were found, arrested, and brought to headquarters. We had about sixty of all nationalities, and were busily engaged in examining them, when the door opened and, looking up, I saw a very tall and dignified colored man enter.

He was dressed in the extreme of fashion—frock coat, striped trousers, tall silk hat, white gloves, white spats, patent leather shoes, and he sported a cane. "I wish to protest against this outrage!" he exclaimed. "I claim the rights of protection of my government! I am the Liberian minister to France! I was on my way to Paris to present my credentials and remained over in this city for the night, only to be arrested!"

This was a bit disconcerting. I could see visions of a declaration of war, a court martial for me, and a bad mixup all around. In any event, I apologized and asked him to be seated, telling him all about the raid and what it was for. He still refused either to accept the apology or to listen to reason; so I asked the officer who had brought him in where he had been found. When told, I remarked to him that I did not believe the situation in which he found himself would be helped when the French learned the kind of a house he was frequenting. This phase of the matter seemed to calm him down and I at length persuaded him to be seated and to watch the workings of the raid. I finally sent him back to his hotel in my automobile—and I will venture to say that this particular person has a wholesome regard for our military police.

A short time later one of our patrols brought in several officers from a Brazilian battleship then in the harbor. Once more I could see visions of international complica-

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

SYNOPSIS

Sydney Penfold Isham Chester Elting, whose initials won for him at school the obvious nickname, Spice, comes back to America expecting to find it a dull place after his adventures as an aviator in France. Before he has been home two days, however, things begin to happen. From the studio in which he has taken temporary quarters he sees three men breaking into the home of Bernardo Aria, a famous financier. He helps Aria shoot down the marauders, who prove to be emissaries of a band of anarchists, against whom the financier is secretly operating on behalf of the government, and on volunteering his aid in the fight is engaged to pilot Aria on trips to Washington by airplane. Then Spice receives a call from Marcia Briggs, his newly acquired step-sister. His father, an admiral, married a widow while his son was in France, and Spice, deeply hurt, has declared he will have nothing to do with the family, but he finds it hard to resist Marcia's breezy camaraderie. And to complicate matters further, he is convinced that he has fallen in love with Aria's beautiful daughter, Esther. Meanwhile the conspirators meet at a dive known as the 101 club and make new plans for the murder of Aria, delegating one of their number to get a job as steward on the Elting yacht, which the financier frequently visits. Spice is invited to the Arias' country home near New York, where, at dinner, he meets Dr. Adrian Isaacs, Aria's chief aide.

THIRD INSTALLMENT.

The Invisible Cordon.

THE dinner was simple and delicious. No wine was served, and Mr. Aria commented on its absence with a smile of resignation. "I must say that I miss a glass or two of champagne, especially when tired, as I am tonight," said he. "But since the country has ordained total prohibition we might as well accustom ourselves to it, whether we approve the measure or not, as one can scarcely take pride in one's citizenship without obeying the letter of the law." Spice noticed that he scarcely touched the meat courses and wondered from what source he extracted his dynamic force.

After dinner Isaacs invited Spice to a game of billiards. Both were good players and found themselves quite evenly matched, the odds being possibly with the doctor, whose cue work was more brilliant in spots but less even. As they finished their string he said:

"I'm jolly glad you've come, Elting. I've been worried sick. Taking care of the chief is more than a one man job, and I've had the deuce of a time making him see it that way. His life will not be safe a minute of the day or night until this program of his gets put through—if it does get put through. Aside from all personal considerations, he is too valuable a man for the country to lose."

"From what source do you think the danger is most apt to come?" Spice asked.

Isaacs shook his head. "Who knows? From the side least expected. I wish it were six months from now."

"You think he'll be safe if his measure is put through?"

"O, yes. There's no personal spite or revenge or anything of that sort. The ruthless heads of this organization merely want him put out of the way before he can block their movement, and their assassins are only tackling the job for what it's worth to them. He's pretty safe here, I think, but the trouble is that, like all really big men intent on some important political undertaking, Mr. Aria forgets his caution once in a while—like the other night. If it hadn't been for you they would probably have got him."

"It was just a bit of luck, my going up on the roof for a breath of air."

"Well, I like to think it was rather more than that. Who knows—perhaps he might have received a warning from some other invisible source—but it's scarcely the thing to bank on. There's no fear at all in Bernardo Aria. When you get to know him better you'll come to feel about him as I do—that he is something more than a mere human mortal. Perhaps I may be something of a hero worshiper, but I can tell you, Elting, that sometimes it seems to me as if I had been given some great sacred trust. It's beginning to get my goat. I came up here about a month ago and made this place about as murder proof as is humanly possible, but all the same my feet are not always as comfortably warm as I like to wear 'em. Come with me and I will show you something."

He led the way upstairs and into his own room, where he unlocked a door of heavy oak and switched on the lights of what appeared to be a small laboratory, well equipped for chemical analysis. "One of my tedious, self-imposed duties is to subject samples of all the food from the markets for our table to a few simple tests," said Isaacs. "I've made quite a study of toxocology, and know most of the principles apt to be employed. But here is my real chef d'oeuvre—nothing original, of course, except in thoroughness of method."

Reaching for a swinging electric lamp, he gave the twisted wire a slight tug, when a small panel in the wall swung open to disclose an apparatus similar to the central telephone switchboard of a hotel or large private establishment. Glancing more closely at this, Spice saw that the switches were variously and in some cases rather curiously indicated. Most were such as one might have expected, different servants' rooms in the house and stables and garage and hangar. But others were labeled "Front Gates," "Back Gate," "Wall Corner," "Garden Summer House," "Kiosk," "Landing," "Rocks."

"I see," said Spice. "You've fixed it so that you can telephone in a hurry from any part of the place."

Isaacs smiled. "No, not quite that. Put the receiver to your ear."

Spice did so. Isaacs threw on a switch marked "Garage." Spice immediately heard a blithe whistling and the rasping noise of a file. Then a boyish voice said with astonishing distictness: "Say, Jimmy, this new Jane of mine over in Belhaven sorta reminds me of a little cutie I met up with in London. How's that song go the Tommies sing? 'Same nose, same eyes, same hair, same size,' something like that."

"Dictaphones all over the shop," said Isaacs, as Spice hung up the earpiece. "They are not only in the various quarters of our personnel, but in places where plans for deviltry might be discussed or people prowling about the place might foregather. For instance, this 'Wall Corner' is such a spot, and the 'Kiosk,' a teahouse out on the end of the little promontory beyond the boat house, and the 'Rocks,' which is an overhanging ledge, almost a grotto, where anybody landing on the beach would be apt to go."

"Of course you are sure about your own people?" said Spice.

"Yes, practically so. But there is always the chance of a perfectly faithful servant being made a fool of. Danger might come in the shape of a beau of one of the maids, or a new chum of a chauffeur or stableman. This eavesdropping isn't a pleasant idea, of course, but I don't give a hang for the ethics of it if I can add another link to the chief's chain mail. Speaking of mail, I even go so far as to exercise a certain amount of censorship. The postman leaves it in a locked pillar box and I distribute it, sometimes looking it over. It all sounds beastly as the devil, doesn't it?"

"I suppose that's because we're at peace," said Spice. "Everybody took it for granted in time of war."

"Quite so. And about everybody was doing it. I made a good bit of study in doping out code letters in different languages. It's rather fascinating. After a bit of practice you get so that you can spot a phony letter instinctively, just as a bank teller or mint expert can spot a counterfeit without quite being able to tell why. The first impression is the most important. You seem to feel that that is not exactly the way in which the writer would have expressed the idea. Then you set to work to dig it out of the subject matter."

"Have you ever struck anything suspicious here?"

"No, but I make it a point to listen about the place several times in the course of the day or night, and I'd like to have you do the same." He slipped two keys from his ring and handed them to Spice. "Run in without knocking any time of the twenty-four hours, whether I'm here or not. You see, Elting, while I have no doubt that any of our people would defend Mr. Aria with his life if need be, I want to keep informed as to their habits and associates when off duty. This contraption of mine is rather like a pair of binoculars that can look around corners and through walls and see in the dark. It works out to supplement our feeble human faculties—like a dog's scent, or sixth sense."

"Espionage to the nth degree," murmured Spice. "Does Mr. Aria know about it?"

"Of course. When I showed it to him he shook his head and said that he didn't like it. Said he had perfect confidence in the loyalty of his servants. 'So did Julius Cæsar in that of his friends,' I answered, 'and Brutus, his best one, gave him the coup de grace.' I keep him surrounded with an invisible cordon of scientific safety devices. The place is belled and wired till you can't rest. If you prowl around at night don't be surprised at a sudden blaze of light."

A bell tinkled in the bedroom. "Look," said Isaacs, and Spice, glancing at the ceiling, saw a tiny brilliant spark in the center of an arabesque. "Mr. Aria has gone into his study," said Isaacs. "That pea light goes on when he seats himself in his desk chair and burns until he gets out of it."

"My word, but you've sure got him pretty well covered!" said Spice.

"Let's hope so," Isaacs answered. "I've suppressed the yacht this season. We really don't need her, and it would make just so many more people to keep an eye on. Your father will probably be lying off here a good part of the summer, but we shall not allow any of the crew to land on the place. There is no reason for their doing so, as the yacht club is nearer the town. The grounds are guarded at night by a reliable watchman, with the two chiens policiers and three airedales. So as far as I can see, about the only danger Mr. Aria runs is in his goings and comings, and that's your job, old top."

"Well," said Spice cheerfully, "if the bus breaks in two or a wing comes off, or anything of that sort, I shan't be here to suffer your reproaches. There's really less danger in flying than in automobiling if you know your business. No chance of getting hit by train or a trolley car, or drunks so far. When the air gets thick with joy riders it will be a different proposition. Mr. Aria says he likes altitude, so we'll climb high and follow the beach a good bit of the way. Look here, doctor, do you think my father is in any danger from these swine?"

"I really don't believe so, Elting. Mr. Aria is the whole show. He's the man they want. It's not only because he happens to be the prime mover, but because with his financial affiliations and influence he can bring all kinds of pressure to bear, not only throughout this country, but in others. Besides that, he's a regular central intelligence department, knows all their ins and outs and their moves before they are actually put in motion. Perhaps also the fact of his being such a quiet, inoffensive person may arouse some personal animosity or make them hope that repeated deadly attacks, even if unsuccessful, might get his goat."

"That one the other night ought to put a crimp in them," said Spice.

"It will probably raise the price of the job. We've made a number of arrests, but that was the first time we've bagged anybody. But I doubt if it stops their efforts. You see, Elting, the world has got suddenly plunged into a sanguinary epoch. The war and revolutions and anarchy have cheapened human life. Killings have lost their morbid horror. The public mind has become not unlike that of an ancient Roman populace and no longer balks at bloodshed. Look at our current literature and the movies. What would have been censored a few years ago as brutal and gory and unfit for anything but dime novels or a dime melodrama in the stock yards fails now to get the spinal shiver in a ladies' matinée. How could it be otherwise when millions and millions of us have been hard at it, slaughtering each other?"

Spice nodded. "You're right. That whirl the other night didn't give me the kick that a dog fight would have done before the war."

"Well, let's go down and have a little music," Isaacs suggested. "Esther's a good violinist and I saw the cello like a dub." He reached for the panel of the dictaphone system, then, as if on second thought, picked up the receiver, and, holding it to his ear, switched on the garage. "Getting the rubber ear habit," he began, then stopped. Spice, watching his face, saw an expression of annoyance deepen into one of strong displeasure. He listened for a few moments, then hung up the receiver with a frown.

"Here's a case in point," said he, vexedly. "No doubt it's of negative value, but it's just the sort of thing I want our people here to avoid. One of our chauffeurs tells the other that a fellow he met the other day in New York offered to put him next to a place where he could always get a drink after the first of July, some sort of a hole in the wall down in South Brooklyn, near the Erie basin, and known as the '101 club.' He wanted to take him down there yesterday afternoon."

"I suppose there will be no end of dives like that now," said Spice.

"No doubt. This lad of ours is a good chap, and declined the invitation for now or later. But I can't help wondering if there was anything behind the invitation. People are going to be pretty cautious about tipping off strangers to their blind tigers."

"It seems an out of the way place to ask a fellow to go for a drink," said Spice.

"Yes, and a tough neighborhood." Isaacs looked thoughtful for a moment, then took out his notebook and jotted down, "Investigate 101 club, South Brooklyn, near Erie basin."

Late one creamy afternoon in July a trim steam yacht glided in from the eastward and came to anchor about a quarter of a mile off the Arias' landing and about twice that distance from the yacht club. This pleasure packet, Sylvia by name, was the property of Admiral Boyd Elting, the gift of his newly wedded wife.

No sooner had the anchor splashed over the bow than there came another splash from off the rail of the quarter deck. This was caused by the delightful and athletic person of Miss Marcia Briggs, as in a crimson swimming suit and waterproof cap of the same color she bestowed it on the face of the smiling waters, which dimpled with pleasure at the gift.

Breaking the surface a few yards from where she had pierced it in her dive, Marcia rolled on her side and struck out shoreward with the practiced stroke of a long distance swimmer. Seated in their wicker deck chairs, the Admiral and Mrs. Elting watched the girl admiringly, and, knowing the freedom of the seas accorded her, with no anxiety. The bronzed Norwegian sailing master gave a quiet order, at which the yacht's dinghy took the water with a sailor at the oars, and he, while remaining at a respectful distance, kept the red cap under constant observation.

Marcia was not the only swimmer in the immediate vicinity, as she had become immediately aware. The afternoon was very hot, and some distance off the shore three heads were glistening, one a little farther out than the other two. This soon came within the immediate propinquity of Marcia, who greeted it without formality.

"Where bound, Spicy bud?" said she.

An astonished face was turned in her direction. "Why, it's Miss Step! How did you leave the City of Brotherly Love?"

"With deep regret for the shores of brotherly hatred," Marcia answered, and looked at Esther and Isaacs, who were paddling about not far away. "Is that the fair daughter of Judea, whose portrait you were so jealous of? Please introduce me to her —and Ben-Hur."

"This is a private bath, Miss Step, but if you insist I suppose I must. So that joy tub is your happy floating home? Is the admiral aboard, and Mrs. Ad?"

"Those are their august beans, sticking up over the rail. And yonder Italian renaissance barrack is where you are stationed. Spice? You appear to have made a pretty good landing." She gave Esther a curious stare. "Yes, that polished corner of the temple is good to gaze upon, though I could do without. Is she very nice?"

"She is that, and also modest, which is more than one can say of certain latter day persons of the feminine persuasion. Pardon me, Miss Step, but do you happen to be wearing a bathing suit? Because, so far as I can see, it is not noticeably in evidence."

Marcia gave a powerful stroke, which raised her bosom high, then kicked a splash of water at her step-brother.

"Approved by the Maryland board of censors, Charles Harper, chairman," said she.

"Then come along," said Spice, "and I'll introduce you."

They swam to the others, and the introductions were duly performed, when a little reception was held. It is doubtful if at that moment a quartet of young people more worth looking at was to be found in the same large bathtub. Marcia invited them to go aboard the yacht, but Esther declined, owing to the lateness of the hour, and presently swam in under the convoy of Isaacs, and at the same time they saw Mr. Aria walking down to the boathouse. He passed them in the launch a moment later on his way out to board the yacht and waved to Marcia, calling out that they were all to dine at the house that night.

"Then you had better beat it, Miss Step," said Spice. "I know how long it takes girls to dress."

"You don't know how long it takes this flicker, my little boy. Speed is my nickname, just as Spice is yours. Then I never have to bother with my hair, thanks to my recent descent from the woolly cave lady. If you want to go yourself, I'll race you straight in to the beach."

"You're on. For what?"

"A brotherly kiss against a sisterly slap. If I win I get the kiss. If I lose you get the slap."

"Let's see! Hold on! I don't quite get you."

"They're off!" She glanced back at him over her gleaming shoulder. "Well, if you don't like that bet, take it by the other end. If you win you get the kiss. If you lose you get the slap."

"Hold on! You're mixing it up. If I win which is slappee?"

"You, stupid! And if I win I am slapper and kissee."

"Then if I win I am slapped and kissed, and if I lose—now wait."

"You are kissed and slapped. It's plain enough. Don't you see? If you win——"

"Never mind. It's getting late. I'll try anything once. Get ready—set—go!"

They foamed shoreward. Spice was a strong swimmer, though not a particularly fast one. Doing his best, he was unable to drop the red cap in his wake, nor did it forge ahead of him. Side by side they tore through the still water, heading straight in for a tiny wedge of beach behind a jutting ledge. They reached it, grounded, and stood up in a breathless state, which made speech impossible. Marcia looked at him and laughed.

"Who won?" Spice gasped.

"Neither." Marcia waded out and dropped down on the sand. Spice followed her. For a moment or two they sat side by side, flushed, panting, eyes glowing at each other with admiration and combativeness, the eternal duel.

"Then the bet is off," said Spice.

"Of course not. We neither of us won, therefore we both lost."

"Nonsense! You might as well say we neither of us lost, therefore we both won."

"Well, have it that way if you like. Then we both get a kiss and a slap."

"Can't see it. We both keep our stakes." He looked with grudging approval at her round, glistening arms and the soft contour of throat and shoulders. "Where do you keep it? Some poule d'eau."

"What's that?"

"French for water chicken."

"I could have beaten if I wanted to."

"Why didn't you, then?"

"Because something tells me that you would be rather a poor loser, Buddy."

Spice sprang to his feet. "Look here, Miss Step. I won't take that from anybody. If you want to run it off I'll race you up the beach to that big rock sticking out on the end of that reef. Doubles or quits."

"All right. Perhaps it will do you good."

They waded out again, then swam a few yards beyond their depth.

"Ready."

"Go!" said Marcia, and the brine churned as they clawed forward. It was a short sprint this time, not much over fifty yards. Spice had confidently expected to win, thinking from Marcia's deep bosomed breathing that she would not prove equal to this quickly following spurt. Wherefore his astonishment and chagrin were great when, in the first half dozen strokes, she shot ahead of him as a speed launch might pass a puffing tug, steadily increasing her lead until the winning post was passed. Here, treading water gently, she watched his approach with a mocking smile.

"Was I right?"

"You were," Spice gurgled. "I see that I have been framed. The money is yours."

And before Marcia knew what was going to happen she found herself seized by one round shoulder, caught under the other arm, drawn close, and paid in full upon the briny lips, the final balance liquidated a foot or two beneath the surface. As their two heads bobbed up again Spice's ears were set ringing by the other part of the wager.

"My word, Buddy," said Marcia, "a little more and my heirs would have had to collect."

"You specified that it should be brotherly, and your end of it was sisterly enough. It recalls my early years. Better swim in and get your breath before you start back aboard."

They paddled to the shore and seated themselves in the shallow water. Marcia was a little pale. She looked at Spice, and it seemed to him that her eyes had grown suddenly dark. They were the tone and texture of the flat bands of algae swirling about their knees. A little shudder rippled through her.

"Get your breath and I'll swim back with you," said Spice. "You've gone and overdone it."

She gave a choking little laugh. "I almost think I have," and shuddered again. Spice felt a sudden pang of remorse.

"Come on," said he, "you're cold."

"I'm what?"

"Chilled, overtaxed."

"Rubbish!"

"Then why that shimmy?"

She looked at him aslant. "I was just thinking how near I came to being drowned, and that perhaps they are right in saying that it is a pleasant death. Swirling colors and music, and things—there, you're doing a shimmy yourself. Well, this will be about all for the first event. Don't swim back with me. It's getting late, and I must hurry. There is mother waving."

She slipped off into the water. Spice prepared to follow. Marcia gestured him back.

"No, I'd rather go alone. Besides, you couldn't keep up."

For the Formal Afternoon Tea

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK

by Corinne Lowe

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The other day I was looking at an afternoon dress from the great French house of Margaine-Lacroix. The back of the bodice and the sleeves were of gray velvet figured in the Persian palm. The front of the bodice and the skirt were of marron or chestnut brown velvet.

That same day I saw an evening frock made by M. Poiret. Here the back of cloth of silver was reconciled to a front of black velvet by a cowl of black velvet tipped with silver tassel. The skirt of black velvet was finished with pipings or green silk.

These two frocks are significant. Today we don't make a dress. We piece it—just as you would a quilt. In the whole realm of dinner, afternoon, and evening gowns there is a perfect passion for contrasting colors and materials. It is not a blameworthy passion. Far from it. Besides making the world safe for bright pictorial effects, it offers all sorts of economies. A skirt of brocade or faille from one old frock, a coat of velvet form another, and lo! we have an up to date frock.

It is the present mode of introducing several fabrics into one gown which we are showing in the above page of late afternoon costumes. At the left, for instance, is a stunning frock built of henna chiffon velvet over a foundation slip of henna satin with bold motifs of copper and gray embroidery. The short sleeves, the collar, and the front panel are all edged with blue fox fur. A hat of henna velvet and ostrich completes this costume.

You will see that the velvet upper section here is an adaptation of the redingote. A word about this model Early in the season we were convinced that fashion was going to be the goat—redin and Chinese. But at present New York sees comparatively little either of the Chinese goat (Mongolie) or of the redingote. Both are smart, but neither has by any means swamped the mode.

Skipping to the figure at the extreme right we find not only the use of contrasting materials but a number of other new features. The skirt drawn in about the ankles so as to produce the culotte or Turkish trouser effect, the nipped-in waist, the draperies at the sides—here is one of the very best silhouettes of the season.

Yet certainly the selection of material is sagacious enough in itself to command admiration. The bodice of black velvet with its petal-like points is continued into a narrow back panel looping up under the skirt of mahogany satin. The drapery of black and mahogany embroidered satin is repeated in a collar standing up in points about the throat above an interposing band of white fox. With this is worn a black velvet hat trimmed in quills of black and silver.

In good Queen Bess' time, when poor, misguided women never thought about being chic—merely pretty—velvet was the favorite way of going about being beautiful. This season we are as devoted to velvet as were the Elizabethans. Only—we make it look chic. Never, indeed, was there such a rage for velvet afternoon dresses. Taffeta, faille, duvetyn, georgette, crepe de chine—these are all used. But the rich pile fabric is decidedly the favorite of the hour.

Velvet is particularly good in the bright blue now so much used for both afternoon and dinner frocks. No wonder it has been elected! It makes the gold of Titian haired girl look like a portrait by somebody, and on the brunette with clear white skin it is almost esually successful. Bright blue is also used for evening frocks, particularly as a trimming. In one imported model I remember that the black satin skirt was completed by bodice and two floating panels of bright blue and silver lamé. Only another instance of the free way we help ourselves to several colors in one dress!

We show this tendency again more concretely in the figure next to the extreme right. In this charming model a tobacco brown velvet bodice is cast with a skirt of castor colored velours de laine trimmed in clipped lapin tinted the same shade. Narrow bands of this fur edge sleeves and collar. The hat is an old blue velvet trimmed with ostrich.

Cut off the upper section of the central figure and you say to yourself, "Bagdad!" Yet all that has been bagged is the skirt. Again this year among the various editions of skirts drawn in about the ankles we find an echo of the hobble. This costume is of prune colored velvet, is fitted in at the waist line, and is piped in old rose. Pipings, by the way, were never more used than at present. Collar and cuffs of this frock both benefit by a touch of silver and old rose embroidery and the former, you see, is a modification of the De Medici collar which is much used at present on wraps and even suit coats. With this costume is worn a hat of prune velvet and old rose satin. Also—this is, of course, Paris fantasy—prune satin shoes!

HOW TO MAKE FRUIT CAKE.

TO almost any cake batter we may add fruit. It is possible, or probable, that one might add finely cut up fruit even to an angel cake batter, if that was to be baked in quite small portions. It is certainly easy enough to add fruit to a sponge or sunshine cake batter, and angel cake is but white sponge cake.

A study of the recipes for modern fruit cakes of the batter type reveals the fact that they are nearly all cup cake batters or slight variations of that batter, plus one cupful or two of fruit, one cup of sugar, one-half cup of butter or substitute, two eggs, one-half cup of milk, two cups of flour more or less, and sometimes baking powder. To make a dark fruit cake, brown sugar and some portion of molasses are substituted for the white sugar, and spices are generally used as well as fruit. The commonest variations are those of the amounts of eggs, which may be increased by one or three, and of the milk and flour.

The point is to make a good batter which will hold up the fruit and have a desirable texture when baked. Nine cakes out of ten which we see have so little of real texture that we can say they have no quality, no fineness. Texture must be worked for, and it is not to be secured by beating the completed batter, as so many recipes advise. Eggs must be perfectly beaten. Sour milk or buttermilk should be beaten till like velvet. Sugar may be beaten into the eggs or, better, the whites, but flour should be folded into cakes.

A Sponge Cake Formula.

A sponge cake batter will produce a cake of fine texture, and be moist in quality, and cannot be easily broken down before it is ready for the oven, if the sugar is gradually beaten or folded into the whites of the eggs, which have been whipped to a snow. To perfect this batter the yokes should be folded into the whites and sugar, but not before they have been faithfully beaten to a light lemon color. After that the flour is folded in a little at a time, a little of the allotted portion being used on the fruit, which must be added a part at a time and folded in.

To the regulation five egg, one cup of sugar, one cup of flour sponge cake formula put together in this way, we may add one cup of fruit cut in bits, and extend its service several times by dropping the fruited batter in heaping teaspoon portions into the smallest muffin tins or in larger ones if we choose. Care must be taken to scant the batter sufficiently so that it will not rise and bulge over in a mushroom top. We cannot take the cakes from the tins easily in this case, and for nice effects they would need trimming. This is difficult and wasteful.

A half cup of citron, cut fine and another half cup of fruit, which may be a mixture of raisins, figs, and dates, gives good results. If baked in the small good mouthful size, fifteen minutes in a hot oven is sufficient time to allow. Let them cool in the pan, then take out and add a single blob of some simple icing, not for decoration but as a finish to the flavor, since this gives them a bonbon quality.

Care Prevents "Falling."

It is easy to get a flat topped little cake with a sponge batter, while the butter cake batters give us a little cake with a cone shaped top. It does no harm; in fact, it is the nature of a sponge cake when the batter was thin enough, to shrink on top when taken from the oven. That is not what is called "falling."

If the eggs are beaten sufficiently, pains are taken to extend the egg whites and keep them extended, and the whole batter making is as carefully prepared as though velvet were in making, there is little chance of its falling, even though it seems extra thin. Just to try out results I took out from the oven a small loaf of fruited sponge cake when it was puffy, but not cooked through, let it cool and the top shrink to level, then put it back into the oven and bake it till done. The top puffed back or "rose" to the same height as when it was taken out of the oven.

If the batter is thoroughly combined it is difficult to spoil a cake in the baking. Too much fire will give a raw center, which will fall if a cake has much bulk, but even that may be remedied by putting it back into a medium oven. It is not a good plan to practice baking cakes in any such fashion, but when our cake ingredients cost what they do today, we ought to know how to save the day.

Preparing Fruit Batter.

The thinner the batter the more likely is the fruit to settle to the bottom, but when a fruited sponge batter is cooked in like the covering of plain cake will be thin. The common method of preparing a fruit for a batter is to cut it fine and flour it with some of the flour allowed for the cake. A tablespoon of flour will do a lot of work. For butter batters, raisins and other fruits are sometimes kept separate by mixing them with a little melted butter.

Eggs were never quite so expensive at this season as now, and some cooks are looking for eggless cake recipes. An economical fruit cake base which may be spiced with a small measure of cloves, cinnamon, etc., and fruited within reason is: One cup of sugar, one-half cup of molasses, one cup of sour milk, one teaspoon of baking soda or more, according to character of molasses, one and a half cups of Graham flour, one cup of white flour.

Variation of Cup Cake Batter.

A variation of the cup cake batter (an additional egg and a trifle more flour), one of the English or Irish fruit cakes which have a yellow body heavily besprinkled with currants and our smallest raisins, is: One cup of well-sifted sugar, one-half cup of butter, three eggs, scant half cup of milk, two cups of flour, one teaspoon of baking powder, one teaspoon of mixed spices, one cup of currants, one-half cup of sultanas, two ounces of candied peel, which may be omitted, line baking tin with paper, and leave on the oxite, if you wish to keep it for some time. The paper keeps it from drying out.

A popular variation of the cup cake batter on which both fruit and nuts may be added and the top decorated with candied fruits and nuts is: One cup of sugar, one-half cup of butter, one-half cup of milk, two eggs, one and one-half cups of pastry flour, and two teaspoons of baking powder if you must. If you manipulate the eggs well you can dispense with baking powder. Sift a scant teaspoon of cinnamon with the flour and flavor with a fourth teaspoon of almond extract if you use one-half cup of nut meats cut fine and one-half cup of mixed fruits.

When the top of this cake is thickly decorated with a variety of fruit and nuts, say with a border, three raisins made of halves of almond meats and with a cherry center, filled around with pecan meats, and little bits of strips of candied fruits, you get the best possible effect for the money and time you spend.

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of medicine size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Sixteen level tablespoons equal one cup (one-half pint). The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery.

PIMIENTO AND PIMENTO.

IT is a common error in recipes to confuse pimiento and pimento, which are much less alike than their spelling might lead one to believe.

Pimiento is the name of a mild, sweet Spanish pepper that is imported in cans from Spain. They are also now grown successfully in California, and only recently I had fine specimens given to me that were grown in Michigan.

Pimento (Pimenta officinalis), or allspice, as it is generally known, has a flavor which is suggestive of the combined flavors of many spices. Hence its name. The highest quality Pimento comes from Jamaica. The berry is also grown in Mexico, but is inferior both in flavor and quality.

Cream one-half cup of butter and lard. Add gradually one cup of rolled soft brown sugar, one-half cup of molasses, and the yolks of four eggs, beaten until thick, and lemon tinted. Sift together two and one-third cups of bread flour, one-fourth teaspoon of salt, one teaspoon of soda, one-half tablespoon of baking powder, one and one-half teaspoons of cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoon each of allspice and cloves, one-half teaspoon of nutmeg. Sift dry ingredients twice and add one cup of sultana raisins (seedless raisins), one-half cup of currants, and three-fourths cup of nut meats broken in pieces. Mix thoroughly and add to first mixture with one cup of sour milk. Beat one minute and turn into well greased brick-shaped bread pans (bottoms lined with two thicknesses of brown paper well greased) and bake forty-five minutes in a moderate oven.

The following recipe for standard white layer cake will dispose of the remaining whites of the four eggs.

Cream one-half cup of butter, add gradually one and one-fourth cups of fine granulated sugar, stirring constantly. Sift together one and seven-eighths cups of flour, three teaspoons of baking powder, and a few grains of salt; add to first mixture alternately with one-half cup of milk, add one teaspoon of flavoring (one-half teaspoon each of lemon and vanilla is a pleasing combination). Beat batter thoroughly, then cut and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of four eggs. Bake in two well buttered and floured square layer cake pans fifteen minutes in a moderately hot oven. If the instructions given for measuring ingredients that precede my articles are strictly followed, together with those given in the recipes, there need be no failures even with the amateur in cookery.

Roast Venison.

Venison for a saddle should always be prepared at the market. If a leg of venison is used it is prepared and cooked the same as mutton. Have the bone removed from the leg, wipe, stuff if desired, truss, and place in a deep dripping pan. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, and dredge with flour. Roast in a hot oven, basting every fifteen minutes with melted butter; allow ten minutes for each pound of venison. Serve with currant jelly sauce.

Venison being a dry meat, it is always best to lard the entire upper surface of the roast with fat salt pork, lardoons. Venison is rarely ever stuffed and when it is perhaps chestnut stuffing is the most desirable.

To make this, cut a half inch cross on the flat side of one quart of large chestnuts. Put them into a shallow pan and allow one-half a teaspoon of butter or olive oil for each cup of chestnuts. Shake the pan over a low fire until each nut is well covered with the fat. Then place the pan in a moderate oven and let stand from five to eight minutes. Remove from the oven and with a small sharp pointed knife peel off the shells. By this method the shells and brown skins are removed at the same time. Cook the meats in boiling salted water until soft. Drain, mash, and press through a ricer. Season with one teaspoon of flour. Cook one-half cup of salt pork qubes in an iron frying pan, remove scraps, arrange hare in the pan and cook until brown on one side, then turn and brown the other side. Have ready a deep earthen casserole; place a layer of hare in the bottom of dish, cover with a thin layer of thinly sliced onion and small cubes of fat salt pork; continue until the hare is used; add one cup each of brown stock and thick tomato puree. Cover and cook in a slow oven three hours. Remove hare to hot serving dish, thicken the liquor with two tablespoons of butter and flour cooked together; stir until well blended and the boiling point is reached; then strain over hare. Serve with a border of hot, well seasoned boiled rice. This is a genuine Creole dish.

Halibut Sandwiches.

Finely chop one pound of cold boiled halibut steak. Season with one-half teaspoon of salt, one-half teaspoon of paprika, two teaspoons of lemon juice, and a few drops of onion juice. Add one-half cup of heavy cream that has been beaten until stiff and the whites of three eggs beaten until stiff. Turn mixture into a small well buttered brick shaped mold and cook in the oven until firm. Chill and remove from mold; cut in thin slices crosswise and use as filling between thinly sliced white bread that has been lightly spread with mayonnaise dressing. Serve with cucumber salad.

Have You Ever Tried This Way of Washing Your Clothes?

A number of women have written us about it, and it sounds interesting. It may or may not appeal to you. We simply present it in the hope that it may save you a lot of hard work. You are the best judge of that.

These housewives tell us they have done away with washday—that is, they wash a few clothes each day instead of all the soiled clothes on one day. They say the "few-pieces-at-a-time" plan is easier.

They soak the clothes over night in a solution made of

Fels-Naptha Soap

with lukewarm water. No boiling is necessary. This saves fuel. While soaking, the naptha dissolves the dirt. This saves hard rubbing.

By doing a little each day or several times a week you may find this new way of washing a big help.

Talk it over with your neighbor and see what she thinks about it.

How to Use the Patterns

If you have any question relating to sewing that you would like to have answered write to Clotilde, Chicago Tribune, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope.

No. 9426 has nothing that the home sewer will find especially difficult in the making, but if a wash material is used it will be wise to shrink and set the color before cutting out. If a dress shrinks in the first laundering (and it is almost sure to do so), it is not always possible to change it satisfactorily. Three gills of salt to four quarts of boiling water, dissolved in the water, will set all colors but blue. The cloth is put in the water as soon as salt is dissolved, and allowed to stay until water is cold.

Let the cloth hang until just damp enough to iron easily, and press it perfectly straight and smooth. If one is to do good work an iron must be ready to use at any time. And the iron ready for use before beginning to sew. ing board and iron should be put out It is impossible to do accurate work with rumpled material.

Both neck finishings of the dress shown are pretty, so it will doubtless be a question of which is more becoming. If the one with the collar in back is chosen a hint or two about making it may be a help. The under side of the collar lining is joined to the front in a seam that comes on the upper side of the rever. The seam must be pressed open. Then the front facing and the outside of the collar are joined in a seam on the wrong side, the seam is pressed open, and the outside section basted and stitched to the under, and the upper part turned right side out, making a tiny clipping in the seam each side of the point at the bottom in the front, so there will not be a pucker. Baste carefully around the seamed edge, and then turn in the opposite edge, baste and hem down to the dress by hand.

The one piece apron, 9391, will delight many a young housekeeper, it is so easy to make and so good looking. Percale is one of the most satisfactory materials for this purpose, although some may prefer gingham. When putting the seams together see that the fold from the edge of the sleeve to the shoulder is smooth, not showing even a slight tendency to twist. There are several ways that the seams can be finished—French seams, overcasted, or felled ones. Great care should be taken at the curve just under the arm, or there will surely be a tear before long. If overcasting is used as a finish it will be all right providing the stitches are rather shallow and even, where the curve comes hem a narrow bias facing over the seam, first clipping the seam in several places so the edges can spread, letting the facing extend about one inch beyond the curved place at each end. This will keep it from tearing. Some women set a two inch gusset in exactly where the curve comes, which serves to strengthen.

. Around the neck and sleeve edges the material should be turned to the right side and the trimming, with both edges turned in evenly, basted down and stitched, the neck corners being mitred.

The nightdress, 9439, showing both high and low neck and long and short sleeves, will be suitable for outing flannel or cambric or other lingerie material. When one wishes an outing flannel gown a pattern like the one shown is especially desirable because it has no gathers to make it clumsy and bunchy. Where the flannel has to be pieced (if it isn't wide enough) a felled seam, hemmed down by hand, should be used, making it when finished about three-eighths inch wide. If it is too narrow it will be hard. The fullness should be plaited into the band at the wrist and the band made plenty large enough to slip on and off easily.

A nice finish for the edge of the collar is to make a quarter inch turn to the right side and use a catch stitch to hold it down, and then cover the edge with a narrow linen lace, stitching it down twice, once on the upper edge of the lace and the second time through the lace just along the edge of the collar; this will cover the upturned edge perfectly.

If outing flannel is allowed to dry thoroughly and is then folded and laid with other dampened clothes it will iron beautifully and be smooth and wonderfully soft; but if it is sprinkled and ironed while damp it makes it harsh and stiff.

There is no prettier trimming for the nightdress showing the open neck than a small embroidered scallop with the eyelets below the neck for ribbon to be run through.

Knots are never used in embroidery. Small running stitches are made around the outline of the scallops and then the padding is done. A soft darning cotton is good for this, and a chain stitch makes good padding. The padding is always made heavier in the widest part of the scallop and graduated down towards the corners. The fineness of the material and the beauty of the work rather than elaborate trimming are what make lingerie dainty and attractive.

The HOME HARMONIOUS

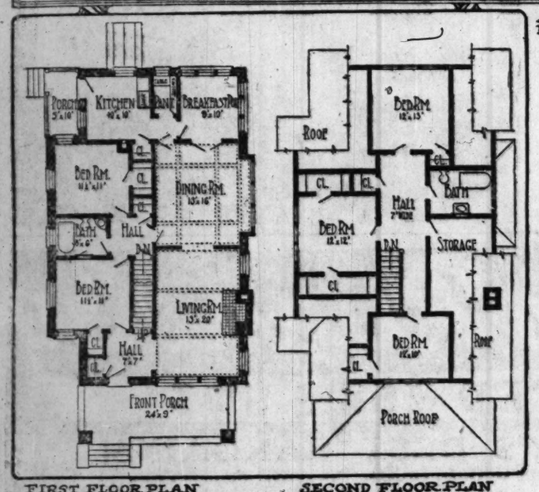
A LITTLE HOUSE FOR A LARGE FAMILY. COURTESY OF THE AMERICAN BUILDER.



FIRST FLOOR PLAN SECOND FLOOR PLAN

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, Sunday Tribune, Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope for a personal reply.

TYPICAL AMERICAN HOME.

WHILE those whose business it is to provide homes for the American families have been discussing, advocating, and building homes and apartments in which space is conserved, there still are many whose families are of the sort that might be called Rooseveltian. There is father and mother, and the children—several of them—who must be provided with rooms. And in selecting for families such as these designs for the new home, there must be plenty of bedrooms.

The brick house, shown in the accompanying illustration, is of the sort that typifies the American home. Built of brick, it has a solid appearance; in interior arrangement, separate sleeping rooms are provided for a good sized family. The exterior has a comfortable appearance. While the house is not large, its dimensions being only 31 by 49 feet 6 inches, the broad porch with its face brick walls and porch columns gives it the appearance of a home that will house a large family. And the floor plan that accompanies the exterior view shows that it will, for there are five bedrooms.

Brick houses, especially those whose outer walls are of face brick, always are attractive. Here, however, a dash of stucco has been added in the paneled gables. This house is set on a concrete foundation and has a full basement.

Five rooms and a breakfast porch are shown in the first floor plan. The entrance is into a hall, out of which run the stairs. To the right is a good sized living room, 13 by 20 feet, with a large fireplace at one end. The dining room, 13 by 16 feet, is directly back of the living room and connected with it by a double cased opening. It might be explained to the uninitiated that the dotted lines indicate a beamed ceiling. The breakfast porch opens off the dining room, and is separated from the kitchen by a short hallway, off which is a pantry. Two bedrooms, with a bathroom between them, are on the first floor, and can be reached either from the front hall or through the dining room.

On the second floor are three bedrooms, bathroom, and a large rectangular space under the eaves for storage. A long seven foot hall is in the center of the second floor, with the various rooms opening off it. All three of the upstairs bedrooms have more than the ordinary closet space, and are exceptionally well ventilated.

Home builders, in picking a design for the house they will put up, should carefully consider their present needs as to number of rooms, and their probable future needs. This house is of the sort that many thousands of American families need now, or, in all probability, will need. And, best of all, it provides for those needs without requiring a great investment.

Shall we just take a peep in at the front door? The little reception hall is so prettily furnished! A tiny built-in cloak closet hides itself behind the open front door. Against the wall to the right is a narrow console table with a lovely long oval polychromed mirror above it.

Instead of a pair of chairs, one of the new style little walnut bench stools is used. This convenient furniture novelty is a good little piece. It comes with a double oval finger hole in the top to lift it around by, and when not in use it slips under the table out of the way. Every one likes it, quaint as it is, hand made and cunningly put together with wooden pins. It takes the place of an extra chair anywhere in the house, and seems to hop about right familiarly. Do you want something to rest your feet on while lolling back in your arm chair? Do you want something to stand on to reach up for any reason? Do you want an extra place at the table, or something to put your book or tea cup on, near at hand? Why hellos! There's the little bench again!

The Missing Number.

When I applied to the editor of a city newspaper for a position on his repertorial staff and he asked for my name and telephone number, I knew the former, but I could not give him the latter. I had changed my residence the day before, but the scant knowledge did not relieve my feelings any in the presence of honorable city editor.

To Wash the Dishes.

I was just washing my dinner dishes when my neighbor called on me. The telephone rang and I went to answer it. As I was telephoning I noticed a magazine I had been looking for; so I picked it up and began to read, and it was half an hour before I stopped. Then I realized I had left my friend in the kitchen.

Surprise All Around.

I had heard my brother talk a great deal about his college roommate, consequently I was most anxious to meet him and make a favorable impression.

One day brother decided to surprise us with a visit, bringing his roommate with him. My most embarrassing moment occurred when they walked in at the back door unannounced and found me scrubbing the kitchen floor with brother's bathing suit on.

All Tangled Up.

I was enjoying my evening walk on a crowded but not well lighted street. When hurrying through the crowd my feet became entangled in the leash of a little white poodle. The poodle immediately informed the passing public of my predicament with loud and prolonged yelps. To make matters worse a bottle of milk which the owner of the dog was carrying was jerked from his arms by the pull on the leash, and amidst the crash of glass, the yelps of the dog, and the compliments of the angered man I made my escape in the crowd.

TROUSSEAU SUPERSTITIONS

by DORIS BLAKE

Married in white, you have chosen all right.
Married in green, ashamed to be seen.
Married in gray, you will go far away.
Married in red, you will wish yourself dead.
Married in blue, love ever true.
Married in yellow, you're ashamed of your fellow.
Married in black, you will wish yourself back.
Married in pink, of you he'll e'er think.

"A BRIDE to be should never mark her linen or anything for use in her married life with the initials of her fiancé, as it is said she will never have occasion to use the initialed articles if she does." So sayeth one who is supposed to be familiar with bridal superstitions.

Nor should a bride make her own wedding dress, if she would have the best of luck. And further, they say, it is bad luck for a young woman to let her future husband see her in anything of her wedding trousseau until the wedding day.

A bride should never have in her trousseau anything trimmed with ivy leaves.

There is an old superstition that if the bride's outfit was not paid for at the time of the wedding bad luck would affect one of the first little ones later.

There have always been strong superstitions against brides dressed in black, misfortunes being always prophesied. It is further told to be bad luck to dye a wedding dress black.

To marry in lavender is not good luck. A widow marrying in this color will mourn a second time.

A wedding dress of velvet signifies poverty.

Have not a single bit of black upon your person, if you marry in white. It is lucky for a bride to be married in white satin.

If a bride wears white throughout but for one single article, whatever it may be, that will indicate one sorrow in her life.

It is said to be unlucky to begin making the wedding gown before the wedding day is named.

Some one is envying the bride who stumbles over her wedding gown train.

If the bridegroom's tie is askew, his heart is in another place and with another maiden.

There is an old saying you will live as many years as there are buttons on your bridal dress.

If you hold a wedding dress in your hand for five minutes and make a wish it will come true.

A raveling on the bridegroom's suit shows that another woman clings to him with her heart.

It used to be believed that a married couple would never get rich until the wedding clothes were worn out.

It is bad luck to try on the bridal costume of a girl friend.

It is bad luck to ruin your wedding dress on your honeymoon. You are liable to be a widow.

A plain, smooth, fabric brings better luck to the bride than one with figures in it.

It is bad luck to wear red at a wedding.

To tear a bridal dress is the sign of trouble, whether it be little or great, depending on the size of the tear.

For the bridegroom to step on the bride's dress is an omen of inconsiderate treatment from his hand. Never marry in purple if you would have your love remain bright always. Some people call it a bad omen if a bride's dress on her way to the altar catches on anything so as to detain her.

Marry in buff, tan, or fawn color and you will cross the ocean once.

In some countries, where a mother is making a daughter's wedding dress, if a drop of blood got on the dress from a finger prick, she would not let the daughter wear it, fearing she would never live to wear it out.

A bride should wear some article at the altar worn by her own mother if she would insure a long married life for herself.

Another superstition which is familiar to most people is that the bride who wants good fortune to attend her should wear on her wedding day—"Something old, something new. Something borrowed, something blue."

A Warm Winter Coat.

"I wonder if there is among your readers some kind woman who would be willing to give me a warm winter coat. On account of sickness and doctor's bills I cannot afford to buy one, and I have to go out washing and need one badly. You certainly will have my most heartfelt thanks if you can get me a warm winter coat. I wear size 40. Mrs. A."

I have your name on file, and will remember you when a coat your size is offered.

Programs of Plays.

"I wonder if one of the 'friends indeed' has a program of any of the following plays that he does not care for: 'The Fortune Hunter,' 'Happyland' and 'The Candy Shop'? I should be glad to receive even a copy of the original program. H. W. O."

Cries for Music.

"I am a lame girl of 13 and have no father. My mother works every night. I wonder if any one would give me a phonograph? I sometimes cry to hear music. Mother loves it, too. We can't buy one, but I would take good care of one if I had it. G. F."

It's hard luck to cry for something and not get it. If there should be a phonograph in some one's attice I hope it comes out from that dusty retreat and plays to you.

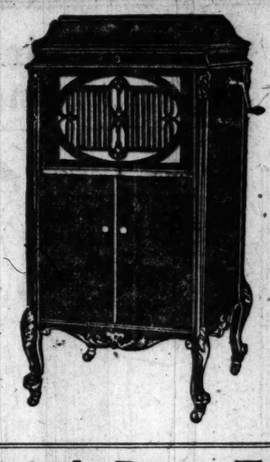
The Brunswick



Infinitely Better Tone

TO this you will agree! Hear all phonographs play—compare them with The Brunswick and the difference is immediately noticeable. The Brunswick Method of Reproduction gives new beauty to your record music. It plays all records truer, finer, sweeter. All harsh, metallic sounds are eliminated. Instead there is an unsurpassed purity of tone. The Ultona and the Tone Amplifier are the two features that make this superior reproduction possible. The former—a scientific creation—by a slight turn of the hand presents the right needle, weight and diaphragm for playing any make record. The latter, an oval shaped all-wood tone chamber, gives new resiliency to sound waves. Result: Infinitely better tone.

WHAT MOVIE STARS DO TO KEEP THEIR TEETH WHITE AND SPARKLING

As told by Ethel Clayton

"My first director advised me to take unusually good care of my teeth, and I have always followed this advice," says Ethel Clayton.

"Naturally, I wanted to know what dentifrice was used by those who were already successful in the profession, and so I began to ask questions. I soon found that Senreco Tooth Paste was the preferred dentifrice with most of them. Right away I tried it, too.

"No dentifrice I ever used is quite so pleasing as Senreco. My teeth not only look clean and white after using Senreco, but they feel that way."

Why Senreco is preferred

Senreco is a dentist's formula combining the cleansing agents recommended as ideal by United States Army dental surgeons.

Senreco has no "druggy" action on the teeth, but cleans them by gently dissolving and removing the food coating that causes decay. By an equally gentle polishing and brightening action, it brings out all the natural whiteness and lustre of the teeth. In doing this, Senreco does all that any dentifrice can do for the teeth.

Beneficial to the gums, too

But the beauty of your teeth depends upon the care of your gums as well as the teeth themselves. Senreco is wonderfully beneficial to the gums. With each tube is included a booklet that gives a Senreco treatment that helps to heal soft spongy, sore, bleeding and receding gums and similar troubles. Use this treatment and in a few days you will notice the gradual strengthening and toning up of your gums—they will begin to take on that healthy pink color so necessary to really beautiful teeth.

Senreco is pleasant to use. The very first time you try it, you will actually feel it cleaning your teeth as no other tooth paste ever did. When you touch your tongue to your teeth you will know they are really clean.

Take home a tube of Senreco today. Learn for yourself why so many people will have no other tooth paste. Large tube, 35c, at your druggist's or toilet goods counters.

Senreco, Cincinnati, Ohio

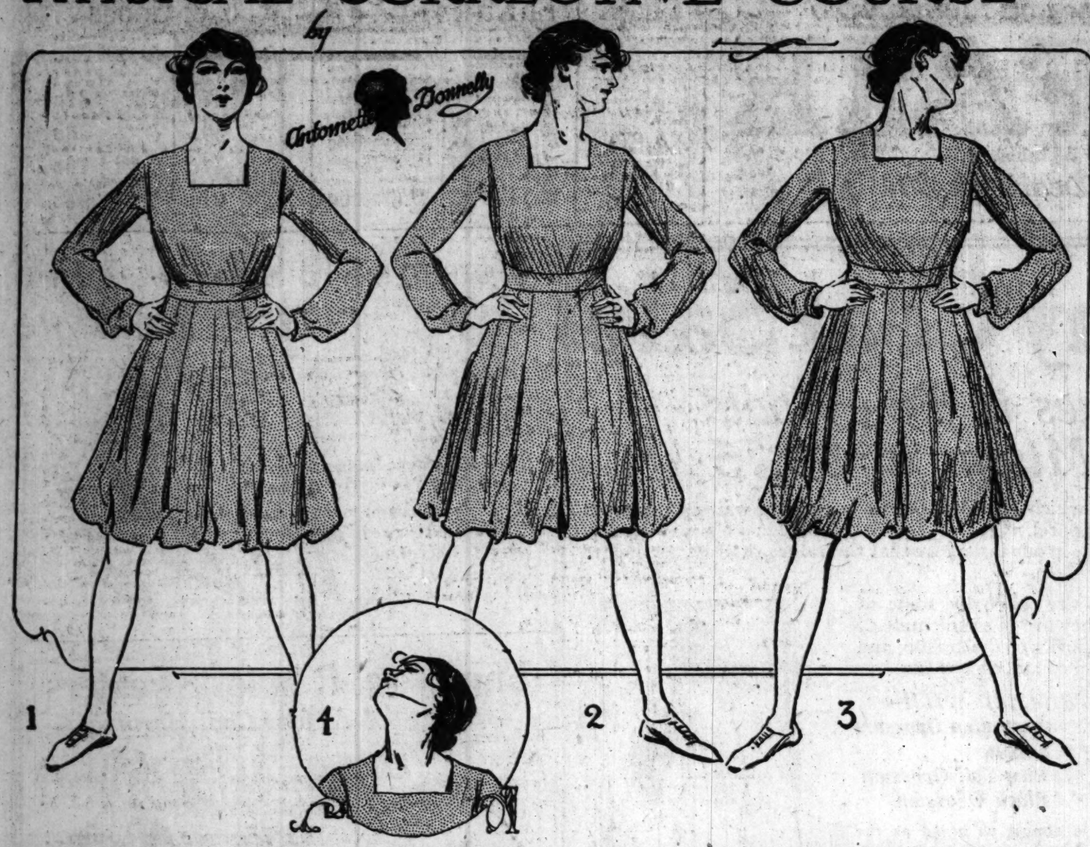
PHYSICAL CORRECTIVE COURSE

by Antoinette Donnelly



What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, "Chicago Tribune."

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

IF you are fat, here's your chance to reduce; if you are thin and crave more covering for your bones, again here is your chance. If you are at the dangerous age when the figure of youth threatens to take on middle age proportions, it is your big chance, too. Or, if you are still young and want to remain so for years to come, you, too, are welcome to this particular opportunity which I am presenting my readers with this issue.

Realizing the need from the constant request from readers for exercises for reducing the waist, the hips, the double chin, the fat between shoulder blades, and from readers of the extremely "opposite flesh sex," those asking for exercise aid in rounding out waist, hips, shoulders, neck, and so on, and for those who just want to stay fit, I put myself in the hands of one of the best gymnasium instructors in the country, from whose years of experience I have gathered for you the cream of physical corrective work, and beginning with today's issue will present you the opportunity of getting free a complete course.

None of the exercises will require mechanical apparatus. They are of a nature that every woman and girl may easily do in the home. In other words, you will have the chance in following this course as I present it to you of attending an expensive physical education school without the inconvenience of having to go out of the home to get it.

All one has to do to produce an argument for physical exercise and the corrective power of the right kind of exercise is to think back on the remarkable change it made in your soldier brother, or cousin, or male acquaintance when he received his army training.

Without more ado as to the whys of exercise, which every intelligent woman when she thinks intelligently understands, we will proceed with our first lesson.

Now, in this course we are going to begin with the head, neck, chin, and shoulders and work on down to feet corrective work.

The first thing naturally will be to get a good position, to know how to stand, for when you think it over you can readily see how much corrective work may be done with this knowledge alone. For instance, you can make your stomach look smaller when you stand erect, you can in a sense straighten out a rounding back, and likewise you can make a sagging chest appear to have more girth and the neck hollows look less hollow by a good standing position.

So, we will start with it: Head up, heels together, knees straight but without stiffness, body erect, abdomen flat, chest high, and shoulders square and easy [not raised or shoved back, remember]; the back flat, arms straight down at the sides, wrists and fingers straight in line with the arms, palms of hands in, fingers together with thumb close.

Holding this position at first will give you a "stretched out," strained feeling. Relax and do it over several times.

Then we will take this position, with a change of the hands brought on the hips and the feet to a stride [about two foot lengths apart], as in illustration No. 1. The stride position gives a balance. Then we are ready for the head twisting exercise, which is excellent for reducing double chin or preventing one and at the same time developing the scrawny neck if that is the need. Also this exercise brings into play besides the neck muscles the muscles at the back of the neck, and is recommended particularly for the woman who is developing an "old lady's hump" back there. It might be incidentally remarked that many young women have this fatty accumulation there, due to improper standing and sitting positions.

Now, get correct position of the body with head up, eyes straight ahead; then turn head sharply to the right, as in illustration 2, without moving the body, turn it with a quick smart jerk, then back with quick precision; do this three times to the right, then turn head to left three times. Turn the head to right and left far enough to feel a stretching in the neck muscles.

Then, as in illustration 3, in same standing position, first turn the head sidewise, as in illustration 2, then with another sharp movement from that position give the head a sideward back stretch. With this movement you can feel plainly the neck muscles in play. Repeat right and left three times at first, gradually increasing to five or ten.

As a matter of fact, an exercise to have any value must be done with "pep" and energy. Do these head exercises as if you meant them and they will show you what they mean to you.

Now, just one more exercise for today's lesson. Stand easily and let your head and neck muscles relax, begin rolling the head around as if it were a dead weight, rolling it forward on the chin around the shoulder, the back of the neck as far back as you can roll it, as in Illustration 4, around the other shoulder and back on chest again. Keep eyes closed to prevent dizziness. Do this just a couple of times at first. But feel a stretch in the neck muscles all around.

M. B.: SOAP, AND ESPECIALLY the brand you blame, which is about as pure a soap as is on the market, would not be responsible for the brown spots. They result undoubtedly from some internal trouble, and it were better to consult a physician before there is any further outbreak.

HELEN: ANY IRREGULARITIES of food, drink, or sleep may cause a feverish breath, or it may be caused from catarrah, decayed teeth, or a clogging of the bowels. If it is caused from catarrah or decayed teeth, advice of a physician should be sought. Otherwise a good cathartic would probably remedy the condition. You can correct constipation by eating bran, vegetables, and fruit and drinking an abundance of water. Exercise in the open air and eat less.

* *

DORA: A CAMEL'S HAIR BRUSH is the most satisfactory for scrubbing the face. Coarser brushes are not recommended, as they clean the face no better and they are irritating to the skin.

* *

PEGGY: IF IT IS OF GOOD QUALITY, face powder will not do you any harm. On the contrary, if your skin is greasy it will do your appearance much good. But you want to know what ingredients are in the formula of the powder you use and also you must be careful to remove powder at night with a good cleansing cream. Here's a powder formula I recommend your having made up: Ten parts rice starch, five parts kaolin, five parts talc, two and one-half parts spirit of zinc, one and one-quarter parts oxide of zinc, three-quarter parts magnesia-carbon, one-half part chalk. Your favorite perfume may be added.

C. I. B.: USE EQUAL PARTS OF glycerin and camphor and rub well into your hands every night. Be consistent about this, now. You simply cannot get results unless you are. But I'll guarantee your hands will improve tenfold if you give this an honest trial for two months, let us say. Will you let me know the result? I am interested to see if you have persistency enough to be rewarded with a pair of nice looking hands. Cold cream rubbed in every night, if its quality is good, also is an effective remedy for red and coarsened hands. The manicuring instructions are too long to print here. Please send me a stamped, addressed envelope, won't you?

Madame may do her household tasks without fear of ruined hands. Keep them soft and lovely with Espey's Fragrant Cream—a lotion of excellence since 1877. At Drug and Department Stores. 25¢ and 50¢.

Graham Beauty Secret

The Wonderful Astringent Skin Treatment That Gives Immediate Results

You will find this absolutely new treatment one that will give you immediate and gratifying results. The soothing, healing astringent penetrates the pores and draws out blackheads and impurities. It cleanses and reduces enlarged pores, smoothes away the wrinkles, tightens the skin tissues and lifts the sagging muscles—and all this without stretching or irritating your skin in the least—no matter how delicate it may be.

It makes your skin smoother and of finer texture—stimulates the circulation of the blood in the underlying tissues, and brings out a naturally beautiful complexion that glows with health.

What Beauty Secret Is—

After months of experimenting in our laboratories, this remarkable new treatment has been perfected, which we have named "Graham Beauty Secret."

It is neither a cold cream nor a massage cream, but a smooth, healing gray paste that is cleansing, antiseptic and astringent. It contains no mercury, metallic or other injurious substances, and is used in many of the most exclusive Beauty Parlors.

Skin Pure and Special Vanishing Cream should be used in connection with Graham Beauty Secret. These three preparations comprise the Graham Astringent Skin Treatment.

Free Booklet "Graham Astringent Skin Treatment" mailed on request.

What Beauty Secret Does—

It lifts out lines and wrinkles which are the result of stretching the skin. When the underlying skin tissues are poorly nourished and become shrunken, the outer skin creases—forms lines and wrinkles, which, when neglected become deeper and deeper. Graham Beauty Secret penetrates the pores and nourishes the underlying tissues—tightens the outer skin, and restores the smooth, rounded contour of youth. It lifts any sagging muscles back into place, and by its astringent qualities quickly makes the skin smooth and youthful.

It removes blackheads. These blemishes are caused by the pores becoming clogged and enlarged. The impurities that lodge in the pores must be softened and drawn out through the pores. Graham Beauty Secret penetrates—dissolves and draws them out, cleansing the pores thoroughly from all impurities, contracting the enlarged pores and restoring the fine texture of the skin.

It bleaches and beautifies the skin. The soothing, healing gray paste bleaches out any discolorations or sallowness without irritation and tends to remove blemishes. By stimulating the circulation of the blood in the underlying skin tissues and removing the rough outer skin scales it gives a smooth, velvety skin that does not require artifical coloring, but has the natural glow of health.

How to Get Beauty Secret

You can obtain Graham Beauty Secret, and the special creams—Skin Pure and Vanishing Cream—that should be used with the Astringent Treatment—at the better class of shops and toilet counters. Graham Beauty Secret costs only $1.50 and it contains a sufficient supply of the astringent for about six weeks' treatment. The best results are obtained when Skin Pure and Vanishing Cream are used after the astringent paste has been applied.

This treatment is delightfully refreshing—the paste and the creams are pure, free from anything that can injure your skin.

Thanksgiving Sentiment Is Best Expressed in Your Home

Where, of all places, can the sentiment of Thanksgiving be better expressed than in your home?

Home has been the scene of your greatest happiness—all your fondest associations center about it—never to be forgotten—rather—to be more cherished as from year to year you realize more clearly that your Home reflects your individuality—making it in essence truly a part of yourself.

It is reasonable, then, to think that the Thanksgiving sentiment can be expressed best in your Home.

If We Couldn't Tell A Lie

—LLANUZA—

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

A FAIR EXCHANGE.

BOB and I lived next door to each other, and all our lives had loved and quarreled the way children will. Since we grew up, Bob firmly believe that his love was not the "brotherly" sort, as I tried to convince him it was.

When war was declared, Bob went overseas after obtaining his commission in the first school. Before he left we had a long, serious discussion, and I tried my best to make him see that it would be more sensible for us to wait until he returned before we decided things definitely, hoping that he would himself see things in a different light by that time, for I could not hurt big old Bob.

He wrote frequently, and I did my utmost to keep him gay and cheerful. The first few months he attended a French artillery school, and although he was anxious to get to the front, he enjoyed this work immensely. Col. Dupree, who was in command, seemed to think a great deal of Bob, and I know that Bob idolized him.

The colonel lived a few miles out from town, and he frequently took some of the officers from the school home with him for the week end, or just for dinner. Bob seemed to be a privileged character, for seldom was he left out of the party. I have detailed accounts of all of those visits; first they were general, but after a couple of months, Mlle. Jeanne-Marie came home for a rest from her nursing. She was the colonel's only and much adored daughter. He had one son, an officer in the French army.

As time went on, I could tell that poor old Bob was quite beside himself. He was desperately in love with Mlle. Jeanne-Marie, and, I thought, much afraid to tell me. I immediately wrote him and told him what I could plainly see. The return letter was a confession, and soon after that another came, which told me of the engagement.

Last December Bob and his wife arrived in this country, and I found that Jeanne-Marie was every bit as adorable as Bob had painted her. Her brother whom she had not seen for two years, had been one of the mission of allied instructors here, and had not yet returned to France. He came to visit her in January—that was when I met him, and—ch he returned to France to attend to his affairs, he is coming back to get me, and we are never, never going to be separated. And now I love Bob and Jeanne-Marie more than ever, because they are the brother and sister of my gay and handsome Paul. F. C.

Bright Sayings of Children

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "The Tribune," Chicago.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Grandma had acquired a set of false teeth. Accustomed to seeing her toothless, little Cora was much surprised one day at the sudden transformation. "Why, grandma," she eagerly demanded, "when did you cut your third teeth?" F. J.

Ethel lived with her mother in the country. Her two sisters went to visit their aunt in town, to stay a week. The first day she amused herself with her dolls and other playthings, but the next day she could stand it no longer, so with a tear in her eye she said: "Say, mamma, mustn't it be a terrible thing to have an only child?" R. M.

Fred thought it a treat to go to prayer meeting with grandmother, and often went proudly with her, but after he had attended his first circus he came rushing over to see grandmother. "O, grandmother," he said, "if you'd once go to a circus, you'd never go to a prayer meeting again." X.

Richard came into the room where mother and Aunt Lillian were sitting, and it was rather quiet, he sat in the rocker, and, fixing himself comfortably, he said: "Let us conversation, mother." E.

Paul, with his mother, was visiting an aunt. When some candy was passed his cousin remarked to him, "Ladies first, you know!" He went back disappointed, then brightened, and said, "But can't you pass it to the mens sometimes?" A. P. S.

His father has a pronounced partiality for Bill, and the latter is diplomat enough to work this feeling of his father's whenever an opportunity offers. Quite recently young William injured his hand severely, and when his father returned home he inquired: "Well, Bill, how's the hand?" Seeing his father was in a mellow mood, William answered: "I think some ice cream would help it." J. C. B.

MAKING CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

EVERY year at about this time the business girl is in need of a word of warning against overtaxing her strength and energy in preparing gifts for her friends and relatives for Christmas. This year especially the warning is needed, as the enormous increase in the cost of almost all commodities and the scarcity of merchandise will be a temptation to many girls to indulge in fancy work and make by hand the gifts they intend to give for Christmas.

Sewing, embroidering, and crocheting in spare moments throughout the day are not harmful if the work does not become tiresome. The danger is in trying to accomplish more than one can do in the few weeks before the holidays, and as a consequence working at top speed all the time and staying up late night after night in an effort to finish things on time.

I am reminded of a letter that came from a business girl about four years ago. It was written a few weeks before Christmas and contained the writer's experience of the previous year. It was sent in the hope that other girls might be saved the misery and expense that befell her.

Toward the latter part of October she had made up her Christmas list and as it was a long one and she hadn't been able to save a great deal of money during the year she decided that her gifts would be cheaper and more highly appreciated if she made them herself.

She was an accomplished needlewoman and quite clever at painting on china, but she planned so much work for herself that every spare moment of the day and many hours of the night were spent in knitting, sewing, painting, etc. She knitted in the cars going to and from the office, sewed all during her lunch period, and often went without luncheon to do it, and night after night for four or five weeks before Christmas she sat at her painting until she was hardly able to see from sleepiness and the close application to her work.

She finished everything that she started out to do, but she nearly killed herself in doing it. Her gifts when finished were beautiful, but they gave her little satisfaction, for by Christmas day she realized that she had paid too great a price. She had given her precious health for them.

Christmas found her in bed. A day or two later, when she was still too weak to get up, she called a doctor. She was on the verge of a nervous breakdown. She spent six weeks in bed and was unable to work for three months. It took her nearly a year to save enough money to pay her doctor and hospital bills.

No business girl can afford to risk losing her health by overworking during the exciting days preceding the holidays. If pretty, ready made gifts are too expensive or too scarce to buy this year, the sensible girl will cut down her list or give no presents at all.

The wise woman will do her shopping early to save her own strength. The considerate woman will also make an effort to get her shopping done early in order to do her part toward lightening the burden for the worn out store clerks during the last few mad days before Christmas.

ETIQUETTE

By Elizabeth Van Rensselaer

Questions on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped addressed envelope.

B. B. R.—When three sisters who live in different parts of the country have recently lost their father it is the privilege and duty of their friends and neighbors to express their sympathy to each one individually. A personal little note is all that is absolutely necessary, but there are other acts of thoughtfulness which mean much to those afflicted. Flowers sent to the house where the funeral services are to be held, a call, if possible, upon the bereaved family, and one's presence at the funeral when others than the immediate family are expected are all things which show friendly affection and sympathy at a time when they are sorely needed. It is a great mistake to suppose that such acts will be considered as intruding; they are helpful and comforting to those in sorrow.

M. M. G.: When a new acquaintance says that he [or she] is glad to have met you you need only thank him and say that you hope to see him again some time. At the end of a dance, if a man thanks you, you may say that you, too, have enjoyed it.

E. C. AND K. L. R.: If you will write to me again, inclosing stamped, addressed envelopes, I shall be happy to send you a list of reliable books on etiquette.

* * *

A. E. K.: Usually the man follows the usher at the theater or the waiter in a restaurant to the assigned row or table and then stands aside to let the feminine companion be seated first.

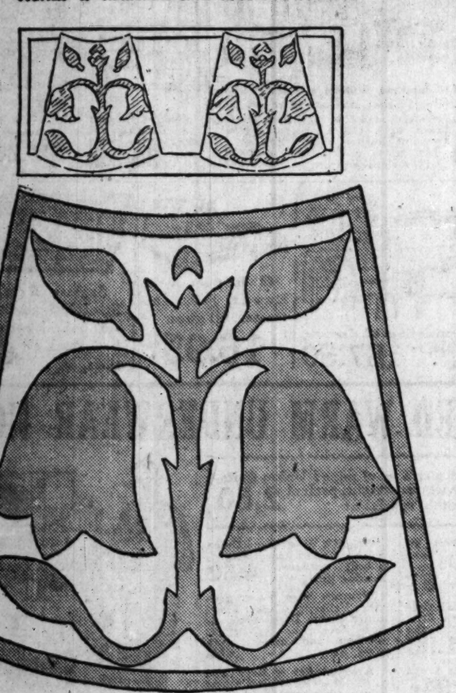
METHOD OF ARRANGING UNITS IN COLLAR AND CUFF



UNIT OF DESIGN FOR COLLAR AND CUFF SET.

By Maud Josaphare.

WHY not decorate the serge dress with a collar and cuff set in batik? Neckwear that is unusual is so expensive, so here's a way to cut the high cost of it. You can use velvet, broadcloth, or silk crêpe de chine for the collar and cuff set. They are enumerated in the order of their difficulty in dyeing; velvet is hardest, crêpe de chine is easiest.

First decide on a color scheme, using two colors, one light and one dark. If, for instance, you choose a burnt orange and black, buy the material the lighter color. For instance, buy enough orange velvet (the directions for velvet will do for the other materials) to make a cowl collar and cuffs, such as are given in any collar and cuff pattern you may select.

Do not cut out the collar and cuffs, but draw them on the velvet, using a soft lead pencil. Then trace on the collar and cuffs in the manner shown in the small illustrations—four units of design on the collar and two on each cuff. The tracing is done by rubbing charcoal or soft lead pencil over the back of the design. Then place the design on the material and trace with a hard lead pencil, using a medium blunt point. It is well to pin or thumb tack the design to the material, so that the design will be placed exactly in the place intended for it.

When all the designs have been traced heat some paraffin in a saucepan until a blue haze rises from the surface. With an artist's bristle brush No. 3 fill in all those parts of the design that are shaded with fine lines. Also draw a single heavy line around the collar and cuffs, as indicated in the smaller illustration of the complete set.

Mix up a package of black dye according to directions, except in the matter of quantity of water used. When completed there should be about two quarts of dye from one package of it. Allow the dye to cool to a temperature not over 60 degrees, as a warm dye will cause the paraffin to melt and the design will be lost.

In painting the paraffin on the velvet be sure that your brush goes the same way as the nap of the velvet. Never brush against the nap.

Now immerse the velvet in the black dye. To become almost black will require some time. Fifteen or twenty minutes should make it a lovely tobacco brown. Wash carefully in cold water, in order to remove any superfluous dye. Dry, and then immerse in a bowl of gasoline, in order to remove the paraffin from the design. A crackled or mottled appearance in this sort of dyeing is considered quite attractive, and in no way detracts from the beauty of dyeing.

If a blue color is desired in the collar and cuffs, a narrow piping of dull blue silk may be placed around them and an outline of chain stitch around each design; using the same blue in a silk thread will make them really lovely and worth while artistically as well as being up to date.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Sunday Tribune. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

You'll Soon Lose Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 18 years of age and have been keeping company with a young man for several months. He had been going with a girl for about a year when he began to keep company with me. Just lately he quit his other girl and is now keeping steady company with me. I care for him and am quite positive he cares for me. Coming to the point, is it proper for me to return his kisses and to continue keeping his company?

"PEGGY."

The chances are you will not have the problem to decide, Peggy, if you keep on returning his kisses. He will decide for you by helping himself generously and flitting on to new kissing pastures. That is the way of the male kissing bee.

Of the Independent Kind.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a constant reader of your column and I am now coming to you for advice. I am of the independent kind and I am very particular whom I associate with. My girl chums and I are always quarreling about dancing. I think it is vulgar for a girl to go to public dances, but my chums always say, "Daisy, if you don't drop your foolish ideas what will become of you?" I don't want them to make fun of me and still I don't like to go.

Shall I go to keep their company or stay true to my own ideas?

Do you think I will ever meet a girl like myself?

Thanking you in advance and hoping to see my answer, I remain,

"DAISY."

I think it is vulgar, too, for girls to go to public dances unaccompanied by a man, if that's what you mean. You just stick to your own ideals and some day some nice man will appreciate you the more for having kept yourself nice and uncommon.

From Speaking to Calling Stage.

"Dear Miss Blake: I come to you with a unique and difficult problem, but before I go into it I might give you my opinion of myself that you may have a better understanding of the situation. I am not especially handsome, though I have no deformities; am slightly conceited, I fear, although I try to hide it; am not bashful, have good health and physique, and am attending the university.

"My problem, simply stated, is this: How does one carry an acquaintance gracefully from the speaking stage to the calling stage? In my classes I meet several girls whom I wish to know better. I can 'pass the chatter' when I meet them in class or accidentally, but I fail to forestall the fellow or girl waiting in the hall after class. One can hardly presume on a classroom acquaintance to ask a girl if one may call or take her to a dance. I am not bashful, as I have stated before. I simply am ignorant of the ordinary devices for quickening friendship.

"The only trait I have that might possibly have a bearing on the case is my regard for girls in general. I have a kind of—reverence, if you will—that does not admit of petty familiarities. I do not take a girl's arm unless it is necessary. I have never indulged in kissing or hand holding. Girls, to me, are a thing to keep hands off, literally speaking. Perhaps they like the cheap stuff and that is the reason for my backwardness. There are one or two I have known who do not. But if the general run of girls desires it, I do not desire to lower any ideals.

"Now, then, what is your opinion on the subject? Don't tell me that I should 'live and learn.' That method is good, but too slow. EDWARD."

You sound like a thoroughly nice sort of young man and one whom I feel sure would be welcomed in homes by the parents of nice girls as a highly desirable friend. One can presume on a classroom acquaintance to ask a girl if he may call or take her to a dance, and I hope it will be your good luck to extend the invitation or make a request to call of some girl with ideals akin to your own.

Going Out with Boys.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 18 years old. My mother does not seem to understand that I am old enough to go out with boys. She says to walk home from school with them is enough. What shall I do about it? F. L."

Don't quarrel with mother over the matter, because some mothers, not unlike some daughters, have a way of becoming very stubborn when opposed. On the other hand, they are quite tractable when approached on the subject in a tactful way. Ask her if you may have some of the nice boys over occasionally to the house and have her in to meet them and give her a chance to see that she can trust her daughter with them. You must remember, dear, that to mother you are still a little girl.

The Day Was Wednesday.

"Dear Miss Blake: I wish to ask a favor of you. Upon what day in the week did Dec. 23, 1903, come? Q.

Dec. 23, 1903, fell on Wednesday.

My Experience with a Burglar

Have you ever been face to face with a burglar in your home? Or been roughly accosted by a holdup man? Or had any experience with these gentlemen of uncertain occupation? Or were you ever scared to death by a burglar to find it a false alarm or a funny climax? Let us hear about your burglary experience. Write on one side of the paper. The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "My Burglary Experience." Address Burglary Contest, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

How Aunty Caught the Thief.

A thief snatched my aunt's purse and ran. My aunt followed him, screaming. A crowd of people joined in the pursuit and as my aunt was stout she was soon left behind. But she struggled on, panting for breath, and when the thief, who had hidden in a basement stairway, crawled to the surface, my aunt pounced on his back, bringing him to the sidewalk, where he lay face downward, kicking and squirming. But he could not shake my aunt off. She pulled his hair and scratched his face while shouting for help, until a policeman took him in tow. A. V.

Looking for Apartments.

Walking up and down a street, looking for apartments, I was accosted by a well dressed young man, who claimed he was the agent for a certain building. I let him show me through the vacant apartment on the second floor, and I must say he should have been a real estate dealer. He knew the price of the apartment, promised new decorations and a new gas stove, called my attention to the large back porch and a real fireplace, and then, as I said I must be going, he suddenly knocked me down, grabbed my purse, and fled. I followed pell mell, but never saw him nor purse again. M. B.

Hardly a Thief.

When we were first married my husband left for his work long before day and it was my custom to go back to bed and sleep till 8 o'clock.

One morning I was awakened from a doze by hearing the dishes rattle. Thinking the kitten had got on the table I slipped out to give him a surprise, only to be confronted by a big, burly tramp, who was busily engaged devouring the remains of our break fast. I was too frightened to move, for I was alone in the house, and there were no near neighbors and at that hour there was no one astir.

The man, seeing my fright, said: "Just go back to bed, lady; I won't molest you or your valuables. I am so hungry I had to do this." I told him to help himself and fled to the bedroom, where I locked myself in, but not to sleep, I can tell you.

When people began moving around in the neighborhood I crept out and found that all that was missing were six eggs, half of a loaf of bread, half a pie, a few slices of bacon, and all the coffee in the pot. To offset this I found that the man had cleaned all the walks and swept off the back porch.

Since then I always take those stories of the depredations of tramps with a grain of salt. M. E. C.

Cows in the Corn.

My chronic fear of burglars became morbidly intensified during an epidemic of robberies when we realized that for holdups there certainly was "no place like home." Imagine my joy, then, upon going to an isolated farmhouse in the country for my vacation, to be assured by the farmer and his family that they never considered it necessary even to lock their doors.

My room was on the ground floor. Every one had retired for the night. The chirping of the crickets and the comfortable security of sleeping in an absolute burglar proof place lulled me into gentle slumber.

All too soon I was lulled out of that same gentle slumber. For, interrupting the blissful silence of the night, I heard footsteps on the yielding earth—a crumpling of leaves and an unmistakable tussling with tree branches. Panic stricken, I listened. There could be no doubt of a burglar when an adjacent branch of an apple tree was suddenly disturbed and boldly struck my window.

At that juncture I uttered a yell which they say has never been equaled before or since in that part of the country. It promptly brought the family to the scene. With loaded guns the farmer and his sons pursued the villain. My hysterics had partially subsided ere their return, but my emotions were conflicting by their assurance that it was a cow that had broken loose to pay a long deferred visit to the corn field. F. J.

After cooking, remove from fire, stir in slowly one or two eggs well beaten, add butter. Serve with boiled or baked potatoes.

Gorton's Codfish Balls

Let codfish stand in cold water for several hours, to freshen. Then put on stove in pan of fresh water, and boil about 15 minutes. Remove, chop fish and boiled potatoes together, using one part fish or two parts potatoes. Add one egg well beaten, and form into balls. Flour lightly, and fry in hot pork fat to a nice brown.

THE LAST WORD IN PARIS FASHIONS

By Mary Brush Williams.

PLAITED SKIRT IN AGAIN.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Have you seen those new plaited skirts? One is shown in the accompanying illustration. This particular costume happens to be a sports suit, the coat of which alone invites separate attention. It is of gray suede leather and fits like a glove.

Plaited skirt with gray suede coat.

One of my practical type of mind on sight begins to calculate the cost of cleaning, for at the cleaner's is where it will pass a good part of its life. But while it lasts it is beautiful, soft, and supple, and displays the figure freely, if flatteringly. It takes care of and softens one's topographical weaknesses. The belt is of patent leather and the skirt consists of gabardine, finely plaited. I think we shall be seeing a good many of these before a great while.

One of these weeks, shortly I will show you a sketch of such a skirt by Mme. Paquin, and I speak with thus much confidence because this dress belongs to me. Otherwise this and other creations of the great artiste, I suppose, would go down to oblivion, for Mme. Paquin does not allow one, no matter how estimable otherwise, to enter her shop if he be a sketch artist. As for the construction of one of these creations, it is about as technical as the structural work of the Panama canal.

I am, as a matter of fact, in possession of another of these skirts, acquired less conventionally. It belonged to a friend who started out with the general proposition that no American woman could wear such a one because she is so large. One certainly gets it pretty well beaten into one's head over here that the Americans are too large for all practical purposes of wearing chic French costumes. At any rate, I put on the dress, and it fitted me so much better than it did her that she gave it to me. [She is not French, but Swiss.]

Brown silk jersey afternoon dress.

The theory was that fine plaits would fly out in all directions over the street with the slightest puff of wind and would make one look about the proportions of the Louvre. The real facts are that the plaited skirt still maintains the present fashionable, pinched-in look around the bottom, and this is acquired by an elaborate system of subterranean rubbering. It goes like an accordion, giving when you walk. When the skirts are made properly, you will find that Americans can wear them as well as the next fellow, if not better.

This contains the substance of my perpetual grievance and cry. If the French can make things better than any one else, the Americans are the ones who wear them best, and we ought to get the credit for it. I think that we shall.

This suit is disguised to make its wearer look thin.

The lady in the second sketch might be the composite image of the feminine part of any tea gathering at the Ritz, after the feminine contingent has taken off its million dollars' worth of furs. I refer to the lady holding the hand mirror up—not to nature, but to art.

The particular dress of this illustration happens to be of brown silk jersey. Yes, there are numbers of them worn. If the material has become just a little less the rage, that is because it is so high priced no one can buy or import it. This is on the word of one of the heads of a big house. One of the prettiest autumn dresses I have seen belongs to a friend of mine, and it is made of brown silk jersey with a wide belt embroidered lavishly in all the woodland colors of autumn. It is a work of art. Lanvin made it.

But to get back to the brown jersey robe of the sketch. It is embroidered down the front in tiny, shell colored, flaky beads. They are disk shaped, like the records of a phonograph, and thin almost as air. The designer has made them into little flowers. They remind one of the coral flowers in antique brooches. The sleeves, the panels down the front, and a long jumping rope of a loop effect down the back of the skirt are made in one piece, draped to fall in a sloping shoulder effect over the arms. There are no close fitting undersleeves whatever. The arms are bare. The ceinture is a part of the frontispiece and it, too, is embroidered in the little flowered leaves. The dress is lovelier than any sketch or description can make it. Worth is its author.

The tailleur they call the "pointed suit" and it is distinguished for making one look thin. The straight line down the front does something toward this effect and the points on the tails at the bottom reinforce it. The costume is of gray broadcloth. The fur is petit-gris, or squirrel, and the bands at the base of the cuffs are of gold brocade. No fur looks prettier than petit-gris when the snow flies. This collar and coat with its wings slanting across it are lovely in the snow—and the fog, where in this country it has its greatest opportunity for displaying itself. Gray, pale in tint, is one of the most fashionable shades for winter.

There is a lovely frock at Beer's for a young woman—or perhaps one a little less young—called "Chantilly." It has a foundation of dark blue, and, by the way, dark blue and even brown are being countenanced for evening. Can't you remember when by all the dictates of style you weren't supposed to put on gray until you were old, and you weren't to wear brown or navy to any affair after 6 p. m.? Or are these just the categorical and rural imperatives prevailing on the banks of the Wabash, where I received so many definite and permanent impressions? At any rate, this gown is covered with an overdress of chantilly cut into an apron effect in front and ruffled in an edging of the dark blue. The short chantilly sleeves are edged with dark blue, as is the V shaped, loose corsage. The belt is of dark blue, too.

For every one of these foot troubles there is a Dr. Scholl Foot Comfort Appliance that will relieve it quickly and give it permanent correction!

Sure, quick relief for every foot trouble

Study the Chart above. Which of these Foot Troubles is yours? READ HERE how to get immediate relief and PERMANENT correction

Tender joints, calloused spots, corns, bunions, pains in the instep, weak arches, muscles in your feet and legs that get sore when you walk, shoes that wear crooked—all of these are symptoms of some wrong condition in your feet. Don't neglect them! Attention right now may save you years of suffering later on.

And it is so easy for you to correct this condition; to have comfortable feet!

Dr. Wm. M. Scholl of Chicago, the internationally-known authority on foot troubles, after years of study and experience, has perfected a simple though scientific corrective appliance for every one of the troubles shown above.

Thousands of shoe dealers and department stores all over the country have put into their stores graduate Practipedists—Foot Experts, trained in Dr. Scholl's own methods—to assist customers in the choice of exactly the right one of these appliances.

During the week of November 17-22, these stores will hold special demonstrations of the Dr. Scholl Appliances, for the benefit of those who have any form of foot or shoe trouble.

Go to your dealer or any one of the stores listed below and talk to the Practipedist. He understands your foot trouble and will be glad to demonstrate the scientific way to relieve and correct it. There will be no charge for his demonstrations. His services are free for the asking.

Step in where you see the Demonstration Week window trim. Do not suffer another day with sore, aching, uncomfortable feet. TODAY—sure, quick relief may be yours.

The Scholl Mfg. Co., 213 W. Schiller Street, Chicago, 339 Broadway, New York City, N. Y., and 112 Adelaide Street E., Toronto, Canada

1 Dr. Scholl's Bunion Spring, to be worn at night, is very effective in relieving cases of bunions. It also supports the arch

2 The crooked or overlapped great toe can be restored to its normal line by Dr. Scholl's Toe-Flex. Made of soft rubber, it helps to reduce the bunion gently and gradually

3 A refreshing treatment for tired, aching feet—a granulated foot-soap, a healing foot-balm, and a deodorizing foot powder. Dr. Scholl's Home Treatment for the Feet

4 A flattened metatarsal arch (across the ball of the foot) which causes cramped toes, pains in the ball, and tender callouses, can be relieved by Dr. Scholl's Anterior Metatarsal Arch Support

5 For extreme cases of weak foot, involving weak, turning ankles and pains under the instep, Dr. Scholl's Tri-Spring Arch Support is especially designed. Particularly designed for heavier weight persons

6 By absorption, Dr. Scholl's Absorbo Pads remove the hardened skin of corns and callouses. They protect them from all rubbing

7 To prevent crooked and run-over heels, wear Dr. Scholl's Walk-Strate Heel Pads. They keep your weight properly balanced

8 Dr. Scholl's Foot-Eazer eases the feet, body and nerves. It relieves strained muscles, cramped and overlapped toes and corns by giving the arch proper support and keeping the foot from sliding down into the shoe

9 Dr. Scholl's Zin-Ox Corn and Bunion Pads are antiseptic and healing to painful corns, callouses and bunions. Double thickness at the rim removes pressure at once

10 Dr. Scholl's Heel Cushions absorb the shocks of walking and protect your heels from becoming sore and tender. Made of finest russet leather and special sponge rubber

11 For bunions and tender joints, Dr. Scholl's Bunion Reducers are a protection and a comfortable corrective measure. They are made of antiseptic rubber. They hide the deformity and reduce the bunion

12 The most painful corns are quickly relieved by Dr. Scholl's Fixo Corn Plasters. A strip of adhesive tape holds them in place—the medicated plaster corrects the corn

Dr. Scholl's Demonstration Week

Diamonds as Christmas gifts become vivid reminders, in perpetuity, of the high regard of the donor for the recipient. This store's collections are noteworthy for the purity and brilliance of the stones—the novelty and artistry of the settings. There is an excellent selection at the more moderate prices. First floor, Wabash.

For madam and miss: late-vogue frocks —two rare groups at 38.50 and 69.50

The nearer approach of Christmas stresses the need for early shopping. Better service and a wider choice, of course, are important considerations. But the really vital reason is the probable shortage of Christmas merchandise

—coupled with a demand that is likely to increase as means to satisfy it decrease. This very page offers pre-holiday shopping opportunities unlikely of recurrence.

Small children's holiday attire

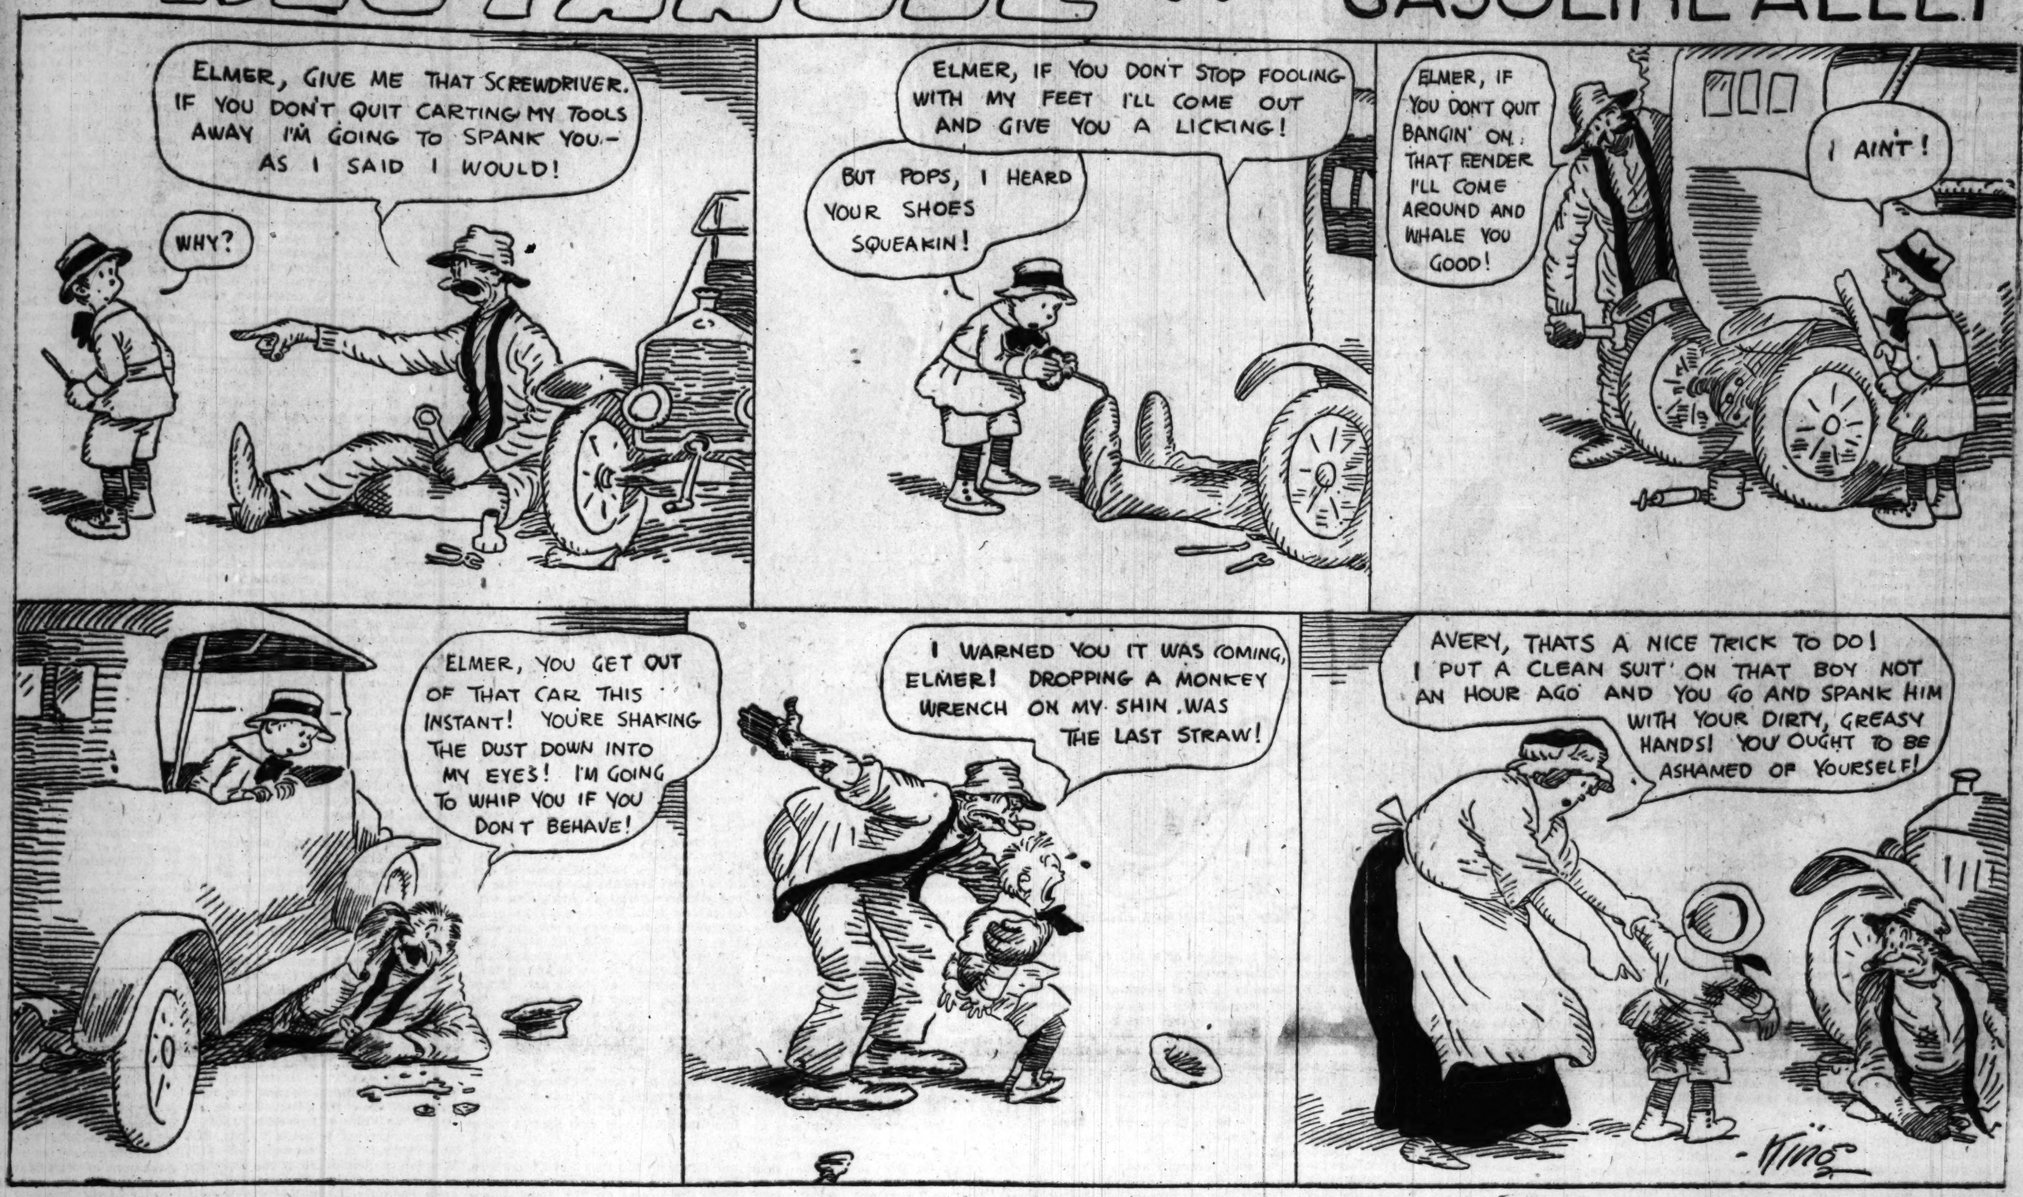
The RECTANGLE ... GASOLINE ALLEY



NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Opening of Opera Season Is the Big Event This Week

By Mme. X.

LAST Friday's great charity ball at the First Regiment armory rolled back one of the social season's big folding doors. Next Tuesday's opening of the grand opera season rolls back the other, and behold the world that amuses itself—or trys to—once more spinning its top.

To open the opera season on a Tuesday shows that Chicago sets, not follows, precedent and fashion, Monday from time immemorial having been the night chosen for this more or less stately ceremony.

Do you remember last year's gala opening, when the assembling of all the triumphant allied nations was so well staged by Maestro Campanini? Never did the late departed Muratore chant the "Marseillaise" with more splendor or passion, while that charming diva, Mme. Galli-Curci, sang "The Star-Spangled Banner" just about as you or I would, stumbling over the ill mated words and music just as we always stumble.

The great amphitheater, with its double horseshoe of boxes, was ablaze with the banners of all nations (draped most inartistically, said the knowing) and was crowded with people from all walks of life, from the Italian street sweeper in the back row of the top gallery to the society leaders in the front row of the boxes.

We didn't know much then; we all thought peace was at hand, and rejoiced accordingly.

This year Campanini breaks still another precedent by sidestepping such old standbys as "Aïde" and "Don Giovanni" and opening the season with a brand new composition, Montemezzi's "La Nave."

Among the First Nighters.

Among the Tuesday nighters at the opera are the Arthur Meekers, Charles Edward Browns, Charles and Harold Swifts, William N. Pelouzes, Harold McCormick, Harry Pratt-Judsons, Keene Addingtons, Edward Cudahys, William V. Kelleys, Frederick H. Rawsons, E. D. Hulberts, H. M. Merricks, Ferdinand Pecks, Herbert E. Schwarzes, George McLaughlins, Thornhill Broomes, Walter H. Wilson, Henry M. Byllesbys, James Ward Thornes, William D. McIlvaines, William Wrigleys, Henry A. Blair, Mrs. George M. Pullman, Mrs. John Jay Borland, Mrs. Robert A. Waller, Mrs. Malcolm Caruthers, Mrs. W. W. Kimball, Mrs. R. R. Cable, and his honor the Mayor and Mrs. William Hale Thompson—and doubtless all will be there day after tomorrow to inaugurate the season under the new auspices; for the Friends of Opera claim to have injected fresh life into what should be one of Chicago's most popular institutions.

Certainly the box committee's achievements are a credit to the women on that committee, something over 150 boxes sold, I am told, being their record, as against less than fifty last year.

Dance on Thanksgiving Eve.

The gayest date ahead of the younger set is the Bachelors and Benedicts' dance on Nov. 26, the eve of Thanksgiving day, and the first of its kind for several years. This will be given in the gold room of the Congress hotel and the organizing committee promises special stunts equal to those gotten up years ago by those now aged veterans, Rosecrans Baldwin and Allen Haines, when wild goats pranced about the floor and snowstorms set the dancers shivering.

The mantle of Momus has fallen this year on the shoulders of J. Morse Ely, William E. Clow Jr., Laurence Robbins, Robert Gardner, Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, and Richard Bentley.

The list, 350 strong, includes the younger married set, the youths and maidens who have been ripened by a few years' social experience, and last, but by no means least, three or four of the season's debutantes. It's like being chosen queen of the carnival for a "bud" to be invited to one of these dances.

This exclusiveness is but a sign of the power of youth and the dread it inspires in the hearts of those further along on that unexplored road of life. To protect themselves the generations ahead of the season's social crop of eager boys and girls have built high walls around such well embedded institutions as the Assemblies and the Bachelors and Benedicts, and put up signs warning the debutante and her followers off the premises.

I don't blame the older sets. As before stated in this column, the youth of the day is terrifying in its tendency utterly to ignore anything but itself, its desires, aspirations, and tastes. "Heaven protect us," it seems to cry, "from association with the stodgy folk who have run the world up to now!"

It's the same cry each generation, say you? Yes, but never, perhaps, quite so piercing and shrill as now.

Dinners Before the Ball.

To return to the B. and B.s for a moment, the names of the dinner hosts before the ball include the John Stevensons, the Robert Hunters, and the Edward L. Ryersons Jr. The last named will handset—to use a good Anglo-Saxon word—their new house at 1431 Astor street, on this occasion.

Invitations to the dance are said to be in great demand and as breakfast Thursday morning as well as late supper Wednesday is being planned, it sounds as if there would be many sleeping late on Thanksgiving day.

Two nights later, Nov. 28, the first Assembly at the Blackstone hotel will bring out the most representative gathering of Chicago's so-called fashionable world for, after all, real society is made not by gay and flighty youth, but by the more experienced matrons, especially those who, to their knowledge of the world, unite large houses and incomes to match. They make, shape, and direct the social machine from here to Timbuctoo.

Man, mere man, has nothing to do with it. If he be married, his social outlook and environment is entirely in the hands of his wife. He cannot overcome any disabilities she may have in this direction, whereas many a gay and charming wife has carried her husband up society ladders he could never have scaled alone.

Bazaar Workers Busy.

Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman is marshaling her cohorts for the great "Boardwalk" bazaar, which will draw the crowds to the Coliseum the first week in December. Every Tuesday morning her executive committee meets in her offices at 72 West Adams street, to direct the policies of the undertaking, while every Wednesday morning in the same place the heads of shops and other departments meet to report progress on their preparations.

In her quick understanding of other people's points of view, and her equally quick sympathy with and enthusiasm over their schemes, Mrs. Coleman shows herself an ideal leader for such an enterprise. She awakens and sustains the interest, at the same time that she has a firm hand in directing the activities of those working with her. It's going to be a good show. Save your strength and your shekels for it.

There is a scheme on foot which, if it succeeds, will unite the beneficiary of this bazaar, the Passavant Memorial hospital, with the proposed expansion of the Northwestern university. Should the latter institution get the fund it is going after in its coming drive, it will establish some of its special departments—surgery, medicine, dentistry, engineering, and so on—in a group of stately buildings on that beautiful piece of land lying on the lake at the extreme east end of Chicago avenue, a wonderful site for such a settlement.

It proposes, I am told, to give the Passavant ground for its new habitation and have it run in connection with the therapeutic departments of the university, a proposition which seems most wise and feasible.

New York Takes Ingalls.

A distinct blow to their large circle of friends is the coming departure for New York of Mr. and Mrs. George Ingalls and their family. They had just got comfortably settled in their new home at 33 Bellevue place, when a call came to Mr. Ingalls offering him an exalted job on the New York Central railroad—one so near the top that he can knock on the president's door without leaving his chair. It was too tempting to be turned down, even though his family is loath to leave a community where they have made such a real place for themselves and were more than happy in their present quarters.

It's the habit of New York when they want something really well done to get some one from Chicago to do it. Almost all the leading men there have "cut their eye teeth" here.

The death last week of Walter Weyl in a New York hospital, removed one of the most brilliant and promising of our younger American writers, as well as taking from life one of the most charming and companionable of men. His connection with Chicago was through his wife, who was Miss Bertha Poole, a member of a well known family here, a sister of Ralph and Abram Poole, Mrs. Leverett Thompson, and Mrs. Rosecrans Baldwin of Chicago, and Mrs. Marion McFaddon and Ernest Poole of New York. She is left with one child, a son.

Death of Former Chicagoan.

Another recent death which touches Chicago is that of the Countess Caroline Benoist d'Azy, who died in Paris Nov. 4. She was a daughter of Nathaniel Jones, at one time a conspicuous figure on the Board of Trade here. When at the height of his fortunes he built the house on the Lake Shore drive now owned and occupied by Harold McCormick. The Jones family had hardly moved in when financial disaster overtook them.

But before this their beautiful daughter had married the young Count Benoist d'Azy. The marriage was not a great success and for many years she and her husband had been separated, though, as both were Catholics, they could not be divorced. During the great war she nursed the French wounded most devotedly and in so doing lost an eye through a violent infection.

Six months ago she and Mrs. Peter Dudley went with a Red Cross mission to Turkey and Syria, but, her health failing, she returned to Paris. She arrived there Nov. 3, the day before she died, a martyr to the cause of the France she loved so much.

The writer most earnestly entreats some inventive genius to devise a useful or interesting occupation for the unemployed right hand which nowadays aimlessly clutches at the empty air while the leftfi hand holds the telephone earpiece to the ear waiting for the operator to answer the signal. The wasted minutes thus spent might be employed to that increase of production so much to be desired now, and also tend to diminish the bitter hatred now inspired by the telephone company's present inadequate service.

Bazaar Receipts Go to Home for Homeless Women

THE Sarah Hackett Stevenson Memorial Lodging house at 2412 Prairie avenue will benefit from a bazaar to be held on Tuesday at the Auditorium hotel. Linens, flowers, and articles suitable for holiday gifts will be offered for sale, as well as autographed books by the best known American and British authors.

Mrs. William D. Hurlbut, secretary of the association, will have charge of the sale of a cook book comprising tested recipes of Chicago club women. There will be cards and dancing, under the chaperonage of Mrs. A. M. Cameron and Mrs. F. S. Danforth. The entire receipts from the day will go toward the maintentance of the lodging house.

More than twenty years ago the hopelessness of the many women thrown out of employment at the close of the world's fair appealed strongly to the late Dr. Sarah Hackett Stevenson, a member and one time president of the Chicago Woman's club. Dr. Stevenson placed before her fellow members the emergent need of a home where women without funds or friends might be cared for while work was being found for them. Her plea had its effect, and many other clubs responded by giving furnishings and funds for what was soon established as the Woman's Model Lodging house.

Instances without number could be cited of women who, failing at many other doors, finally found refuge at this one; no woman is refused admission on account of the size of her family. During the last year numbers of mothers with five and six children have been tided over periods of discouragement and their entire family cared for pending brighter days.

The woman who is on the declining path of years, when employment is difficult to find, whose resources are small or entirely lacking, who often is ill from worry or lack of nourishment, is supplied from the loan fund in case she cannot meet the nominal charge which is asked of the women in order that they may preserve self-respect and not feel themselves objects of charity.

Young mothers who have been deserted and who must have time for adjusting their affairs, leave their children at the nursery, where they are cared for during the day by a nurse, and at night are given into their mothers' hands. The nursery has grown until an average of sixty children are cared for each day. Every effort is made to keep the mother and children together.

The present home and nursery of the association were given as a memorial by Dr. Stevenson by William B. McKinley of Champaign, who is head of the board of trustees. Mrs. Herbert D. Sheldon is president of the executive board, which heads an organization of eighty-two members who seek to alleviate the sorrows of unfortunate mothers and little children who are sent to them.

"LET THE PEOPLE RULE."

A wise man welcomes wise restraint. He knows that absolute liberty is not only impossible but undesirable. He knows that his will cannot be wholly free because it is limited by innumerable conditions. He knows that his will ought not to be wholly free because he lives in a world of men and he realizes that without compromise there must be either tyranny or chaos. He knows that it is not well for his will to be always free because he knows that he is not always wise.

These are truisms for the individual and truisms for those aggregations of individuals we call nations. The wise man distrusts his own passions and impulses. The wise nation distrusts its own moods. The wise nation does not wish for absolute liberty. It does not wish to be always free to act on the mood or impulse of the moment. It knows it is not always wise.

The wise nation, knowing itself, knowing that from time to time human nature is swept off its feet by passion or prejudice, places restraints upon its own liberty of action in order that it may be protected from its own mistakes of haste and impulse, and that it may insure that what it does shall be the result of reason and deliberate judgment.

These are platitudes, of course, out of the primer of popular government. But we do not apologize for setting them forth here, though they are as simple as the rule of three, because they are ignored by a very conspicuous sort of political thought and because at this time we have special need to think back to the ground on which we stand and renew our faith in principles human experience has proved in blood and bitterness.

There are two influences which oppose the self restraints of ordered liberty; one is, that of the demagogue, whose power and profit are dependent upon his ability to inflame popular passion and take advantage of impulse which reason would control, the other is that of the dreaming radical who creates out of his own sentimental emotion a fiction which he calls "the people," and which is no more like us than the effigy of a saint in a medieval window is like our average selves. The people in the mouth of the demagogue or the emotional radical can do no wrong. Yet we the people know that both as individuals and as a people we do wrong; that we are human and, with humanity, err. Looking sanely at ourselves, we know we are sometimes foolish, sometimes prejudiced or misled. The demagogue or the sentimental advocate of extreme and unlimited democracy does not remind us of follies we have committed in the past or warn against dangers of self-deceit and haste in the future. Flattery and idealization place us on a pedestal which harsh experience will lay low sooner or later—but flattery and idealization are pleasant. The wise man, the wise nation, is as careful to avoid self-deceit as the deceit of others; but we are not always wise.

The American system of government was founded by men whose genius was a very practical one. They knew life, they knew themselves. They did not allow themselves to be carried too far away into theory, and the principles they grounded their work upon are such as the plain, sensible man and woman can test out of his or her own experience. They wished action to be tested by reason. They believed that if a thing was important it was important to provide time for its examination. Like all great statesmen, like all temperate, experienced, and sensible men in whatever walk of life, they wished to safeguard the people from mistakes inherent in fallible human nature. Therefore they did not establish a "pure democracy," a system by which public action could and would follow the fluctuant tides of our moods, but set up a system of principles expressing the best political thought of our race, the seasoned product of our experience and our political genius. By these principles it was intended our action should be restrained and guided rather than by the exhortation of passing eloquence or the temptation of passing moods or ideas.

The chief danger of democracy is refusal to know itself and to place checks upon itself. It sounds very plausible when demagogues and impracticals invite us to rule ourselves, tell us that we are our own masters, and that our will must be free. But this invites us to submit ourselves not to the government of our reason and self-control but to the chances and accidents of our impulses and passions.

"Let the people rule" is the slogan of advocates of pure democracy. But it is under a system of wise self-restraint that the people rule, because they then rule through their own deliberate judgment. It is ourselves at our sanest that rule.

MOVIE COMEDY.

Inasmuch as Charles Chaplin has the prevailing economic disease, curtailment of production, we are glad to see Mack Sennett making such development of the comic art in the movies. It was bad enough for us masses to be denied our beer and to deprive us of the comic movies made for radicalism.

The only walk out Chaplin had a moral right to was the one we have become familiar with on the stage. But what are morals in these days? If Attorney General Palmer is running for president, he would be well advised to leave the coal miners alone and slap an injunction on Chaplin. That would get him something and Palmer could run as the man who made Chaplin work. He could carry every state.

Sennett is doing a great deal to keep the masses quiet. With Turpin and Phyllis Hevas and the comedians he is developing or allowing to develop, he will put some pink in the gray days. Phyllis causes the loss of Edna Purviance to be less acute. That being some loss, Phyllis must be some cause, and it is the truth.

Many a man goes into a moving picture theater a bolshevist and comes out a contented householder because in the meantime there has entered his life "Uncle Tom's Cabin Without the Cabin" or "Salome vs. Shenandoah."

Sennett is learning to make the funny fall funny. He makes an awkward blunder the legitimate cause of a number of grotesque effects. Mankind dearly loves a boob. Sennett gives them ten boobs. We hope he keeps the pace and does not slip back.

With near beer and no Chaplin we may have a social revolution in this land of the near free, but Sennett is not a near Chaplin. He is Sennett. Long may he reel. He will keep us masses from feeling the vacuity of existence which is only core and no apple.

RETRIEVING OUR FOREIGN REPRESENTATIVES.

Carranza, it appears, has declared "categorically" that he will not pay ransom for the American consular agent Jenkins. To which we assume our answer will be "O, very well."

The Mexican reply will make another page in the history of Wilsonian foreign policy which we may read with that patience our late experiences have developed in us. Señor Carranza's remarks are of a familiar tone and tenor. He explains that "the Mexican government cannot lend itself to facilitating these immoral acts" (of banditry) by paying ransom and thus encouraging such enterprises; but "is ready to guarantee to the victims, through the courts," the payment of such damages as they be entitled to under Mexican penal and civil laws.

We like especially the following: "On very rare occasions indeed, and only when special conditions concur which are lacking in the present case, has a government paid a ransom."

Far be it from our present government to contend that there are any special conditions in this case. For five or six years now there has been nothing "special" about any outrage upon Americans in Mexico. We quite understand why Señor Carranza's government does not feel it can afford to begin paying ransoms or penalties for offenses against Americans. It would be a drain of the Mexican exchequer, whereas the expense of the composition and delivery of a diplomatic note now and then is negligible, while shaking a rhetorical fist in the face of an adversary who doesn't strike back except after the same manner is an entertainment gratifying not only to Señor Carranza's Latin Soul but also to the populace.

Perhaps Mr. Lansing has allowed his well known nauteur and ferocity to carry us too far. What after all, is a consular agent that he should be protected in Mexico? He simply represents the United States of America, the "Colossus of the North," which is as feeble and cowardly as it is insolent and powerful. Señor Carranza, in his interesting and judicial outline to the Mexican congress, reviewing American relations with Mexico, American motives, methods and purposes, makes it clear to the world that our having any representatives whatever in Mexico is a sign of Señor Carranza's magnanimity.

How long this consideration will endure under the violence and outrage which our bloodthirsty and treacherous government manifests toward Mexico, we cannot, of course, predict. Evidence transpires that a considerable colonization of Germans is planned. We find also that our friends of the great war are selling ...ns at bargain lots to the needy Mexican. So we might safely look forward to a day when we shall not have to maintain diplomatic hostages in Mexico, at least for a time. But, until that day arrives, it is obviously necessary to make some arrangement for such U. S. officials as may be tolerated south of the Rio Grande. Senator Poindexter plausibly suggests the establishment of a public fund for the payment of ransoms. We think a national drive for such a fund would bring a golden flood from the pockets of our patriotism.

AN ANCHOR TO WIND'ARD.

While a good many of us are speculating upon the ability of the government to withstand radical shocks of one kind and another we might cast our eye upon this anchor to wind'ard: There are 35,000,000 savings and commercial bank depositors in the United States; the savings depositors alone have $10,673,971,000 under lock and key. Need we be anxious about their opinion of bombs and soviets?

These figures have been made by a Brooklyn banker, who also has discovered that relatively little of the country's wealth is held by the so called wealthy classes. This ought to be a surprise to the potential Trotzkys and Lenines and Kuns who, could they exercise their proposal to spoil the rich, would find nothing but paper, and who were they to pursue their hunt for currency would find themselves inconveniently confronted by some 27,000,000 depositors. The soviet outlook is pale.

Who are the life insurance policy holders? Why, some 35,000,000 of the "masses." Are these masses disposed to overturn the companies they so patiently have built up? Ask the masses.

What has built our railroads, our homes, our cities and all our other institutions? We are obliged to the Brooklyn banker for the answer. Nothing in the world but the giant reserve of billions laid up by the people.

Are the masses of Russia and Hungary holders of 35,000,000 life insurance policies; possessors of $10,573,971,000 of the best coin in the world?

WIDER ROADS IN THE COUNTRY.

In the program of community needs appearing at the head of this page is a plank for wider roads in the country. It refers to the fact that most of our surfaced highways are concrete ribbons admitting of two closely fixed lines of traffic.

In good weather on Saturdays and Sundays and in the evenings such thoroughfares as Milwaukee road, Lincoln road, and others having heavy traffic are jammed with automobiles. They are compelled to crawl along in two endless processions, proceeding in opposite directions. Should a tire burst anywhere in this parade the whole thing stops—traffic is suspended.

On both sides of the road are sheer declivities. Were a motorist desirous of getting on he might chafe in vain. There is no passing. We suggest wider shoulders on the roads or at least at intervals so that cars may pull out and not be obstructed.

"Whoa, Gal!"

[From a Woodaville, N. H., paper.]

There was a great commotion in Newbury, Vt., one day last week caused by a runaway horse, which came running down through our streets with two wheels attached to the rigging. Women shrieked and clasped their children to their bosoms, and hens and chickens scratched for cover as the frightened animal turned corners and finally turned up in a widow's yard, with every appearance of "home at last." Soon the cause of all this commotion appeared, the owner, Frank Gearwar, who explained that it happened this wise: The tarnation old fool (he referred to the horse, not the widow) yanked him and busted his suspenders, and while he was grabbing for his breeches, the blasted old brute took a mean advantage of him and ran away. It was either let his pants fall off, or let the horse get away, and of the two evils he chose the least. Frank has now a new, strong pair of suspenders, and no doubt the old mare will never find an excuse for being in the widow's shed again.

COLLEGES AND STUDENT HEALTH.

WHEN I was in college, a good many years ago, the students were sent home twice on account of epidemics. On one occasion the institution closed for a month in the midst of the early spring work because of an epidemic. In more recent years epidemics of smallpox and typhoid fever have upset the work of some of our great universities.

In the large institutions there is very little danger of such an occurrence now, though most of the smaller institutions are still under danger of this hazard.

Prof. E. C. Howe of Wellesley college sent a questionnaire to various colleges and universities for men and women to discover just what care was given the health of students. In reply seventy-seven answers were received. This questionnaire was sent to the physical directors of school listed by the Carnegie foundation.

The questions asked related to the following:

I. Physical entrance requirements.
II. Personal hygiene—instruction, exercise.
III. Medical care and prevention of illness.
IV. Sanitation of college plant.
V. Supervision of students; living conditions off the campus.
VI. Administration.

The objects of physical examination on entrance are: To encourage secondary and grammar schools to pay more attention to physical development; to classify students as to their capacity to enter into the more vigorous sports; to obtain a measure of the student's physical development, in order to regulate his physical education and in general to guide in the selection of studies; and, lastly, to guard the student body against transmissible disease and to weed out early those students who are certain to break down under the strain of college work.

Three-fourths of the schools and colleges require some sort of an entrance examination. Four replied that they give no physical examination whatever. The number of students examined by each examiner ranged from 34 to 828. This fact and the variation in the times given by different schools for each examination indicated wide difference in what is understood to be a physical examination. A request for copies of examination blanks revealed that only 30 per cent of the colleges had a physical examination entrance blank.

One-half the colleges have the teeth examined. Of these, only 4 per cent have the teeth examined by dentists. Only one-quarter of the schools require an examination of vision. Of these, only 9 per cent require that the eyes shall be examined by eye specialists.

There is no record on any of the questionnaires of any prospective students excluded from school or any who changed their work as a result of the entrance physical examinations given during the last five years. This means that the examination is not accomplishing much and is not taken seriously.

Dean Marquis of the Ford company recently told an audience at the National Cash Register plant that his company accepted its share of cripples, physically below par, men with organic disease, the blind, the epileptics, and the mentally disturbed. People in these groups had to make a living, and his company strove to take its share and to fit them into jobs where they could work with profit to the company and with satisfaction to the men.

There still is more reason why colleges should accept their share of the physically undeveloped. But they should show more evidence of vocational and academic guidance of such people.

Under the division of personal hygiene the work is not uniform. Those who engage in major sports are very well watched over. Gymnastic instruction for all students is required by 90 per cent of the colleges; 20 per cent of the institutions require restrictive and corrective gymnastics. No institution has worked out any satisfactory method for requiring strenuous play or exercise from all students. Various plans have been tried for stimulating exercise and play by students who need it but are disinclined toward it. The bookworm professors make a poor showing. Only 10 per cent of them do gymnasium work or participate in gymnastic exercises.

The very important field of personal hygiene is being well developed. Such schools as the University of Missouri and the University of Wisconsin get out excellent booklets on such subjects as shoes, care of the feet, dress, eye strain, posture, headaches, and similar subjects. In 1890 only six colleges gave courses in personal hygiene.

In this survey 61 per cent of the schools give such courses, and in 86 per cent of these the course in personal hygiene carries college credits. Howe gives some of the requisites for such a course in the American Journal of Public Health. The person teaching personal hygiene is very apt to develop into a faddist.

Some of them become food faddists, eating only straw and nuts or vegetables.

Some develop clothes fads, and others fads as to exercises. The ideal arrangement is to have a teacher and assistants with a good biological background and the point of view of positive hygiene and small classes in which discussion is possible.

The best antidote toward foolish fads is a good scientific background. The faddists are nearly always poorly educated people—people with little background of biology.

By point of view of positive hygiene Dr. Howe means they must be striving for the development of good physiques, virility, and strength, rather than to avert disease.

The need for small classes and discussion is because personal hygiene, the discussion of habits, does not lend itself well to discussion by large groups. What is sought is to make every listener apply what is said to himself. The chance of getting this done is increased if the classes are small and the students have a chance to take part in the discussion.

Some of the great universities have developed excellent machinery for taking care of sick pupils. Each matriculant pays a medical fee. This provides a sum of money which maintains a dispensary and a hospital. In the dispensary the ordinary medical needs of the student body are cared for.

The sicker students are cared for in the hospital. The institution generally builds a dispensary and provides the hospital facilities. The students' fees provide the maintenance expense.

Some of the universities maintain group medicine clinics that will compare favorably with the best group medicine clinics to be found anywhere—and the best of all medical service is that which is given by group medicine. Forty-three per cent of the colleges reported that they had infirmaries or dispensaries. Eighty per cent of the dispensaries followed up their discharged cases.

Dr. Howe was disappointed to find how few schools watched over their water supply. Fifteen per cent of the schools had their own water supply, separate from those of the cities in which they were located. Of these, one-third filtered the water, and all claimed to safeguard it, but the evidence that they did so was not satisfying to Dr. Howe. Eighty-five per cent of the colleges used water from some city water supply. Of this number, considerably less than one-half make any sort of an examination of the water supply. They depend on the control by the city, which, as we know, is often less than it should be. In one-half the cases where the college shares the town water supply some part of that supply is from surface sources, and such sources are nearly always polluted in some measure.

Typhoid fever is a disappearing disease. Some communities are losing as few as one or two persons a year for each 100,000 inhabitants. In the suppression of typhoid fever the colleges should lead, and yet we find that many of them are not so careful as the much abused political city governments. Dr. Howe comments as follows:

"Apparently the lessons of the Ithaca typhoid fever epidemic have not been sufficiently widely and thoroughly learned. From the standpoint of spreading contagion, milk is nearly as important as water. Many contend that it is more so."

One-fifth of the colleges replied that they were using only pasteurized milk. About the same number said they were keeping track of the milk supply by bacteriological and chemical examination. The remaining three-fifths did not claim to be doing anything.

The United States Naval academy at Annapolis proved several years ago that by getting extra clean milk, protecting it from flies, chilling it within thirty minutes after it was milked, and keeping it cold until it was consumed they greatly lessened the sickness rate among the students.

The questions relating to the ventilation of the schoolrooms showed that practically none of the colleges were doing anything. The only consolation is that they were no worse off than the grammar schools and high schools. Not much will be gained in fighting for better ventilation in factories and offices until schoolrooms and college rooms are better ventilated.

Most of the colleges had swimming pools, but not more than half of them properly watched over the sanitary conditions of the pool and the room in which it was located.

The rule was that sewage was properly disposed of. Either the college sewers emptied into the city sewers, or else the college had a disposal plant of its own.

Less than half the colleges had their kitchens and dining rooms screened against flies.

Very few colleges now permit common drinking cups and roller towels.

In most colleges a large part of the student body lives in private boarding houses. Of the colleges where the students, or most of them, live in private boarding houses, less than half exercise any control over the sanitation of the boarding houses.

Rarely was it found that the athletic director and the department of physical education were in close coöperation. In most cases the athletic director got all the material he could for major athletics, gave all his attention to these subjects, and let the remainder of the student body alone.

He went it alone, except that in most cases there was a faculty athletic council of which the director of physical education was usually a member. However, they did not have much authority, except to decide which students had enough academic credits to entitle them to engage in major athletics.

In only a few instances were the principles of dietetics and household economy taught in the household economics departments applied in the dining halls feeding the students.

And, finally, the reason the colleges were found to be lagging behind in sanitation and hygiene was, in great part at least, the fact that in almost half of the institutions the work was not under the direction of specialists in health conservation, in which our colleges should lead.

NO LEAK IN PIPE.

Chicago, Nov. 13.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I am the owner of the house located at 1606 South Clifton Park avenue and wish to complain about the vacant lot adjoining our building on the north. At one time there was a foundation laid on this lot, which was later filled up, and it must be that there is a leak in one of the water pipes on this lot, as there is water seeping in through the north wall and we now have a foot of water in our basement. We have spoken of this matter to the city sanitary department, but have been unable to get them to do anything. The owner of this lot also throws rubbish and refuse matter on this lot, which brings on an unsanitary condition in our house.

R. R.

Respecting the attached letter complaining about water from vacant lots lodging in basement, our inspector reports that this is surface water, and no leak or broken pipe could be found in the foundation hole, which had been filled up.

The owner of the property at 1606 South Clifton Park avenue has taken no precaution to prevent surface water from draining into the premises.

LETTER TO A COAL MINER.

Tipton, Ia., Nov. 14.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I live out on the prairie forty miles from nowhere. Talk about being a lone worker in a coal mine! I worked all day in the boiling hot sun and half the night to raise and harvest food to keep your wife and babies from starving. My good wife worked with me when she was able, helped me care for the live stock and milked the cows evenings so I could work longer in the fields to help feed you and yours. I did not even take a day off during the busy season to haul my coal from town lest some of your food be wasted. When I thought to make a big profit on my wheat our Uncle Samuel comes along and fixes the price. I take my medicine. No talk about autocracy or class legislation or an eight hour day. It was my duty to my country, etc.

Now, Mr. Coal Miner, the cold wave is upon us. My wife is confined to her bed, and please remember it is just as hard for me to watch my wife and babies freeze or die from the cold as for you to watch yours die from hunger. Talking of hardships in this life of ours, such as being deprived of fresh air and sunshine in a coal mine, I would indeed welcome a little of your coal mine shade during harvest and your shelter from the winter's blasts when during a blizzard I am trying to get your food to market and haul home a load of coal, if it were possible for me to get any, which is not the case at the present writing. And how many times I have envied you your short hours when after a hard day's work I had to sit up all night with the live stock. You wouldn't last half as long in a western blizzard as I would in an eastern coal mine.

But I have a good come back. My corn is still in the crib. I can use it to better advantage for fuel than you can use your coal for food. I do not say what I will do, for it is against the law of our land to burn foodstuff. But if it comes to the "survival of the fittest" we can all take a hand.

Still trusting that you will see your error and go to work to get me some coal before I am forced to burn up your food, I am yours truly, FARMER JOHN.

WELL, GOOD-BY, G. F.

Edinburg, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Since sending my discontinuance notice, I have talked with a Republican banker who confirms my statement that "your intense and unfair partisanship and catering to alien and foreign population averse to Americanism will speedily cost THE TRIBUNE the favor and patronage of all loyal Americans, and especially the church people." There can be no safe alliance with wrong.

G. F. OLIVER.

LEAVE IT TO DOC.

Chicago, Nov. 12.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—For the World's Greatest Newspaper your editorial, "Where Are We and Why," in today's issue, reads like antiquated sophistry. It certainly is out of place in a paper issued under the paper's caption. There are two things which it would seem your paper has not yet gotten hold of. One that the great majority of American born, whose parents were born in this country, desire prohibition. The other is that alcoholic drinks are a poison. If you don't know this, ask your Dr. Evans. There is certainly a difference between stopping people from taking poison and forcing them to take it. This "social custom" which you mention is that which has maintained our saloons and low dives, but our better circles, clubs, and organizations, it has certainly been reduced nil. I would suggest that is the fu... If you have anything to say on ... leave it to Doc Evans.

ALFRED B. AMBERG.

NEW CURE FOR FITS.

Chicago, Nov. 9.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I'll admit that you are more intelligent, broad minded, farsighted than I am, and quite as honest and sincere. Nevertheless I believe that you overestimate the danger to the country from bolshevism and underestimate the dangers from the movement which aims at merging Americanism with Anglo-Saxonism.

Bolshevism, like war and revolution, is a transitory and not a permanent condition. Its main object is to prepare the Russian people for democracy by removing the deep gulf which separates the aristocracy from the common people. This it achieves by pulling down the one and lifting up the other, thus putting them on an equal footing. It tries to cure the aristocracy of their arrogance and haughtiness and to inspire the lower classes with self-confidence, ambition, and a desire for education. All this has been achieved a more or less form of government will replace it is a matter of course. F. J.

BITING THE HAND, ETC.

Chicago, Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—May I, an ex-soldier, a member of the American Legion, and a guest at the Y. M. C. A. hotel, have the privilege of answering "Ex-Gob" and of reminding him that he had better read again the song, "Don't Bite the Hand That's Feeding You" and get some of its sentiment into his system?

Why did he present only one side of his case? Why did he not say—as he must have known—that the 5 cent fare which he so objects to paying goes directly to the man who ... him a job, that said caller is an ex-soldier who lost an arm in the war and now earns a livelihood through kindness of the ... giving him this position?

EX-SOLDIER.

ALSO IT IS RAGING.

Chicago, Nov. 12.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your editorial this morning continues your habit of sneering at prohibition. Why not tell the people that science has fully explored the evils of drink as injurious to life and health, and that liquor is even practically published from our hospitals and from medical practice as a remedy for disease?

Why not recognize the established fact that liquor drinking furnishes a ... per cent of crime, poverty and death?

REV. DUNCAN C. MILNE.

LET THE KID ALONE, DAN.

Chicago, Nov. 13.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Why waste valuable space by publishing such a nonsensical article as that by Daniel Sullivan? Those of intelligence consider it only common sense policy to relegate such stuff to history and let it go at that.

May I not suggest that Sullivan is a nonessential citizen? L. G. W.

VIEWS of a TRADE-UNIONIST (3)
by George J. Knott

Mr. Knott is an ex-president of the Chicago Typographical Union.

TRADES UNIONISM AND SOCIALISM.

THE transformation of trade unionism of forty or fifty years ago from a purely short hour and high wage basis to the more modern direct action syndical doctrine causes many of the old time organization men to wonder what effect this new ism will have upon succeeding generations. The keen observer will recognize the change from old time American patriotism and loyalty to American institutions to that of class consciousness, class selfishness, and class hatred through which the trade unionists are dangerously near becoming Europeanized rather than Americanized.

The conservative trade unionists are fighting Socialism in the unions. They occupy a position between two firing lines—radical Socialism on one hand and the manufacturers' associations on the other. The Socialist agitator is in his natural element when he has an opportunity to urge a strike. If a strike is lost it makes good propaganda, because it affords a practical illustration of the weakness of organized labor when pitted against organized capital.

The agitator impresses these truths upon the trade unionist, and also declares that last week's labor is lost to him forever. What organized capital paid for labor has been sweated out again by other organized capital in the cost of living. Nothing to show for his labor except it be a continued lease of life in which to labor some more. He gets to thinking about these self-evident truths, and reasons within himself something after this fashion:

"Organized capital offers me nothing in the future except continuous war. Every move I make is counteracted. Socialism seems to be my friend and the only remedy for my troubles. Its supremacy will forever settle the disputes between capital and labor."

Then he turns Socialist—not a theoretical Socialist, but, in his desperation, a revolutionary Socialist.

THE wage earner has frequently listened to and also read learned disquisitions upon the subject of equal opportunity for all men. The theory is plausible enough, but some way the application is all wrong. From the wage earner's point of view equal opportunity resolves itself down to good luck or the ability to conduct a successful bunko game. Mediocre ability is a stranger to him and never enters into the question. He cannot or will not recognize any distinction between the two. There is another equation that has close connection with the other two, and that is thrift. The wage earner may succeed in saving enough to pay for a home or the furnishings of a little flat, and it may be there are other wage earners who look upon that circumstance as a matter of luck rather than thrift or equal opportunity.

The home owner, however, will swell up with pride and assert his ownership is due to thrift. Yet he views the one who has accumulated more than he has, through equal opportunity in business, as the lucky man or a sharper. Lack of comprehension is not a fault of the wage earner alone, but is general. Equal opportunity may be always present, but mediocre ability is weighted down with a sense of its own impotence. The wage earner may make a distinction between the two, as applied to himself and the man on the next step down, but he makes no distinction as applied to himself and the man on the next step above.

AGITATION is as essential to the success of trade unionism as traveling salesmen to the commercial business. The field, however, is wider and the scope of possibilities more comprehensive. One salesman sells dry goods, another hardware, and the third groceries. The Socialist agitator preaches unlimited freedom for the so called proletariat, which term, by the way, is thoroughly despised by the true blue American. The soap box orator contends all that is necessary is concerted action to overthrow constituted authority and orderly citizenship. He endeavors to change his audience from a crowd supine into a mob rampant. The legitimate trade union movement came near being wrecked over forty years ago through the activities of the Knights of Labor, which was nothing more nor less than the forerunner of the doctrine of one big union liberally seasoned with radical Socialism.

Radical Socialism was imported under the promise of political freedom, and fabulous compensation. After a few years of practically the same kind of life work is not a myth—the compensation, instead of being fabulous, is a fabrication, and the political freedom looms up like an algebraic problem—and just about as understandable, when it is necessary to acquire it through education and not through unbridled license. Democracy is tedious and wearisome—too slow for present necessity—therefore the strong arm—the attempt to gain the blessings of the land of promise through the same agencies that have been taught them from youth as the rule of the classes—unquestioned supremacy—force.

The enlightened American wage earner is not the field for such a leader. He measures up no larger than they do, and his indiscriminate system of standardizing wages, hours and home life offers little relief. The advocacy of sabotage and kindred methods of warfare is an admitted guaranty that the same program will be carried out if one is better clothed or has in his possession some trinket the other fellow wants.

SOCIALISM is a living refutation of its own professions. The claim that it is merely following the same routine of civilization as the French revolution, the Boston tea party, or other reformations is a subterfuge and not a parallel. Organization and centralization is the necessity of the times, that the prodigious problems of the day—economic, social, financial, and political—may be worked out with precision and economy. The Socialist school of philosophy is a hidebound, copper riveted negative view of the times, and is officered and governed by a spirit of intolerance the equal, if not the superior, of any hierarchy, monarchy, or king of savagery the world has ever known. The right or wrong of historical revolutions is conceded the result of oppression by government through execution, confiscation, or deportation. Our own government was conceived and founded in a spirit of concession guaranteeing the widest range of individuality, intended to equalize freedom. The Declaration of Independence is a model of diction in self-evident truths. As a historical document it will outlive the Magna Charta. It does not meet the requirements of the radical, however, who believes in the widest personal liberty for himself at the expense of some one else.

Socialists, judging from the standard set by the noted writers and students, are mild mannered and inoffensive citizens. The fact that they possess the culture and brains to work out the theorems and problems they advocate as necessary for the emancipation of the human race should guarantee against any possibility of a militant spirit.

A sane man would not care to place his future welfare in the hands of the advocate of force and sabotage. If such measures are necessary to obtain Socialistic advancement, what guaranty is given that the same force will not be necessary to perpetuate it? Human nature will be the same under a Socialistic form of government as it is now. There will be the same differences of opinion and the same amount of dissension among those who have a real or imaginary cause for dissatisfaction. Who will be the judge of what is pure Socialism and what is not?

The theory of Socialism is entrancing in its allurements, but the radical methods advocated by its extremist supporters rob it of its ethereal dreams and cause one to wonder why such a beautiful theory should need such drastic methods to secure its adoption.

A Socialist is not a trade unionist from principle. He does not talk for trade unionism as a trade unionist, but rather to trade unionists, urging them to become Socialists. He merely tolerates trade unionism as an integer in his campaign for Socialism. When a Socialist is a candidate for office the party demands a membership in the union of his trade, to give him a standing with trade unionists. A scab carpenter running for office on a Socialist ticket would be a farce. Socialists are trade unionists from policy only.

IT is not often that the first and latest novel from an author's pen are published almost simultaneously with a volume of short stories to round out the representation of his powers. With "The Lay Anthony," the first of Joseph Hergesheimer's novels, reprinted after five years, "The Happy End," a volume of short stories which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, and "Linda Condon," the latest tale to be fashioned by his facile imagination, we have a rare opportunity to survey the work of the man whom many call our greatest American novelist.

I must confess that his claim to that myrtle wreath has not been undisputed in my mind. I have always marveled at his power of creating an atmosphere, of making vivid in words all of the fragrances and colors and hazes and bright sunlights of his stories, but that very florescence of environments has made his characters seem a little drab in comparison and his plots rather happenstance than great art. That magic of the senses was imprisoned in "Java Head" more, probably, than in any of his other tales. There is a prescience of it in "The Lay Anthony," but "The Lay Anthony" is more the story of a person. It was a very good first novel, but the difference between it and "Linda Condon," also the story of a person, written only five years later, is amazing. Linda Condon has much of the mystic beauty of Dona Rita of "The Arrow of Gold," the deathless charm of a few great women in literature. Linda is the apotheosis of a personality taking hand with life and parting with laughter, touching lips and parting with tears. She lives in herself, though not selfishly. Neither her children nor her husband nor the one man who ever stirred her deeply have more than a fleeting contact with her spirit. She is apart from life, and yet Mr. Hergesheimer has made of her a character which becomes an unforgettable part of one's literary life. Just as Linda felt herself expressed for the first time in a statue which she

"The Happy End" contains seven short stories labeled thus in the sense of their ending being felicitous because logical. I prefer Mr. Hergesheimer as a novelist, but his stories are among the best being written today.

Lord Dunsany, the recreator of fairies and super-gods, the fashioner of tales of exquisite beauty and magic, the poet imprisoned in the few words of a paragraph the most delicate definition of poetry in all literature, the dramatist whose plays are unlike any other plays in the world, Lord Dunsany in the flesh! He was here this week—and he will lecture on Tuesday evening at Orchestra hall—and such a surprise as he was. "Rangy" is the word that comes first to one's mind. He is one of the tallest men I ever saw and the least like the w. k. metaphorical match, for matches haven't joints, and Lord Dunsany is all jutting angles, from the tip of his thatch-like hair to his shoetops. And he has a comparable quality of mind—a sharp, keen, almost nervous intensity, but one that turns immediately to the next subject without ragged edges of thought. He has done the loveliest and the most delicate writing imaginable, with a real poet's joy in the making of beautiful things. A new and revised edition of Edward Hale Bierstadt's "Dunsany the Dramatist" [Little-Brown] has been made to celebrate his visit.

"Tom Sawyer" was the most popular book of children's book week at the public library. The grownups liked "The Education of Henry Adams" and "The Young Visiters" best.

"Jeremy" [Doran] is Hugh Walpole's story of a small boy of 8—I beg Jeremy's pardon—of a young man 3 whole years of age. It is a delightful record of an ordinary boy, neither a hero nor a rascal, but as proud fathers say, "every inch a boy." His eighth year has many of the high lights that made our eighth years memorable: his first theater—a Christmas pantomime, Jeremy lived in the early '90s—his first fair, his first dog. Hamlet, his dog, is one of the most understandingly pictured dogs in literature, by the way. Jeremy's record is such a sympathetic one, and such a fundamentally real one, that it must be more than usually autobiographical. It might well be, for I imagine that Hugh Walpole himself might have been just such a solid little boy, without too many whimsies, with a very real sense of humor and a dash of perfectly normal devilishness, a smashing fighting fist, and a horrified fear of emotional scenes. Jeremy is neither a genius nor a sick souled child of a Russian novel. He is just an ordinary little English boy. The story of his eighth year makes a book of real charm for us all. It makes us wish that we had a little Jeremy in our homes. He'd be much more fun than a little fairy.

The essential humanness of Charles Hanson Towne, which has won for him the countless friends, who in turn have gained for him the reputation for having more friends than any man in New York, is the quality of his poetry which endears it to simple hearts. "A World of Windows" [Doran] is not great poetry, but it will gain a hearing where much greater poetry goes unread, just because it has that gentle quality of human friendliness.

"The Starling" [Bobbs Merrill] is the novelized plaint of the starling in Sterne, "I can't get out—I can't get out," done in Juliet Wilbor Tompkins' very best and most popular manner. Sarah Cawthorne may be a bird in a hedge, but you must admit that she is a bird.

The Roosevelt Memorial association is asking the public to send any letters, writings, mementos, anything that might be classed as "Roosevelt-iana" to the president of the association, William Boyce Thompson, 1 Madison avenue, New York, as an aid in compiling a complete history of the life of the great man. If the souvenirs are too precious to be intrusted to the mails, the association would appreciate photographs of them and an explanation of their special interest.

PATROL on the RIO GRANDE
by John T. McCutcheon

FROM El Paso to Marfa, in the Big Bend district, is only a night's ride by rail, and on getting off the train in the dim hours before dawn the town seems very small and unimportant in comparison to El Paso. The first impression of Marfa is one which the Marfians would not be pleased to hear.

But it has a significance of its own, which becomes evident on closer acquaintance; and your respect increases when you learn that it is the center of a great empire of cattle ranges where the ranches are measured in square miles instead of in acres, and where great herds of white-faced Herefords graze in thousands upon the rich grama grass which covers the immense stretches of rolling prairie land.

Blue on the northern horizon are the Jefferson Davis range of mountains, with Livermore peak, the second highest point in Texas, raising a modest knob above the ragged skyline. Far to the south rises another range, which merges into the curious geological formation called the Rim Rock. You will hear much of the Rim Rock before you have been very long in the Big Bend district. It is a vast escarpment which has been shoved up by some titanic upheaval in the remote geological past, and from its brink you may look down its rocky face to the valley of the Rio Grande, 2,000 feet below.

It marks the southern boundary of the highlands upon which the great cattle growers range their herds. The long-horned Texas steer is gone forever from these parts where once he was supreme, for the modern cattleman has found that the Hereford, with perhaps a blend of Durham, makes the most profitable breed for the market.

The Rim Rock has played an important rôle in the dispatches, for up over its edge have come the Mexican raiders who have ravaged and pillaged and murdered and then have fled down over its steep sides again in their race back to the security of their own mountains.

There is certainly a feeling of wide openness about the Big Bend. On the broad face of these plains the straggling town of Marfa is dwarfed in the immensity of its surroundings.

In some respects Marfa has not escaped the standardizing influences which are so deadly to atmospheric individuality in American towns. The automobiles and the movies and the mail order houses have had their effect, but, luckily, Marfa has not been entirely overwhelmed.

On the streets are seen the western types which we feared were now only to be found in moving picture studios. Strong-faced, weather-beaten men in big gray Stetson hats, with ornamented high top boots and six-shooters swinging below well filled cartridge belts, show that the day of the picturesque frontiersman has not altogether disappeared.

And the talk heard on the streets is a welcome relief. Instead of strikes and industrial problems and the high cost of living, you are conscious of a new note. You discover that bandits and raids and ransoms and cattle thieves are the problems of the hour and minute in the cattle country.

IT is all this which gives you the sense of having been projected back from the supercivilization of 1919 to the border conditions of 1870. For it is just this Big Bend district, with its cattle and its isolated ranch houses, which has been the favorite field for the depredations of the Mexican bandits. Several times in the last three years there have been murderous raids which have stirred the entire United States with indignation.

Glen Springs, the scene of one of the most famous of these raids, is near the Rio Grande, in a wild section of the Big Bend. Brite's ranch is a few miles from the border, south of Marfa. It was here that the raid of Christmas day, 1917, occurred. The bandits took a driver, Michael Welsh, from his mail stage, hanged him in the Brite store, and cut his throat. An American employed in the store was shot in the face, and two American-Mexicans who were riding with the mail carrier were shot and killed. The store was then stripped of everything the bandits could carry away. The country was roused, and a posse of armed men was sent in pursuit. Some of the rear guard of the bandits were killed as they fled across the border. But the rest returned again on Jan. 4.

The Brite ranch is now fortified by means of a strong blockhouse with loopholes.

Neville's ranch was a sufferer later, in the spring of 1918.

"Exactly who are the bandits?" I asked an old-timer in the Big Bend. "Just what do you mean when you speak of Mexican bandits?"

"Well," said he, "they are usually little bunches of men who have broken away from the Villa or Carranza forces and are operating under the leadership of some Mexican who is trying to run a little revolutionary faction of his own."

"And this raid at Brite's," I asked, "was that the work of one of these detached bands?"

"There's a difference of opinion on that," he replied. "One of the Mexicans killed in the Brite's raid wore the uniform of a Carranzista officer, and we believe here that the raiders were part of the Carranza outfit. The Carranza people, though—the consuls and such—claim that Carranza soldiers had nothing to do with the raid. So there you are."

JUST now the raids have ceased; at least for the time being. For several months there has been a formidable proportion of the American regular army posted along the border, and the Mexicans realize that any rough work will provoke reprisals. When Villa attacked Juarez in June and was on the brink of capturing it an American general in El Paso rushed a big force of American soldiers across the river and routed him.

It is said in El Paso that this blow did more than anything else to weaken Villa's prestige with his own followers. He had confidently assured them that America would not interfere with his movements against Juarez and other towns on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande. The fact that they did interfere most emphatically has served to discredit him to such an extent that since then he has been able to marshal only a few of his old followers around him.

This may or may not be true. Experience has taught one not to believe all the stories of Villa's extinction. More recent than the Juarez punitive expedition is the one led by Col. Langhorne when he went in search of the bandits who held for ransom the two American aviators, Peterson and Davis.

In consequence of these expeditions, and especially on account of the daily cavalry and air patrols along the entire border, the bandit industry has been transferred to districts farther away from the organized American eye. Catching American consuls down Puebla way is safer and more lucrative.

Marfa is the military headquarters of the Big Bend, and at that central point is stationed Col. J. J. Hornbrook of the 5th cavalry with a mobile force of considerable strength. An air flight also is located at Marfa, under command of Lieut. Railey. Every other day an air patrol goes from Marfa to Presidio, on the Rio Grande, thence down the river to La Jitas, and then back over the mountains to Marfa, a distance of about 200 miles. On alternate days a patrol flies to El Paso and back, scouting the border throughout that 200 miles.

The air patrol work is interesting and hazardous. Much of the country is so mountainous that suitable landing places are scarce. Experience has taught them to land uphill whenever possible. The planes are mottled with the marks of hail storms, and each carries two Marlin machine guns forward and one Lewis machine gun aft.

Through the courtesy of Col. Hornbrook and with the authorization of Gen. Dickman, Capt. J. M. Patterson of THE TRIBUNE and I were permitted to fly over part of the patrolled territory. Of this experience, which was novel and interesting, a detailed account will follow in a later article.

GEORGE ELIOT
by Edith Franklin Wyatt

GEORGE ELIOT was born a century ago in this November. What has made her memorable for a hundred years? What are the qualities in "Amos Barton" and "Adam Bede," in "Silas Marner" and "Middlemarch" and "Daniel Deronda" and "The Mill on the Floss," that have held the wide, wide world of novel readers for three generations?

Every one to his own humor as a novel reader. George Eliot's genius is shown in its most characteristic force, I think, in "The Mill on the Floss." For me the power of this magnificent novel is in its great story of the loves of a woman's lifetime. The rich hearted Maggie Tulliver, her faults, her errors, her humor, her passions and glory, is a creation of immortal genius. From her championship of her brother to her passion for Stephen, her spiritual portrait is wrought from the inmost quality of the force that makes the world go round.

But if the book's power forever is in its tremendous tale of the love of a woman, and its glory, its fame has been for its masterly and moving story of commercial struggle, surely its kingdom is in its inimitable picture of the Dodson sisters, Sister Jean, Sister Pullet, Sister Tulliver and Sister Glegg—bulwarks of the Anglo-Saxon race.

"Other women if they liked might have their best thread-lace in every wash, but when Mrs. Glegg died it would be found that she had better lace laid by in the right hand drawer of her wardrobe in the spotted chamber."

The sisters' ideals of existence, their sterling virtues, and their abominable meanness are like the Rock of Gibraltar in their unchanging, unconscious fixity. Mrs. Tulliver's deathless love for her sprigged chaney tea set and her grief when it is sold at the auction of the Mill, seems to break like the baffled ocean tides against that fixity; and it lends the last hardness to the tragic landscape of the Tullivers' fallen fortunes.

The author's treatment of the rise and fall of those fortunes is peerless. No one else has ever told the story of fluctuating incomes at once so poetically and so very practically, or in a manner so free from all class affiliation; and this novel, her masterpiece, is one of the prides of English letters.

HER own sad fortunes ended she has told us, in her love and sorrows. But she had heard their music in her girlhood down the cold roads of innumerable visits to the poor of her country neighborhood at Coventry. The daughter of a well to do farm-factor, Isaac Evans, the manager of many estates, she had known, too, the ways of the sadness of pain, of sickness and death; had nursed her mother first and then her father through a long last illness.

Coming to London at her father's death, when she was thirty, she learned to know Lewes, whose struggles and unhappiness soon became her own. He has been deserted by his wife; he had forgiven her. She had returned to him only to desert him again with a second lover. A technicality of English law, by a peculiar irony, forbade Lewes' divorce, because of his former mercifulness to her.

It was in these circumstances that he first knew George Eliot, of whom he has said that to know her was to love her, and that she brought him all the good things of his life. Their connection immediately systematized his existence. Before her acquaintance with him George Eliot frequently complains of the wastrous distraction of her energies and those of able women among her friends in a thousand trivial requisitions. Her irregular union had the odd but solid advantage of rescuing her from the mental dissipation civilization demands of the respectable.

Her friendship with the people she most cared for remained lifelong and unchanged. Departing from the conventions of convention and of unconvention alike, the passionate companions have been quite as bitterly upbraided as hypocrites for never twining in their hair such tendrils as the wild loves wear—they had no time for this—as for their unsanctioned devotion. The phenomenon of these lovers in open covenant leading a life of Puritan economy and rigid industry among dictionaries and the more inexpensive of the sacred concerts has been equally confusing to all ex-theorists, to the Cult of the Home, and the Cult of those who go in for having Society loose the reins to Passion. So that it has become customary for the votaries of either faith to take refuge in a rather vague disparagement of George Eliot's genius.

AN unbiased appreciation of this is, perhaps, only possible to members of the vast, unthinking bourgeoisie like the present writer, mentally incapable of a sex-theorom for the globe, reared on the morals of such works as Robinson Crusoe and the Bodley Books, and thus by nature unfitted to regard the facts of George Eliot's life in any other aspect than simply as a human history.

For such a reader her wonderful biography by Cross, and her great novels, have an endless attraction. Every autumn, when the weather changes, there is a time when one's desire to know more about all human histories rises to its utmost height. The first, keen winds of winter the sense of the coming cold and darkness, touch you subtly with the fear of dying before you can ever know much more about your fell creatures, or tell them much of what you know yourself.

At such a time you long to drink insatiably of that fire-hearted vintage of fiction where men and women have poured out immortally their deepest knowledge in the world. You long to read all the great novels you know or don't know. At such a time, as you turn back to "Silas Marner" or "Middlemarch" or "The Mill on the Floss," its truth comes to you like an old friendship with new revelations.

As you gloss the book you wonder what the people who read novels in Chicago will think of "The Mill on the Floss" in another hundred years.

MARSHAL FOCH at HOME
by Mazie E. Clemens

I HAVE never met many soldiers. I mean the real fighting kind. Of course, I had met several in Washington, Philadelphia, and New York, and in their faultlessly pressed khaki, their highly polished leather leggings, their benevolent smiles when they permitted one to approach them just as if one had a right to talk to them had impressed me, but the faith I had builded on my experience began to waver long before I set out to see Marshal Foch in person.

In the first place, Gen. Foch was a foreigner, from my point of view, and in the second place such interviews as he had given out since the armistice had seemed so gruff that I was somewhat doubtful of my reception.

Well, when I went down to his home in Tarbes, Brittany, and saw him, and also Mme. Foch and their little group of grandchildren, I had not been one minute in his presence before all my fears had vanished.

I had a letter of introduction to Mme. Foch, which I presented, and after a wait of but a few moments I was ushered into the sitting room. This room was typical of the whole surroundings. It was a picture of daintiness and simplicity. The sun poured in from two immense windows, which looked out upon a garden, a vista of beauty worthy the brush of an artist. Great red gladioli, variegated dahlias, all shades of roses on stately bushes, and pink hortensias wove themselves into a living tone poem of nature's daintiest gifts. The room itself had for its chief note of color pale pink and white. Chairs and windows were draped in cretonne of these shades. On the walls were hung choice steel engravings and a few painted French landscapes.

MME. FOCH came in and greeted me cordially, and after we had been chatting for a time the door opened suddenly and a man's figure appeared upon the threshold. I recognized the marshal immediately.

He wore a blue serge suit, with a sack coat, lavender cravat, and blue striped shirt. Later, when we went out into the garden, he wore a cap. It was Foch on his vacation, the vacation toward which he had to fight his way against the greatest power ever assembled for four long years. He is a man of medium height, with a long graying mustache. His hair, too, is graying, and is thinned over the forehead and top of the head, but becomes thicker toward the back.

At the moment of his entrance I had been talking to Mme. Foch about bolshevism. She turned to her husband and told him about it, and the conversation immediately jumped to that topic.

"BOLSHEVISM," he said, in his quick, emphatic manner, "is a state of mind under which the peoples of the defeated countries are laboring. The gilded promises made to the people in these countries by the autocratic powers which ruled them, that out of the war they would annex riches, and the failure of these powers to lead the people to the wealth and luxury which they crave, have placed these poor people in a state of demoniacal disillusionment and frenzy, resulting in their killing and destroying everything in their paths in their abject hopelessness.

"This condition," continued the marshal, "is a natural result of the chagrin and disappointment of vanquished militaristic nations. But it is certain this condition will pass. When these people realize that the victors in the war were fighting for a noble and just cause, the salvation of civilization threatened by their selfish masters, they will recognize that the war ended in the only possible way it could have ended, and in the best way for them as well as for the peoples of the other nations of the world. It is just as it is in life. A patient who has been ill, when he passes the crisis, is not yet recovered. He must first pass through a long period of convalescence before he fully recovers his strength and can again fill his proper place in the world."

Seeking to turn the conversation to a more personal trend, I asked, "What was the secret of your great success?"

"What was the secret of 'our' success," repeated the marshal, correcting me. "The secret of our success is the secret of the success of every man who wore the French uniform—a French heart. And it was, in reverse, the secret of the German defeat."

"Tell me just what you mean by that," I asked.

"The secret might be called by different names. The materialists would call it determination. But there was reason, and cause for the determination of the French soldier which made it more effective than that of the German soldier. The German soldier's determination was founded only on materialism. It was devoid of idealism. They have no scruples, respect nothing, and have for their religion a doctrine of gross and brutal materialism. They fought for conquest, for loot, in spoils, in territory, and in power. They lived and acted and fought the material view of their 'Deutschland ueber alles.' The French soldier's determination was based on idealism, on spirituality. They fought in defense of a country they loved, a flag they reverenced, with a lofty idealism the miseducated boche mind could not possibly understand. Germany was the indomitable master. The French soldier fought as a duty to himself, to his children, and his God—and his God was not a helmeted, spur-booted bit of clay.

"France must leave no loophole through which Germany can again attack!" declared the marshal with vehemence. "The dragon's fangs have been drawn, but the body still lives, and is capable of growing new fangs. It is the duty of civilization to see that these fangs shall not be allowed to grow again. For if they do, Germany will strike again, and there will be no peace beyond that backed up by superior force."

Suddenly rising, he offered me his arm. "Come to my study and I will give you the picture you asked for," he said, apparently signifying that the interview was closed. We proceeded to the study, accompanied by Mme. Foch.

His study is typical of the man. Decorated in red, it was a picture of coziness. In the center was a flat topped desk, fairly buried under a mass of letters, telegrams, and legal looking papers, with all sorts of seals. And then I discovered why he had terminated the interview in the sitting room. He wanted to smoke, so you see he is human, after all. After gallantly asking permission, he filled his pipe and lighted it, and we began chatting again.

Then I reluctantly bade them adieu. With the most courtly grace in the world the marshal expressed his felicitations, invited me to visit their town house in Paris, then kissed my hand in farewell.

Chicago Diocese Aids in Episcopal Church Canvass

By the Rev. Frederick L. Gratiot

THE nation-wide campaign for the church's mission of the Episcopal church is well under way in the diocese of Chicago. According to information from the headquarters, it is progressing everywhere.

The purpose of the campaign is two-fold. It is "to inform the minds and awaken the consciences" of the members of the church, and to raise sufficient funds to enable the church to do its work properly.

A budget has been prepared based upon an extensive survey made last summer to determine the immediate needs and opportunities of the church. The budget provides for a three year period, and pledges are being asked covering that time; $42,000,000 is needed to carry on the educational, missionary, and social service program outlined.

Each parish has a committee whose duty it is to call upon members of the church and distribute the literature concerning the campaign. On Dec. 7 an every member canvass will be made for the purpose of enlisting the communicants in some part of the church's work, and obtaining pledges toward the campaign fund.

An interesting element of the budget is the provision of about a million dollars for "Christian Americanization." Centers for social, educational, and evangelistic purposes will be established in many foreign born communities. The purpose is not to win any people from their faith, but to try to reach those who have no church connection.

The church schools have a part in the program. In practically every church on Sunday, Nov. 30, a pageant, "The Builders of the City of God," will be presented. On that day a canvass will be made by "recruiting officers" to increase the enrollment of the schools. The aim is to have 1,000,000 in the schools throughout the country by the end of three years.

At the morning service of the Emerald Avenue Presbyterian church last Sunday O. E. Aleshire made an appeal to the congregation for subscriptions to clear the indebtedness on the church and for funds for a new Bible school building. The pastor, the Rev. Richard D. Hughes, reports that they have several thousand dollars subscribed for the fund.

Next Saturday the feast of St. Cecilia will be observed by Quigley Preparatory seminary, Rush and Pearson streets, by the dedication of the seminary's new pipe organ, recently installed in the chapel.

Next Sunday the Ravenswood Congregational Sunday school will observe its fiftieth anniversary. An interesting program has been arranged by the present superintendent, C. B. Aldrich. The Rev. J. Morriston Thoman is the pastor of the church.

The Rev. C. E. Hoffsten was installed as pastor of the Grace English Lutheran church, Seventieth street and Union avenue, on Nov. 1, which was also the tenth anniversary of the church. Mr. Hoffsten served as western field secretary of the national Lutheran commission for soldiers and sailors' welfare during the war, visiting practically every camp west of Chicago. He has been pastor of churches in Rock Island, Ill., New York City, and Chicago. He was actively interested in the recent biennial convention of the Lutheran Brotherhood of America, not only being on various committees but delivering one of the chief addresses.

The Rev. Ernest F. Tittle of the First Methodist church, Evanston, will speak on "The Church and the New Day" at the annual reception and banquet of the Methodist Old Folks' home, to be held at the La Salle hotel on Monday, Nov. 24. The reception takes place at 6 o'clock. This gathering is usually one of the most representative of the Methodists in the city.

It is possible that Chicago will become the center from which the Roman Catholic church in America will conduct her newly organized missionary work. Heretofore there have been several independent voluntary missionary organizations which supported America's missionary work in various parts, each society going ahead with no regard for what was being done by the other. Recently in Washington the Catholic Welfare society, which eventually will include all the missionary societies in one, was organized. The temporary head is Mgr. Francis J. Kelley, president of the Catholic Extension society, with headquarters in Chicago. The first meeting of the American board of Catholic missions was held at the residence of Archbishop Mundelein last week.

John Elder of the McCormick Theological seminary has just returned from a two year tour of Russia and the near east, and will give his impressions of the war ridden countries he visited at the Fourth Presbyterian church, Lake Shore drive and Delaware place, this afternoon at the 4 o'clock vesper service. He witnessed the worst of the massacres of Armenians by the Turks. He is speaking under the auspices of the Chicago committee for Armenian and Syrian relief. Before going across Mr. Elder assisted the Rev. John Timothy Stone, D. D., pastor of Fourth church.

Grace Evangelical Lutheran church, Oak Park, has been reopened after being newly decorated and celebrates today its seventeenth anniversary. The Rev. H. C. Engelbrecht is pastor.

Thanksgiving Offer

One Dessert Free

A Real-Fruit Dessert For Six People

Pineapple Juice

Comes condensed in a bottle in Pineapple Jiffy-Jell. We use the juice of half a Pineapple to flavor a pint dessert

Loganberry Juice

Comes condensed in a vial in Loganberry Jiffy-Jell. You get the juice of many berries in a pint dessert

This is an offer to buy you this week a Jiffy-Jell dessert for six people.

Many housewives don't know what Jiffy-Jell means to them. They know the old-style quick desserts, but not the new.

Jiffy-Jell brings you real-fruit flavors—not the artificial. Each package contains a bottle of fruit juice condensed.

We crush the real fruit, and much of it, to flavor a Jiffy-Jell dessert. A Jiffy-Jell dainty seems filled with fruit. Here you get fresh-fruit delights. And you get its healthful acids, needed every day.

Try One Fruit Free

Present the coupon to your grocer this week. Buy two packages of any flavor and he will give you a full-size package of Jiffy-Jell in Loganberry or Pineapple flavor free. We will pay him for the free package. This will give you three packages for the price of two.

Jiffy-Jell comes in many fruit flavors, but the choicest are Loganberry and Pineapple. You will find in each package a bottle of the fruit-juice flavor in liquid form, condensed.

The Jiffy-Jell mixture is ready-sweetened, acidulated and in proper color. Simply add a pint of water as directed on the package, then the flavor from the vial, and let cool.

See what you get—a real-fruit dessert for six people. It will have a wealth of fruit. It will change your whole conception of quick gelatine desserts.

Note that this offer is made on two flavors—on Loganberry and Pineapple only. Your grocer has no right to offer another. We want you to know Jiffy-Jell at its best.

Then always remember that this real-fruit dainty is ever at your command. It will bring you the joys of real fruit. And it will cost you, when you buy it, only a few cents per dinner. It will cost you less than the fruit alone which we use to make the flavor.

This offer is for this week only. Cut out the coupon now. If your grocer lacks the flavors mentioned, go to another store.

Pillsbury's Best Flour

Pillsbury's Best Flour for generations has been recognized throughout the world as the highest quality all-purpose flour. Actual baking tests and hourly laboratory inspections safeguard its uniformity.

Out of the great Pillsbury laboratory and the immense flour mills, one by one, have come new products, until today we have Pillsbury's Family of Foods.

Pillsbury's Pancake Flour

a self-rising Pancake Flour with a distinctly new flavor, was thoroughly tried and tested by the Pillsbury laboratory and by competent housewives before being placed on the market. To prepare pancakes from Pillsbury's Pancake Flour, you have only to add water, mix thoroughly and your batter is ready to be turned into delicious golden brown pancakes.

Pillsbury's Wheat Cereal

another quality product belonging to Pillsbury's Family of Foods, comes from the heart of the wheat kernel. Because of the care that Pillsbury takes in preparing and milling wheat, you are assured of a first quality breakfast-food that is delicious and healthful. It suits the most discriminating taste, and measures up to the needs of the worker, the invalid, the child, or the baby who is being fed its first solid food.

Pillsbury's Health Bran

a wholesome healthful food, and a splendid natural laxative, makes delicious muffins, bread and cookies. It is a carefully selected Bran, thoroughly sterilized and packed in air-tight cartons. Pillsbury's Health Bran is recommended by the leading physicians, as it contains many elements such as iron, lime, phosphorous and vitamins so necessary in the work of construction that is being continuously carried on by the human system.

Pillsbury's Rye, Graham and Durum Flours are milled with the same care that characterizes the milling of Pillsbury's Wheat Flours.

Section of a phonograph emporium. In this first compartment the Bowie family, who have just purchased a talking machine, are selecting records. At the present moment they are listening to the sextet from "Lucia." They have been in the booth twenty-five minutes and the temperature is all of 110 degrees. Next door a lady of sentimental temperament is trying out "The Little Gray Home in the West." In the third compartment "Cohen on the Telephone" is going strong with Mr. Joe Keeny and his friend Herb Raty.

AMONG US MORTALS

The Phonograph Shop

By W. E. HILL

(Copyright, 1919, N Tribune Inc.)

Doris, whose habitat is a two by four apartment, is planning to have the bunch around next week, and it may be well to get a few new fox trot records, for of course they'll want to dance.

The "Mavourneen" talking machine has the added attraction of looking like the last thing you'd expect it to be. There is the "Louis the Fourteenth Ice Box Model" and the "Florentine Hatrack Model." Here we see Mrs. Roebuck and daughter Mabel perfectly entranced with something that looks like a boudoir dressing table, but is nothing more nor less than a "Mavourneen Talking Machine, Boudoir Model."

"I want a doll,
I want a bab-ee doll to play with me,
Just like the dollies
They have in the Follies"——

Ed had about decided on a Kreisler violin solo for the little wife's birthday; still, who knows but what a nice song like "I Want a Doll" wouldn't please her more in the end?

Mrs. Beeson knows perfectly well she ought to like the Rachmaninoff "Prelude." If only Beeson weren't there urging her to can them funeral pieces and get some good jazz and come on to lunch.

Officer Hennessy stops in on the way home to hear a brand new record of "Wearing of the Green."

Mrs. Doss is so fond of a phonograph. In fact, she much prefers hearing the voice on the phonograph record than the voice itself.

The lady who would like to exchange the record she purchased last week. "It has a scratch which I'm positive was on it when you sold it to me!"

Miss France is studying classic dancing and wants a record of "The Unfinished Symphony" for the new dance fantasy, "Joy, Hate and Animosity." The salesman is awfully sorry he hasn't that record in stock, but if Miss France will only let him try "That's the Kind of a Baby for Me," he is positive she'll find it is just the thing for her!

THE THEATERS

By Percy Hammond

LET us, this morning, wonder why the actors and those who manage them are prone to scorn, if not to ridicule, the playgoers in cities of under a million inhabitants.

The matter is less mysterious than most conditions in the theater, and possibly it is of small concern to the sophisticated patrons of this urban department. But at the Blackstone the other evening Mr. Arliss so definitely split the sheep of the metropolises from the goats of the minor centers that we shall have to leave out an advertisement or two while we talk it over. The white paper necessary to the investigation will consume only an acre or so of Canadian forest; and there is a wicked satisfaction in reducing a haughty cedar to a polysyllable. The woodman cuts the sappy bough and it eventuates in one crimson vowel, an atom in the discussion of Mr. Arliss' opinion of Louisville, Kentucky.

Having played three nights in Louisville, Mr. Arliss confessed to Chicago that he was glad once more to appear before "human beings." He called it a dog town. Mr. Arliss is a sincere man and his disparagements are not lightly to be considered. He really believes that the people of Chicago are more attuned to the refined and delicate pleasures of the drama than are the inhabitants of Louisville. But why? Kentuckians, like the great Jew, have hands, organs, dimensions, passions (so I am told), and, moreover, they have gone to Harvard and Cornell and they have a library and two race tracks. At least one gambling house is present there, and a hospital, and the Pendennis club, in which life is discussed as fully as it is in the Illinois Athletic or the Union League.

Why should they not keep step to life's strange irregularities as rythmically as those who live in Randolph and in whatever is the bright street in Philadelphia or Boston. I am told by the lady who sits next to me that in Louisville they haven't had the experience of original New York casts, and I reply that perhaps that is better for them. There is nothing worse, is there, than a New York cast? Nothing except a Chicago cast.

Besides, such good acting as that of Mr. Arliss is not to be compared to other acting, but to life itself. We say of him that he is "like" Jacques Duval, if we believe that to be the case, and we judge his performance by what we know, or suspect we know, of preoccupied lung doctors, not by what we know of actors. Certainly persons resident in Louisville are as well qualified to examine his acute study of medical enthusiasm as are we whose numbers are larger. Irresolute wives, tuberculosis, cold husbands, serums, and lovers are known to the blue grasses, as they are to the pseudo-capitals. There are romance and tragedy in Spoonriver, and God's fingers write fairy tales for Omaha as well as for Long Island.

It has been said that Mr. Arliss is "like" Jacques Duval. To be "like," in a play, is, in my timid opinion, to be a good actor. Prosperous players contend that to be "unlike" is the formula of success—but, nevertheless, there are some good actors who are popular. Mr. Arliss belongs to that patrician band. He is assigned to a character and he plays it with a fidelity sometimes cruel. After all the disturbances in "Jacques Duval," for instance, when the doctor and his gorgeous wife get together in their last act embrace, you feel that as he looks out over her white shoulder he sees a germ; and that if there were another act he would be neglecting her in a pursuit of it.

Mr. Arliss in the characterization of his scientist is cross and casual and staccato. Disease is to him a fault more hideous than his wife's unchastity. Rather than have his cure impugned, he would sacrifice her good name and his own self-respect. When her lover dies under his ministration he asks her to admit a sin uncommitted, so that he may claim that he murdered his patient instead of failing to cure him.

"Men are nothing," he says, "man is everything." So the conflict is less human than bacterial. It is a battle between germ and germicide. The play bored me, because it is so badly contrived. Conventions and the lovely Miss Risdon are sacrificed in a vague pulmonary clinic, and a lover with a cough is, in these athletic times, no good. But Mr. Arliss' honest art fascinates, and he manages pretty well to combine in an interesting affluvia the odors of honeysuckle and iodoform. The attendance at the Blackstone is large and veberent.

Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson is to discourse on Shakespeare and his plays and characters at Orchestra Hall, Nov. 21 and 28 and Dec. 5. His appearance will be in the nature of a recital, including comment and impersonation, and his subjects will be "Shakespeare and His Art, "The Prose of Shakespeare, and Hamlet in Particular," and "'Macbeth,' 'Othello,' and 'King Lear.'"

B. Iden Payne is now superintending Miss Billie Burke's rehearsals in "Caesar's Wife."—Fred Latham and his wife, Cynthia Brooks, having suddenly defected.

The name of Miss Laurette Taylor's new play is "One Night in Rome," and the author of it is J. Hartley Manners. Miss Taylor's rôle will be serious and Italian.

Miss Virginia Brooks, after a few performances as leading actress in the Chicago "Civilian Clothes" company exits to make way for Miss Dorothy Dickson.

Mr. Mantell will appear as Brutus in "Julius Cæsar" tomorrow night at the Olympic for the first time in four years. Antony will be played by Fritz Lieber. Other performances of "Julius Cæsar" will be given Friday and Saturday nights and Saturday afternoon.

Miss Marie Dressler, who was the lady Gompers of the recent chorus girls' rebellion, will follow Mr. Mantell at the Olympic next Sunday night in "Tillie's Nightmare," an operetta in which she performed some ten years ago. The name of Miss Dressler's rôle is Tillie Blobbs.

Stuart Walker is about to footlight another Saturday Evening Post hero in "Piccadilly Jim," by P. J. Wodehouse and Guy Bolton. Gregory Kelly will have the title rôle, being available because a revision of "Hashimura Togo" is necessary before it can be produced.

"Ladies First," in which Miss Nora Bayes will sing tonight at the Cort, is a version of Hoyt's "A Contented Woman," with verses by Edgar Smith and music by A. Baldwin Sloane. Irving Lewis is first aid to the star.

Jack Lait wires from Terre Haute that Miss Valeska Surratt plays his new play, "Scarlet and White," exactly as he would have it played, and that its first audience, in Miss Surratt's "home town," was enthusiastic over it. Jo Swerling is Mr. Lait's collaborator in the work. It will come to Chicago when a vacant theater can be found. In Miss Surratt's company is Miss Lucy Weston, the English comedienne, who used to sing sly songs in vaudeville.

After Fred Stone has finished his two weeks' engagement in "Jack o'Lantern" at the Colonial, "La La Lucille" will visit that theater with Sam B. Hardy at the top of the cast.

"Rough Stuff" in Musical Comedies

By Burns Mantle

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—There was a time, as Lewis Morrison was wont to asseverate in his production of the dramatized "Faust," when the devil wore horns and a tail, but time has worn them all away. There was a time when theatrically to the pure in heart all things bearing the name of burlesque were impure. Then wives watched their husbands when they went out o' nights, fearful lest they ditch the lodge meeting and buy a couple of front row seats for Sam T. Jack's wicked entertainment, in which the ensemble of marching Amazons wore nothing more concealing than thick cotton tights, padded trunks, and a tight fitting corsage extending from what was left of their curving waists to well above the danger, or pneumonia, line.

Those were, as the head of the family may still insist, the good old days when the chorus was selected on the hoof, and the comedian who pointed his humor with anything less effective than a hatchet was considered an effeminate weakling and a disgrace to his profession.

Somewhere the old time burlesque troupers may still flourish. We see occasional references on the billboards to the imminent approach of "Billy Watson's Beef Trust," and these are at least reminiscent. But not on Broadway. Not, at least, as burlesque troupers. All our burlesque we get in the so-called legitimate musical comedies these days, and compared with the tolerated indecencies of some of our singers, dancers, comedians, and authors, the old time burlesquers appear as hesitant saints standing on the threshold of hell wondering how far they might safely venture in. The "jazz" epidemic is responsible—that and the changed attitude of the playgoing public toward the disrobed and disrobing female.

The theater district of New York has one recognized "home of burlesque." It is the Columbia, and is, they tell me, an important spoke in the so-called burlesque wheel. Also it looks like a burlesque theater. Outside its doors there is the familiar display of policegazette art revealing the superior muscular development the Steinway sisters have inherited from a long line of safe-moving ancestors. And other views of popular comedians wearing vapid smiles and scattered teeth. But last week I investigated this theater and I give you my word the entertainment there was by comparison mild and moral and much more fully clothed than it is in any one of half a dozen other "first class" Broadway houses.

Across Broadway from the Columbia is the new Central theater, and in the new Central there was presented last week a musicalised version of "The Blue Mouse," a sprightly farce that once was fathered by its author, Clyde Fitch, and successfully played by the late Mabel Barrison. The new version is entitled "The Little Blue Devil," and through it the rough stuff of the old time burlesque show runs wild. It is Broadwayish to the last and only snap on Lillian Lorraine's gown, and as cheap and as common in song and jest as anything the producers of "Legomania" could have thought of in the old days.

The intrigue here is that of an ambitious secretary to the president of a railroad company. He has noticed that his employer is fond of flirting with his employés' wives, and that the prettier they are the more ardent his attentions. Also it is the employés with the most flirtatious wives that secure the best promotions. To meet this competition he engages a tough little dancer with a good heart to pose as his wife and win the favor of the old philanderer. Let her compromise him if she can; the greater the compromise the better the new job.

The succeeding complications are obvious. Lillian Lorraine, who has no difficulty impersonating the hard-voiced lady of the title, plays opposite Bernard Granville as the secretary. The first night crowd, a bit fed up on this sort of thing, was not particularly responsive to anything but the excellently staged dancing numbers. But they were selling standing room all week. "It is the reaction from the war," they tell us.

The Provincetown Players, the most consistent of the "little theater" groups hereabouts, in that for six seasons the organization has maintained itself and held to its original purpose of producing original works in simple fashion, in a simple theater for a simple fee, has begun its new season career.

"Rough Stuff" in Musical Comedy

In its home at 133 McDougall street, which is an old carriage house and stable in Greenwich village made into a theater seating possibly 200 persons, the Players are offering four short plays, and the neighbors, though not crowding or jostling each other in a frenzied effort to get in, are attending in goodly numbers.

The bill is hardly representative, because of the four plays no one stands out as a worthy or even a promising achievement, and usually this is not the case. The best of the four is an incidental character sketch by James O'Neill's son, the gifted Eugene, called "The Dreamy Kid." It is a story of colored people, and is played by colored actors. An aged "mammy" is on her death bed, calling piteously for her favorite grandchild, whom as a babe she had nicknamed "Dreamy." Unknown to her "Dreamy" has grown into a tough boy and the police are searching for him that minute. The night before he had "croaked a guy" and the electric chair looms large in his immediate future.

Partly through courage, and partly through superstitious fear, he comes to see the moaning mammy before she passes out, and once there he is afraid to leave her so long as she lives for fear he "won't never have no luck ag'in" if he does. He barricades the door and kneels by the bedside and the curtain falls on the old lady accepting his muttered curses as a part of his prayer for the deliverance of her soul.

Forty-five years ago this month James McIntyre and Thomas Heath met for the first time in San Antonio, Tex. Each had a different dancing partner at that time, but neither was happy in the association, so they decided to "join up" and form a new team. They have played together continuously since that time and are still at it, being the stars of a musical comedy now at the Forty-fourth street theater, called "Hello, Alexander." They are old men now, past 70, but neither too old to play nor too tired to have a party.

On Wednesday, the 12th, their anniversary was celebrated. From the byways of the town and the suburbs twenty veteran minstrels were gathered in. They included the oldest living blackface comedian, Fred Wilson, who is 92 and still light on his feet. From the Actors' home on Staten island fifteen other veterans were brought in, and after they had attended the matinée were motored over to the National Vaudeville club and given a dinner.

McIntyre and Heath, according to the record, were the first vaudeville team booked by the late B. F. Keith when he established his theater in Boston thirty-five years ago. For the next thirty years they practically played but one sketch, "The Georgia Minstrels," with the pompous Henry making game of the trusting Alexander, whom he had lured from a perfectly good job in a livery stable to go atouring "the world for to see." They have entertained the playgoers of two generations with that sketch, and certainly have earned their anniversary dinner and all the speeches that went with it.

To Show You What Clean Teeth Mean

All Statements Approved by High Dental Authorities

Look Now

See how the teeth's whiteness is dimmed by film. Perhaps tartar has formed in some places.

Look Later

See how the teeth have whitened—how the film has disappeared.

This is to offer you a 10-Day Tube of Pepsodent—the pepsin tooth paste which combats the film.

Able authorities have proved the product by clinical and laboratory tests. The results are beyond any question. Leading dentists everywhere are now urging its adoption.

We ask you to prove it by a 10-day test. Do this for your sake and your children's sake. See for yourself how it will help you to cleaner and whiter teeth.

Film Wrecks the Teeth

That slimy film which you feel on your teeth causes most tooth troubles. Every modern dentist knows that. And for years dental science has sought a way to combat it.

Film is what discolors—not the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Now science knows a way to combat it. The way is embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. It is now used daily on millions of teeth, largely by dental advice. To those who don't know it we supply a free tube, so they may find it out.

Old Ways Don't End It

This film is clinging. It enters crevices and stays. The tooth brush doesn't end it. The ordinary tooth paste does not dissolve it. That's why millions find that well-brushed teeth discolor and decay.

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to constantly combat it.

But pepsin must be activated, and the usual agent is an acid harmful to the teeth. So this method long seemed barred. Now science has found a harmless activating method, and teeth can now be daily cleaned as they never were before.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the slimy film. See how teeth whiten as the fixed film disappears.

This means more than pretty teeth. Compare your teeth now with your teeth in ten days and decide what is right for yourself. Cut out the coupon now.

Pepsodent REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

The New-Day Dentifrice

A scientific film combatant, based on activated pepsin, now advised for daily use by leading dentists everywhere.

MUSIC AND THE MUSICIANS

Cupid Plays Part in Plots of All Successful Operas

By W. L. Hubbard

MR. CAMPANINI was in thoughtful mood.

"Grand opera anxieties, maestro?" I asked.

He smiled the kindly smile that is his, shrugged his shoulders slightly, and replied, "No, no anxieties. Our season opens next Tuesday night, and while we now are coming into the final crush that is inseparable from last days before a season begins, yet there is no cause for anxiety. The repertory is fixed, the singers are here, scenery, costumes, and properties are ready, rehearsals are going well, and unless the unforeseen happens, the first week should move easily and smoothly. The unforeseen may come, but if it does arise we shall attend to it. It will not be the first time we have met it. No use being anxious, however, until it is actually here.

"No," continued the general director, "I was not indulging in anxiety. I was thinking about—love!"

I stood in doubt as to the advisability of pursuing such inquiry further, and Mr. Campanini, noting the doubt, continued: "I was thinking about love as the motive power back of every successful opera. No matter to what school an operatic composer may belong, no matter how much his music may differ from that of his predecessors or contemporaries, he will always be found obeying the apparently inflexible law for making opera successful—and successful means interesting—namely, having a love plot form the main theme of his libretto.

"A Wagnerian hero usually requires from three-quarters of an hour to an hour of substantial music wherein to make up his mind to kiss the heroine. The Latin composers are apt to start with a kiss and charm the audience with their golden melodies afterwards. But no matter how soon or how long the kiss be delayed or indulged in, it is love's old yet eternally young story that makes the world of grand opera go round. Now and again we find a composer eschewing love between two humans as a central idea, and substituting love for country or love based on respect or devotion as the motive. But I do not recall any such opera having held enduring place in the public's favor.

"It matters not whether this operatic love be of the purest or of the lowest kind, it is nevertheless the mysterious force which is able to make a human being climb immeasurable heights or drop into bottomless depths because of love for one of opposite sex, which seems to rouse the brain and heart of a composer to the giving forth of the best that is in him. Take, for example, the novelties which we are to present this season. In them we will find love presented from as many angles as there are operas. But no matter the angle, it is always love that is the basic idea and motive power.

"'La Nave,' Montemezzi's new opera with which we are to open our season next Tuesday night, pictures a love that in its effect resembles nothing so much as a giant poisonous weed which intoxicates the brain and suffocates the soul. It deals with a love that lacks nobility of idealism, that is steeped in the cravings of blind passion; in a word, a love that defeats itself because of its lack of a higher purpose. In 'Jacquerie,' the work of another young genius of Italy, Marinuzzi, we still have to do with passionate love, but it is a love that seems to live even beyond the grave, though it is elemental in its fury and simple in its purely physical attributes.

"In the new Puccini operas we find love treated from three entirely different angles. In 'The Cloak' we see an old man's love coming to grief when youth asserts itself; in 'Sister Angelica' a love that is so deep and true that it counts sacrifice a duty; in 'Gianni Schicchi' the moral that all the world loves young and happy lovers.

DRAMATIC SOPRANO
APEDA PHOTO

Miss Langenhan sings this afternoon in Woods' theater in a concert given by the Chicago Woman's Musical club.

"In the French novelties love has less of a psychological and more of earthly character. Erlanger's 'Aphrodite' disregards completely the axiom that beauty is only skin deep and builds tragedy on the purely physical attraction of man and woman for each other. The 'Mme. Chrysanthemum' of Messager deals with the butterfly like activities of a pleasure seeking male and a careless, trouble free geisha, both of whom accept philosophically the fact that all joy is of but passing nature. Ravel's 'Spanish Hour' treats the subject from the same point of view, except that it is a woman instead of the man who plays the butterfly.

"Prokofieff in his 'Love for the Three Oranges' propounds the idea that the simplest love is a cure-all ingredient in human life, and 'Rip Van Winkle' of De Koven makes love a pastoral of happiness.

"The same tendency to build dramatic action around man and woman love is found in the two ballets we are to produce this season. In Borowski's 'Boudour' love is found ready to descend to criminal depths under the guise of passion and becomes a love which destroys and the wages of which is death. On the other hand, Carpenter's 'The Birthday of the Infanta' has the pathos of love as its central idea, but it is a pathos which surrounds hopelessness with the aura of the sheer joy of loving.

"Thus much for our novelties," continued Mr. Campanini. "As for our revivals the same law obtains. Massenet's 'Herodiade' revels in presenting unholiest love based on the lowest of instincts, while Debussy's 'Pelleas and Melisande' gives us the very poesy of love. 'Manon Lescaut' is love tainted by mercenary motives, while 'The Jewess' shows us love that transforms the human heart into a holy shrine. In Bellini's 'Norma' love becomes a law unto itself, in 'Fedora' love's attempt to usurp all power meets with dire failure, and is smothered in remorse.

"Love is laughed at in Mozart's 'Don Giovanni' because it is deprived of basic earnestness, while in Verdi's 'Masked Ball' this same earnestness is elevated to the heights of tragedy. 'Falstaff' is the epitome of love's humor; 'The Love of Three Kings,' on the other hand, makes love cover the world with a pall of sadness, and Bellini's 'Sonnambula' shows jealousy as an eternal accompaniment of love.

"Thus we could continue indefinitely, for there is no limit to human ingenuity in developing love plots and love itself has an endless array of disguises. We must admit, however," continued Mr. Campanini, "that operatic composers have thus far kept pace with all love's changing aspects, and our offering this season shows us their skill and gives us love in manifold and interesting manifestations."

The operatic interest of the week centers in the first hearing outside of Milan of Montemezzi's latest opera, "La Nave" ("The Ship"). All who have enjoyed and admired the rare musical beauty and the intense tragic strength of the same composer's "Love of the Three Kings" can but await with keen expectancy acquaintance with this new score. No figure in the young Italian music world looms so large and promising as does he, and Chicago counts itself fortunate in being accorded opportunity to hear his latest creation first of any city outside of Italy.

"The Ship" was produced at La Scala, Milan, Nov. 3 of last year and scored success. It is founded on the tragedy by D'Annunzio, and Montemezzi frankly admits that his composing of the opera was his offering to the war spirit of Italy. He entered the war as soldier, but his colonel thought that the young composer could accomplish more by setting the D'Annunzio drama to music than he could on the battlefield.

Montemezzi had considered the drama as operatic text as long ago as 1913, when his "Love of Three Kings" had been produced. Hhe found the original drama too long, however, and put it aside. When the war came and Italy entered the lists in May, 1915, he undertook the composition of his score, and he regards it, as did D'Annunzio the original play, as voicing the spirit of Italy and her mastery of the Adriatic.

"La Nave" is in a prologue and three episodes, and deals allegorically with Venice and her maritime power during the sixth century, the action taking place in the year 552. The human tragedy, however, has to do with two feuded families, the Faledri nobles and the commoners, the Gratici. The prologue shows a public place in Venice. Crowds of workmen are busied on the new cathedral, on the docks, and on the covered walks. Into the square comes Orso Faledro, followed by his four sons. He curses the Gratici, who have punished him and his sons by plucking out their eyes, and hurls maledictions on the people.

A ship approaches. Basiliola daughter of Orso, enters. Her brothers hide their faces in their cloaks, that their blindness may not be seen. Basiliola pretends to be resigned to her fate, but secretly plots the destruction of the Gratici. The ship lands, and the brothers Gratici, Marco and Sergio, appear amid acclamations of the people. Marco tells of the distant shores they have visited, of the overthrow of the barbarians and the pirates, and of the holy relics they have recovered and now bring for the cathedral. Marco is made tribune, and Sergio bishop. Basiliola comes forward and dances before Marco. She dances until, laughing and sobbing, she falls into semidelirium, while the people curse her for her shamelessness.

Episode one shows a wooded knoll near the dike that holds back the sea. On the knoll is a deep hole wherein are confined all who have dared insult Basiliola. Basiliola comes, and the prisoners beg her to kill them. She laughs at them, when Traba, the monk, appears and prophesies her ruin. Marco intervenes, and, although he realizes Basiliola's baleful influence, he turns again to her, and she, throwing aside her tunic and clad only in veils, dances before him and maddens him by painting for him dreams of greatness and triumph when he sails away to conquer the world.

In episode two Basiliola has bewitched the other brother, Sergio. We see them together in the cathedral, he being intoxicated. The people demand the return of their creed and that Basiliola, the corrupter of the church, be exiled. She fascinates the men by her beauty, and as Marco arrives she gives Sergio a sword and bids him fight his brother. The brothers fight, and Sergio is slain. Marco, sobered by the deed, stays the avenging hand of the people and bids Basiliola be bound to the altar of the Fighters of the Sea, there to await her punishment. He goes forth to prepare the ships for battle.

In the last episode the huge ship is seen ready to sail forth on the Adriatic. The people sing hymns, but Basiliola

STRONG FOR THEIR FAVORITES

By Mae Tinée.

As regards the "movies" the day of the youngster is certainly at hand. A movie mania has seized the school children and they are hotfoot on the trail of pictures of and information regarding their favorites.

The mails are heavy with requests from youthful and ardent admirers for autographed photographs. Do the little beggars inclose quarters? To my personal knowledge they do not. With the beautiful faith of childhood they ask, secure in the belief that they will receive. And I have discovered that the stars are kind and rarely refuse to grant such favors.

We older people think we know a lot about the movies and the people who make them. But I'm here to tell you that if you ever "knock" the darling of any young hopeful in your circle of acquaintance you're in for an argument which, when finished, is apt to leave you decidedly worsted. For after you have said your say, which you think to be a good say, your mouth is closed forever by the opinion delivered with contemptuous emphasis:

"Aw, you're jealous—that's what's the matter with you!"

In small hordes the youngsters patronize neighboring theaters when an adored one is there appearing. And they're no quiet audiences. They shriek with delight when their hero puts one over. They hiss the villain who would work his undoing. They cheer the rescuers.

O, some audience is the younger generation when, say, Wallace Reid shows up.

Speaking of the children who go to see the pictures reminds me of a little poem which appeared in a recent number of a California publication devoted to the doings of film folks. It is dedicated to the children in the pictures. Don't know who wrote it, but I enjoyed reading it and think maybe you would like me to pass it on to you. Here it is:

They're only men and women folk in third or quarter sizes;
They bring rich humor to the screen—and pathos—and surprises.
They put the "touches" in the play—the most important factors—
But they're not "made" by smiles and curls—those kids are always actors.

They're handicapped right at the start—there's no director's backing;
They haven't got a friend at court—experience is lacking.
They haven't written books or songs; they never played as supers—
And they're not "made" by being "nice"—those kids are always troupers.

They never bring a letter file to show a ton of clippings;
The only records they can show are welts, perhaps, of whippings.
They can't bring letters from "the boss," then revel in the clover—
For what they get is theirs by right—they've got to put it over.

They never yowl about their art; they're only kids—they know it;
That's why the public welcomes them—they're kids, and always show it.
O, I am strong for Screenland's kins—may they go on forever—
You've got to give them what is due—the little imps are clever.

Pearl White has been giving considerable attention to the diet of the six biggest turkeys now leading an unsuspecting existence at her farm on Long Island. When the doomed birds reach a certain weight they will be shipped to the Fox studio in Hollywood, Cal., as a tribute from Pearlie to her fellow stars.

It is said that Francis X. Bushman is to sell his country home in Maryland for a sum reported to be near the $100,000 mark.

May Murray, Alma Rubens, and Lucy Cotton will soon be seen in Cosmopolitan productions.

It is reported that C. Gardner Sullivan, one of the best of the scenario writers, has been given a roving commission by Thomas H. Ince and for two years will leisurely inspect the world at large. He will browse wherever fancy dictates in the search of material for feature pictures. May a kind fate lead him to pastures green.

Well, Mabel Normand's all signed up again with Goldwyn.

They say that Miss Catherine Curtis, star of Harold Bell Wright's picture, "Shepherd of the Hills," is "averse to being called a star." Well may she be. And a wise lady she so proves herself. She canna act.

One of Geraldine Farrar's last acts at the Goldwyn studios before leaving for her song season was to buy a hand-carved western hunting side saddle from Walter Cameron, Goldwyn's ace cowboy. This saddle has a buckskin coated seat and is decorated with silver inlay and trappings. It is the saddle used by Miss Farrar in Cody, Wyo., during the production of "The Hell Cat."

Miss Gladys Hulette in "TEA FOR THREE" LA SALLE. PHOTO-PROPERTY

Miss Knorr in "Tea for Three" acts the sophisticated heroine of that delectable triangle. Like her predecessor, Miss Margaret Lawrence, she is smart and not too sweet, and the comedy does not suffer by her presence.

Ask Me! Ask Me!

E. M. E.: Glad to help you out any time I can. You can reach your favorites as follows: Gloria Hope, 1423 Curzon avenue, Hollywood, Cal.; Douglas McLean, 406 Alvarado street, Los Angeles, Cal.; Billie Burke, Famous Players, 128 West Fifty-sixth street, New York. I'm sorry to tell you that Billy Mason died recently.

AN ADMIRER: No, I'm glad to be able to tell you that William S. Hart has not retired from the screen. The name of his next picture will be "John Petticoats."

IRENE AND RAY: Yes, Gertrude Selby is now Mrs. Netcher. She was born in Philadelphia in 1896 and educated in New York. She was on the stage in musical comedy, vaudeville, and stock, and danced with Gertrude Hoffman. She started her screen career with Universal. Since then, she has been with Fox, Pathe, and several other companies. You're entirely welcome.

R. K. I.: The Dorothy Phillips picture to which you refer was called "The Heart of Humanity."

Mrs. C. O. R.: Related to Theodore Roberts by any chance? He was born in San Francisco in 1861 and has been on the stage since 1880, playing at various times with W. H. Crane, Stuart Robson, Fannie Davenport, James K. Hackett, and Bertha Kalich. If you will write to him in care of Lasky, Hollywood, Cal., I'm sure he will receive your letter. And now about Robert McKim. He was born in San Jacinto, Cal., in 1887. Educated in San Francisco. He was on the stage for some time. He's 6 feet tall, weighs 175 pounds, and has black hair and brown eyes. They usually utilize him as a villain in the pictures.

CHECKERS.: We forwarded your letter to Mr. Powell and were glad to oblige you. Go ahead and call me Mae if you want to. I don't mind. Wanda Hawley is with Paramount, Hollywood, Cal. Wallace Reid is with Lasky, Hollywood. So is Harrison Ford. Address Gloria Swanson in care of Paramount. Richard Barthelmiess will receive a letter if sent to him in care of D. W. Griffith, 729 Seventh avenue, New York. Norma Talmadge may be reached at 140 West Forty-second street, New York. People who like to write letters are the most satisfactory correspondents. I'm mighty glad you've put yours on my list.

J. D. G.: Mr. G., I am not hedging. But to change the subject, what an expensive name you have. Also, what beautiful typewriting you use on me.

M. A.: I am told that "When Bearcat Went Dry" was staged in California.

MUSIC AND THE MUSICIANS

is chained to the pagan altar. Marco goes forth to do penance for the killing of his brother. He will be accompanied by workmen of all kinds, and his voyage will be one of victory. Basiliola, seeing herself neglected, makes a last effort to win back Marco and save her life. But the captain suggests she be nailed to the prow of the ship. She shouts that she has never done anything she has not pleased to do. "My face was not coined in Roman gold, but it shall be imprinted on the flames." She casts herself into the burning brazier as the ship slowly glides forth on the waters.

"The Ship" will be presented Tuesday night, Mr. Montemezzi conducting. Rosa Raisa will sing the rôle of Basiliola; Dolci, the Marco; Rimini, the Sergio, and Arimondi, the Orso. On Wednesday evening "Mme. Butterfly" will be the bill, the cast including Tamaki Miura, as Cio-Cio-San; Irene Pavlowska, as Suzuki; Lamont, as Pinkerton, and Baklanoff, as Sharpless. Thursday evening will be devoted to "Fedora," which will be done for the first time here with Dorothy Jardon in the title rôle and Edward Johnson, the new tenor, as Loris. Following "Fedora" will be revealed for the first time on any stage the ballet "Boudour," by Felix Borowski. The ballet is in the hands of Favley and Oukrainsky, and effects of uncommon beauty are promised. Friday evening "The Masked Ball" will be revived, and will bring to first hearing here Carlo Galeffi, one new baritone; Borghild Langaard, Scandinavian soprano, as Amelia; Lilian Eubank, as Ulrica, and Alessandro Bonci, as Riccardo. Saturday afternoon "Norma," which has not been heard here in many years, will be the matinée attraction, Rosa Raisa assuming the title rôle, Cyrena Van Gordon the Adalgisa, and Dolci the Pollione. In the evening, at popular prices, "Lucia" will be sung, with Nina Morgana as Lucia, Rimini as Ashton, and Lamont as Edgardo. The evening performances will commence at 8 o'clock and the matinée at 2.

MARSHALL PHOTO

Annie Gulick

Miss Gulick will be heard for the first time here in a piano recital next Wednesday morning in the Ziegfeld theater.

This afternoon at 3:30 in the Auditorium Sergei Rachmaninoff, the Russian composer-pianist, will be heard in recital. His program consists of the Sonata op. 31 of Beethoven, Mendelssohn's Rondo Capriccioso, a Chopin group made up of the F-minor Ballade, the Impromptu op. 29, a Waltz, and a Scherzo op. 31; his own Waltz op. 10 and Etude Tableau op. 39, and the Gounod-Lisst "Faust" Waltz.

In Woods' theater this afternoon at 3, the Chicago Woman's Musical club will present Christine Langenham and Richard Czerwonky, violinist, in concert. Mme. Langenhan is a Bohemian soprano who has been successfully concertizing of late throughout the west and on the Pacific coast and will today be heard for the first time in Chicago.

Next Wednesday morning in the Ziegfeld theater, Anne Gulick, pianist, will accomplish her first appearance here in recital. She will play, among other selections, the A-minor English Suite of Bach, a Sonatine by Ravel, a Chopin group, and numbers by Schubert, Henselt, Stojowski, and Paderewski.

Thursday evening in Orchestra hall, the Apollo club, under Harrison M. Wild's leadership, will give one of its programs of part songs, this being the only one listed on the club's present season schedule. The selections are varied and attractive and include a group for women's voices alone. The soloist will be Ernest Davis, tenor, who will sing the Lament from "Pagliacci," and songs by Rogers, Vanderpool, Cadman, and Clarke.

Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock the Chicago orchestra will inaugurate its series of children's concerts by offering a program of one hour's duration in Orchestra hall. The selections have been chosen with especial thought of children and their musical education, and will be interspersed with short explanatory remarks and explanations given by Mr. Stock. Prices will range from 15 to 50 cents. The numbers to be played on Thursday are Gretry's "Tambourin," a Bach Air and Gavotte, the Nocturne from the Mendelssohn "Midsummer Night's Dream" music, the Saint-Saëns "Dance of Death," and the Strauss "Blue Danube."

Clarence Dickinson, formerly one of the best known organists of Chicago and at present organist of the Brick Presbyterian church and of the Union Theological seminary of New York, will give a recital in St. James' Episcopal church, corner Huron and Cass streets, next Thursday evening under the auspices of the Illinois chapter of the American Guild of Organists.

On Friday afternoon and Saturday evening the Chicago orchestra's regular concerts will be presented and the soloist will be Leo Ornstein, who will play the second MacDowell Concerto for piano, this being his first appearance with the orchestra. The other selections will be the Bantock Overture, "The Pierrot of the Minute," Rubin Goldmark's "Requiem," which is a novelty, and Tschaikowsky's Marche Slave.

The three concerts this season by the Flonzaley quartet will be held, not in the Playhouse, as was at first announced, but in the Blackstone theater, the change having been made necessary through bookings being closed for the Playhouse after Miss Kinsolving had arranged and announced the series and which made impossible her retaining that auditorium. She was compelled, therefore, to move to the larger hall. The dates are Sunday afternoons, Nov. 30, Jan. 11, and Feb. 1. The personnel of the quartet remains unchanged, except for the substitution of Louis Bailly for Ugo Ara, the viola player.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

HE'S LEARNED HOW TO SHIMMY.

I pictured my son and my so-to-speak heir
A scion of promise, a cub past compare;
The bulge of his dome and the set of his ears
Allayed all my worries and banished my fears.
His index cephalic I viewed with repose
And nothing could equal my pride in his nose.
But blushes parental now mantle my cheek—
How changed is this son from my son of last week!
He's learned how to shimmy,
To shimmy, to shimmy,
He's learned how to shimmy, the dern little geek.

One year and four months is the age of my son.
And look what the little gazinkus has done.
Ignoring the classical dances of yore,
He shimmies, he shimmies all over the floor,
And Dorothy Mary abets in the crime
By playing jazz records for him all the time;
And when we have guests whom we wish to impress
He crawls from his crib in his little white dress;
And starts in to shimmy,
To shimmy, to shimmy,
And great their surprise and their horror, my yes.

I scold him, I threaten, I plead and implore,
But hearing the jazz he but shimmies the more;
I work on his friendship, appeal to his pride,
But all of my efforts he's gaily defied;
A tractable child when with mother alone,
But she loses control when the saxophones moan.
O why has this happened, O why is this thus,
He never contracted the shimmy from us—
But still he can shimmy,
You bet he can shimmy,
He's learned how to shimmy, the dern little cuss.

Please Do Not Blame Your Dealer

It is quite possible that your dealer has told you over the counter, "I am sorry, but I cannot supply you just now with a Waltham." To your inquiry as to the reason why he is unable to supply you with the watch you have set your heart upon owning, he has replied, "Waltham is behind on orders"—and he told you the simple truth.

We are behind. Paradoxical as it may seem, we are proud of it—and sorry at the same time. We are proud that Waltham watches and chronometers fulfilled their service on land and sea; and we are sorry that so many discriminating people must necessarily wait a little while for their possession of a Waltham Watch.

We could add many reasons for this unavoidable delay. It will suffice to say, that our country's safety and honor suddenly made demands upon our specialized equipment to supply our heroic army and navy—and there was also many an empty seat in the Waltham factory.

Then, again, the processes entailed in making a fine watch are many, varied and delicate. A skilled horologist is not made in a day, a month or a year. Arduous and exacting training and application are necessary. True, Waltham genius has created wondrous machinery that outwits the finest cunning of human hands—machinery that performs miracles of exquisite labor when measured by foreign methods of manufacture—but in all work of surpassing merit the human mind passes final judgment and the human guarantee of approval is preeminent.

We are indeed proud that the Waltham Watch is a demanded watch. Thousands of prospective watch buyers have read our series of advertisements telling how the Waltham Watch is made, and why it placed "America First in Watchmaking." We are proud of their confidence in the oldest and most renowned horological institution upon this continent. It is a tribute to American achievement, American leadership, American ideals. And we are very sorry to keep them waiting for the watch they desire.

If, then, you should be one of our waiting friends, do not blame your dealer. He would like above all things to give you your Waltham Watch immediately. Very likely his particular order will be filled next. He may not keep you waiting long. He knows that we are doing all that our tremendous resources warrant to help him help you, so have a little patience with us and kindly sympathy for him.

If he has the watch you want, pride and satisfaction are immediately yours. If he cannot supply you at once, you will eventually be repaid by a lifetime of timekeeping service when he does hand over into your possession your Waltham.

ART

Indians on Last Journey Shown in Striking Painting

By Eleanor Jewett

In Twelhi,
In the house made of evening twilight,
In the house made of dark cloud. . . .
Where the dark mist curtains the doorway,
The path to which is on the rainbow.

THE PAINTING by Julius Rolshoven in the room opening from the print gallery in the Art institute bears the name "To the Land of Sip-O-Phey." It is a gloriously conceived piece of work, masterfully executed. I think the adjectives "splendid" and "wonderful" underwent the most usage at the hands of those who looked at the painting during the time I enjoyed it on Wednesday.

The canvas takes up the entire wall space of one side of the room. At right angles with it there is printed a simple story of its meaning. It runs something as follows:

"The painting is a conception of the passing of the Indian to the land of beyond—the shadow world—to death—the land of Sip-O-Phey. According to the myth of the Pueblo, this land lies over the west world mountain and is the dwelling place of the ancients towards which all humanity is inevitably bound, and from which the spirits of the ancients return to their people to guide and teach and protect them.

"Mounted on their beloved steeds, clad in the brilliant robes of their ceremonials, the Indians in this picture are journeying toward the Great Divide. They follow the path of the rainbow which is illumined by such light as penetrates the rifts of storm-clouds at sunset of a windy day. In the lead is a Koshare, spotted with the spots of other worldliness, and wearing dead cornhusks in his hair; a shadowy figure he is, for mortal eyes may not see him—this irresistible leader whom all must follow to the country of the ancients from which he has returned.

"The chief in the foreground, mounted on a white horse, is War Eagle, a warrior who rides in the full glow of light. Like fateful phantoms, white hooded figures with blankets drawn tightly about them ride close behind. An aged priest is there, too, a weary man with drooping head, holding his bridle rein loosely in his tired hands. But many in the throng are young, virile, vigorous. One is a young squaw bearing her papoose on her back, and in the distance a young buck rides furiously, clad in the blue-black robes of death.

The innumerable caravan which moves
To that mysterious realm where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of Death.

"One with all mankind is the red man bound as we towards the house of the ancients."

Wood engravings by Timothy Cole are hung in the print room. Rarely has a more beautiful effect been secured by prints than is found in these. They are charming and delicate in finish. The quality of each is admirable. They force one to search for words that will more adequately express the softness of their appeal to the eye than the mere word "soft." Gainsborough ladies and Watteau landscapes, ruffled gentlemen and complacent cherubs run riot through them, for one finds here reproductions through the art of engraving of the art of the world.

Were one to choose a single print to play the part of example for the rest it might happen one would choose "Peace: A Prophecy," by Carrère, or "La Maternité," also by Carrière. Either and both of these are typical of the most delicious qualities found in Cole's work.

Among the other masters whose paintings he has reproduced are Corot, Rembrandt, Giotto, Franz Hals, Romney, Greuze, Vermeer, Drolling, and Turner.

In the same gallery are eight etchings by George Belcher, an English artist. These prints are hand colored and are mostly humorous portraits of well-known characters of the National Sporting club in London. They are immensely amusing. They take off with a swaggering air various sporting British types whom on the stage one would recognize at once as Halfred, 'Erbert, and Percy. The coloring of the prints enhances, perhaps, their pictorial possibilities, but undoubtedly lessens their effect as engravings. "Mrs. Harris of Follop Yard" is a huge success and "Two Ladies of Walham Avenue" is a keen satire on feminine foibles in the more aspiring [properly pronounced with an h, please] circles of truly genteel society.

In gallery 48 the paintings by George Bellows are hung. Mr. Bellows is a New York man and is, I believe, teaching this year in the school of the Art institute. Appreciating both of these facts, I wish it were humanly possible to deal in a laudatory manner with his exhibit. But, frankly, I do not care for the type of painting his canvases exemplify. There is one picture I like. That of the little boy, No. 4, a portrait of a peasant child's head done in dark tones, does possess quality. It attracts and holds one.

In the American oil exhibition mention should have been made last week of the awarding of the William M. R. French memorial gold medal, established by the Art Institute Alumni association, to a bronze, "The Future," by Evelyn Beatrice Longman.

The opening exhibition of the Arts club for this season proved of great interest. In one gallery hang portraits and miniatures by early American painters brought from the east, in the other gallery hang pictures from the collections of Arthur Meeker, Charles Edward Brown, and Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman.

The painting loaned by Mrs. Coleman is a portrait of George Washington by Peale. It is interesting to compare this with the portrait of Washington by Gilbert Stuart, owned by Mr. Meeker. The only picture not a portrait in the room is "The Battle of Lake Erie" by Trumbull. As the name suggests, it is a naval painting, and, in spite of its sanguinary spirit, a most delightful thing. The little waves curl regularly, the boats are trim and pretty with their billowing sails and punctilious crews. The life-boat, manned by an orderly band of crimson coated gentry, gives the correct touch of color to this most mincing of sea fights.

"Mrs. Stevens" by Gilbert Stuart is the loveliest portrait shown. But others run it a close second. Among those others are "Mrs. Margaret Eaton" by Inman, "Mrs. Adam Babcock" by Copley, and "Hannah Wager" by Stuart.

In the collection of pictures from New York are found representatives of the work of Thomas Sully, John Vanderlyn, Benjamin West, Edward Savage, Rembrandt Peale, Simonetti, and Robert Fulton.

At the Palette and Chisel club are found pictures of the Ozark country. The two artists, George A. Leupold and J. C. Doeming, whose work the exhibit is, made the trip to that country together and painted in company what they found.

At first glance the effect of their pictures is one of coldness. There is but little warmth to their color. A sense of flatness prevails too. But if you can overcome these two discouragements you will reap an ample harvest of pleasure in at least some of the pictures.

By Doemling is "Evening," a beautiful harmony in blues. His, too, are "Mist in the Mountains," which possesses a lingering atmospheric influence leading one to dream of fairies dancing in a fog, and "After the Rain," another canvas where the atmosphere spells the secret of its beauty.

"The Land of Legends" by Leupold is pleasing. "Grey Day," "The Charming Hour," and "Autumn" all make a definite claim upon one. "Fantastic Tree" is another charming bit of twisted wood beauty which must needs be included in this brief mention.

The Chicago Society of Etchers met in the club room of the Art institute last Friday evening and the view of the society's recent work was inspiring.

Next Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock a lecture and exhibit of the art of dyeing will be given by Mrs. James B. Barnet in the Recital hall of the Fine Arts building.

"Outlines of Chinese Art" by John C. Ferguson, (University of Chicago Press) has recently come to me. It gives the Scammon lectures for 1918 delivered by Mr. Ferguson at the Art institute. The work makes a welcome addition to the literature we already possess on this subject. The book is beautifully gotten up and has many illustrations. This subject is not an easy one to deal with in a popular manner, but Mr. Ferguson has succeeded where another less skilled might have failed. The historical and legendary glimpses he gives to indicate the influences that developed the art of China are woven pleasantly with the more technical data referring to specific incidents in that development.

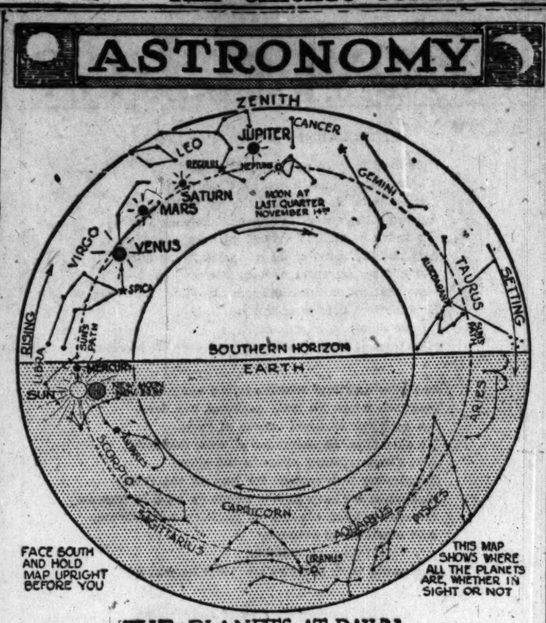
ASTRONOMY



THE PLANETS AT DAWN

DRAWN BY S.F.MAXWELL

PLANETS IN CONJUNCTION.

A WONDERFUL sight can be seen in the morning sky just before dawn. If you will get up a little before the sky begins to gray with the coming of day, you will see four bright planets and two first magnitude stars strung along in a straight line in the sky. Such a grouping of brilliant lights in the heavens is unusual, and is attracting great attention from scientists.

The first member of the string is Jupiter. This is the giant planet of the solar system. It can easily be identified by its intense blue-white luster.

Then comes Regulus, a sparkling white star. Regulus is the brightest star in the group known as the Sickle. The Sickle and some other stars lower down compose the constellation of Leo the Lion. The Lion is one of the easiest constellations to follow. The Sickle marks his head, Regulus his heart, and the stars to the eastward his hindquarters. He crouches facing the west. At present the ground he is lying on is filled with planets.

Directly beneath the Lion is Saturn, the ringed planet. Its color is yellow, inclined to orange. The light Saturn sends us is pale, steady, and unwinking.

An even space beyond is Mars. There is no mistaking this planet, for it is a brilliant red. Mars is rapidly approaching the earth, and grows brighter every night. Its red color is due to the desert areas, which compose most of its surface.

An even space beyond Mars is Venus, the brightest planet of all. Venus is a pure white. Its color is due to the cloud banks which completely cover the land on that world.

A little below Venus is the first magnitude star Spica, in size and color much like Regulus. Spica brings up the tail of the procession.

The planets are maneuvering into the position of conjunction that they will have on Dec. 17. On that date they will all come into a straight line, the earth alone excepted. Our planet will stand at right angles to the configuration, some odd ninety-million miles to one side, and so we should be able to obtain a good view.

If all the planets were to come into line at the same instant, they would be in what is known as dead center. Their mutual attractions would drag them from their orbits and send them crashing into the sun. But nothing like this need ever be expected. The solar system is eternal and the planets can never destroy themselves by their motions.

Whenever a crisis arises in their revolutions and there comes the threat of a disruption, they select one of their number and throw it far enough to one side to pull the others on when they reach the fatal line. This time it is the earth which lies outside the line. Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, and Neptune will lie on one side of the sun and Uranus on the other.

Bankers Buy Pictures By Young Bidding Plan

In some of my former bidding sales as many as a dozen prominent bankers have been buyers. A leading banker, now one of my best patrons, whose first acquaintance came through one of these sales, when asked why bankers are my best bidders, said:

"We are forced to study investments from every angle. An investment to appeal to a banker must be safe, honest and profitable, or economical. The fact that you have been for years the leading dealer in American Art in the Central West gave me confidence in your ads. I know you could not afford to fail in making good every promise. And when you promised to sell pictures at bidders' own offer without reservation I knew I had a fair chance in your sale. The fact you are always ready to furnish name and address of anyone raising my bid shows that "bidding in" is impossible. Your offer to refund money to dissatisfied patrons proves your confidence in the pictures offered. Your sales will grow in popularity as their absolute fairness becomes better known."

Many shrewd bankers will either send bids or come to the galleries to make bids during my sale of 113 pictures, including works by R. A. Blakelock, E. A. Bell, J. E. Bundy, Chas. H. Davis, Warren Davis, Chas. Warren Eaton, Childe Hassam, Geo. Inness, H. M. Kitchell, Robert Spencer, and others, which opens Monday, November 17th.

You are glad to have the advice of bankers about investments—why not buy pictures with the same wisdom they employ? Illustrated catalog will explain the YOUNG BIDDING PLAN to you as it did to them. Send for it today, or call at galleries for particulars.

Plant Shrubbery in the Fall for Best Results

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

PROPERTY owners are beginning to realize the value of planting shrubbery to improve the landscape around the home. This is true in both the city and the country. It not only increases the value of property, but living conditions are made more pleasant and more healthful. Each year brings an increased interest in this line of work, and even the most skeptical are compelled to admit that trees and shrubbery add beauty, comfort, satisfaction, and contentment to the surrounding country.

There are many who have the erroneous idea that the planting of shrubbery should be done in the spring. Experience has shown that most shrubbery may be successfully planted in the fall. Many landscape gardeners claim that where all things are considered there is no better time for the amateur to do this work than in the fall. There is little work to be done in the flower and vegetable garden at this season of the year, and the nurseryman is able to give more attention to orders.

Planting plans should be made first showing the location of every tree and shrub on the place. Decide whether the method of planting is to be formal or natural. In the city or town lots where space is limited the formal plan is perhaps the best, while with the large suburban homes and country places there is a splendid opportunity for the development of the natural style. Where the area is large it is possible to have a small body of water, groves of trees, and large groups of shrubbery. For small lots, where more care can be given to the plants, an elaborate plan may be advisable. In some cases home makers are able to devote a great deal of time to the upkeep of the landscape. Some trim their hedges in such shapes and fashions that green statues of all the animals and fowls of the barnyard are left posing on the lawn.

In making the planting plans no conclad rules can be laid down, for each place presents conditions peculiar to itself, and it is necessary for each individual to choose the method that suits his needs. However, some definite plan is necessary, as the plants, such as trees, vines, and shrubbery, are to remain in a permanent position for several years.

In selecting plants one is governed largely by the soil and climatic conditions, position of buildings, walks, drives, fountains, bodies of water, and the surrounding area. Soil conditions may be changed by the addition of manure or commercial fertilizers.

Often the amateur is not familiar with the various kinds of plants, and is unable to make the proper selections. For such individuals it is advisable for them to visit the parks and other well planned landscapes. This will enable one to become familiar with the plants and their names, and will aid greatly in the selections of shrubbery to suit his particular needs. Metal tags giving the technical and common names are attached to many of the plants in the parks which will be found helpful to the amateur.

Expert nurserymen say that evergreens grow fully as well, if not better, when planted in the fall than if they are not put in until late in the spring. Shrubs planted at this time of the year make growth quickly in the spring, and are often better established at the end of the season than where they are planted in the spring. This year is especially favorable for fall planting, as there has been a heavy rainfall in many sections of the country. In dry seasons plants cannot be transplanted with safety.

In smoke zones where cities are densely populated or near factories, evergreens will not do well. Evergreens are attractive during midwinter, but trees and shrubbery should be planted to furnish foliage in the autumn. An evergreen hedge will add much to the appearance of a lawn, and the hemlock is among the best. White pines and arborvitae are also desirable. Japanese yew is one of the finest shrubs for making an all-season hedge, but it is sometimes difficult to obtain.

There are dozens of tall shrubs that may be selected for planting around the home, including bush honeysuckle, syringa or mock orange, golden belle, snowball, lilacs, dogwood, privit hedge, nine bark, elderberry, old man or artemisia, buck thorn, five leaf aralia, spireas, and tamarix. These bushes may grow in smoke zones, but the berries soon drop and the foliage does not become highly colored and the leaves fall off early in the fall. The Japanese barberry, matrimony vine, bitter sweet, and woodbine have proved their value as low or trailing shrubs.

Among the trees that are hardy and add beauty and color to the surroundings, the following are well worth planting: Elm, ash, linden, hard and soft maple, catalpa, locust, tree of heaven or allanthus, gingko, and poplar.

Roses may be planted this late in the season, but it is advisable to have the beds prepared a few weeks in advance of the planting time. The Conrad Ferdinand Meyer, a flowering hedge of unusual quality, can be planted in the fall as well as the spring. The Rosa rugosa, hybrid teas, and hybrid perpetuals may be safely set out now in most sections of the country. In setting roses dig the hole deeply and use a liberal supply of rotten manure. Lime or old plaster and soot have been found valuable in making a rose bed. After the plant has been set, the dirt should be thrown in and elevated about three inches.

In planting trees and shrubbery of any kind particular attention must be given to the soil. Rich soil is essential. The soil around the home, especially in cities, is usually filled in or graded down to clay. Plants cannot grow in soil that contains an abundance of stones, coarse gravel, cinders, subsoil clay, and sand. Use rich soil, for the top layer at least, even though it may be necessary to haul it several miles.

The Most Beautiful Car in America

The average man today does not need to be convinced that a good automobile is a sound investment in a practical utility. He readily recognizes that the dividends are in time saved, work accomplished, energy conserved and health promoted.

The size of these dividends depends on the car and its maker. Paige cars offer a most attractive investment because in no price field is there a more generous measure of quality, a greater assurance of dependable service.

MOTORDOM

Take More Time in Instructing New Car Drivers

Growing Accident List Can Be Traced to Carelessness.

BY JOHN L. SPELLMAN.

A CAMPAIGN ought to be started now to make city motoring more safe than it is. Nearly 375 lives have been sacrificed in Chicago this year in automobile accidents.

Some of these persons would be alive today if it were not for careless car driving. Not all auto accidents are due to careless driving, but a majority can be traced to this.

Before a man is allowed to drive a motor truck about the Chicago streets he must be examined as to his fitness to do so. The applicant is taken over to Grant park and made to operate a truck among plenty of obstacles before the city grants him a license.

With a passenger car it is different. A person can go down on automobile row, buy a car and drive it out of the place if he is able. Only public chauffeurs are examined and licensed by the city.

Not a lot of time is spent by the dealer in showing a new driver how to operate a passenger car. This is wrong. The new driver ought to be shown every consideration, not only for his own good but for the good of the thousands of other drivers and pedestrians.

Many persons who have kept close watch of the growing fatal auto accident list are willing to go on record as declaring that unless something is done to cut down the accident list the time will come when the drivers of passenger cars will be subject to examination and licensing, the same as a truck driver.

The "safety first" movement did an immense amount of good in averting accidents, but this campaign of education ought to be carried on by the dealers at the time a car is turned over to a new driver.

The trouble seems to be that dealers try to fill up a new driver's mind as rapidly as possible about the workings of a motor car. Would it not seem ridiculous for anybody to try and make a child's mind absorb the contents of a spelling book in a single day? However, that's just what some dealers do in turning a car over to a new driver.

An automobile is a safe piece of machinery, providing it is driven correctly. It becomes a machine of destruction the minute it gets in the hands of a careless or ignorant person. No amount of education, instruction, or warning will cure all the carelessness in motoring, and this applies to some persons who have been driving cars for years.

Give the newcomer a fair break. The first instruction the new driver receives is usually what he remembers the longest. Don't try and crowd all the contents of an instruction book into a new driver's head in the first hour of instruction. He won't absorb it, and the chances are that he won't retain enough to do him much good in correctly operating a car.

If the new drivers are given the proper instructions in their first lessons, accidents will fall off. The law will take care of the habitually careless old timers.

State and municipal legislation won't cure all the careless fellows, but all sane motoring legislation is a guide to the driver who wants to be careful and avoid smashups.

The Experts Say---

In an emergency common table salt may be used as an anti-freeze medium. A saturated solution of water and salt freezes at about zero. After the emergency is passed the cooling system should be thoroughly flushed out and be refilled with a recognized anti-freeze.

The Ford magneto can be used to charge a battery, provided a rectifier is placed in the line. The current from the Ford magneto is alternating, and only direct current can be used in charging the battery, hence the need for the rectifier.

During cold weather the battery falls off in efficiency, and the car owner can help his battery considerably by turning over the engine a few times with the starting crank before throwing the starting motor into operation. The cranking by hand serves to break so lidified oil around the pistons.

In cases where the garage is so placed that installation of a turntable is impossible, it is possible to place the entire building on a big turntable and give it two doors, front and back, so that after the car has been driven in the garage is swung around and the vehicle may be driven out forward instead of being backed out.

An ingenious motorist recently contrived a thermostat by removing the rubber hose between the top of the cylinders and the radiator and replacing it with a metal one, embodying a shut-off valve of the butterfly type, such as are used on carburetors. A rod from this valve extends through the dash, so that the driver can regulate the amount of water flow through the cooling system. In effect this is a manually controlled thermostat.

Air leaks are a common cause of misfiring, though they are often overlooked. A worn valve guide allows enough air to be sucked into the cylinders to cause misfiring and it also permits oil to leak out. If oil is discovered leaking out it is fair to assume that excess air is being injected into the fuel charges.

When a keyway becomes worn the first thought of the owner is to file the channel larger and fit a larger key. To do this often weakens the metal seriously and it may be found that a preferable way is to weld new metal into the old slot and then cut a new keyway to fit the old key.

In lubricating automobile springs the greatest trouble is found in keeping the lubricant from being squeezed out under pressure. A compound that obviates this is found in graphite and beeswax mixed to a paste and spread upon each leaf. Obviously the spring must be taken apart to apply this lubricant.

It is remarkable what vibration will do in the way of loosening up grease cups that have gone in stiffly and apparently been absolutely secure. Every lost grease cup means that some part of the mechanism is in danger. The safest remedy for this trouble is to employ a set of cups with locked caps.

Anti-Freeze Time for the Radiator Is Now with Us

Play Safe and Keep Cooling System from Injury.

THIS is the time of year to think about anti-freeze solutions. In general it may be said that for the average climate of our northern states the best mixture is alcohol, one-sixth; glycerine, one-sixth, and water, two-thirds. If glycerine is hard to obtain make it alcohol one-third and water two-thirds. This will keep the cooling apparatus from freezing down to a temperature between 5 and 10 degrees below zero.

In using alcohol or any of the anti-freeze preparations it is important to know the capacity of your radiator so that the proper mixture may be made. Below is given a list of the cooling system capacities of the better known cars based on 1919 models and compiled from information supplied by Motor Age:

Car.	Gallons.	Car.	Gallons.

Liberty	6½	Velie, 38	4¾
Locomobile	8	Westcott	5
Mailohm	3½	Winton	8

For those who wish to go into the matter in more detail the following formulas will prove helpful:

Safe at 15 degrees above zero—Water, 4 gals.; alcohol, ⅓ gal.; glycerin, ⅓ gal.

Safe at 8 degrees above zero—Water, 3¾ gals.; alcohol, 5 pints; glycerin, 5 pints.

Safe at 10 degrees below zero—Water, 3⅓ gals.; alcohol, 1⅓ gals.; glycerin, 2½ quarts.

Safe at 20 degrees below zero—Water, 1⅓ gals.; alcohol, 2½ gals.; glycerin, 1⅓ gals.

It is a wise precaution to put a corked bottle of the solution used in the car outside your bedroom window. When this solution freezes or gives signs of doing so it is the signal to look out for trouble in the cooling system of the car. Further, alcohol evaporates rapidly and should be renewed as tests made with the hydrometer indicate that the alcohol content of the solution has grown less.

The use of kerosene is not recommended. It has a high boiling point and has a deleterious effect upon the rubber hose connections. Kerosene has a lower freezing point than water, but when the former is heated it gives off an inflammable vapor that is dangerous. It also is apt to cause serious overheating of the engine.

"FARM-TO-TABLE WEEK" BEGINS TODAY—This is the first day of the motor to the country and fill your basket week. The movement is nation-wide. Scenes like the above probably will be seen in almost every section of the United States during this week. The movement is fostered by most of the car and tire manufacturing companies and has the indorsement of scores of civic organizations all over the country. This is the chance for the farmers to prove their contention that the high shipping costs leave them little profit on their produce. This week affords a chance for the farmers to deal direct with the consumers and at the same time give the consumers a "shade" on existing high prices.

Draw Show Space.

Drawing for space at the January automobile shows at New York and Chicago was among the other important matters considered at a record meeting of automobile manufacturers of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce in New York. There were eighty-eight applications for space for passenger cars and eighty-one applications for space by truck manufacturers, these companies taking practically all the space available in the buildings at New York and Chicago, aside from space available for parts and accessories. Thus the twentieth annual exhibition space applications have exceeded those for any previous exhibition.

A Rare Smoothness of Action

CHALMERS MOTOR CAR CO. Quality First

THE thing you will like best and remember longest about a Hot Spot Chalmers is its rare smoothness of action.

You will note an absence of "effort" about its motive power. You will sense almost no vibration, no jars, no engine noises.

That is because Hot Spot "cracks up" the gas into an extremely fine vapor and Ram's-horn hurries it to the cylinders so that gas condenses but little enroute.

There are no sharp corners or abrupt bends in Ram's-horn to impede its progress.

If the Chalmers engine had windows you would be amazed at the miracles performed with gas. But when you drive a Hot Spot Chalmers you will note the results obtained, and you, too, will say Chalmers is one of the few great cars of the world.

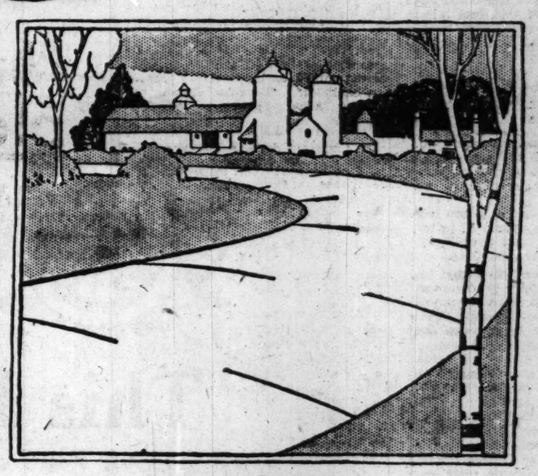
Overland

As It Is



As It Seems

The Road—In New Overland 4 on Three-Point Cantilever Springs

YOU expect a bad road to ride as it looks. It did, until the introduction of the Overland 4 Springbase.

Overland 4 does not change the road, but it does change the manner in which you can ride on it. It gives you comfort instead of dis-comfort. It gives you a smooth, sailing sensation instead of bouncing and swaying.

The Diagonal attachment of Three-Point Cantilever Springs at the ends of a 130-inch Springbase gives long wheelbase road steadiness. Yet Overland 4 retains all the advantages—lightness, economy, and ease of handling, of 100-inch wheelbase.

This means an altogether new standard of riding comfort, a noteworthy reduction in the wear and tear which lessens the efficiency of a car. The new springs give longer life to every part and thus minimize upkeep and replacement costs.

Tires wear longer because cushioned against hammering blows. Light weight means marked economy in gas, oil and running expense.

Overland 4's equipment is complete from Auto-Lite Starting and Lighting to Demountable Rims.

Come in and see this remarkable car. Ask for booklet. Overland 4 Touring, $845; Roadster, $845; Coupe, $1325; Sedan, $1375. Prices f. o. b. Toledo.

MOTORDOM

More Advice on How to Prevent Hard Starting

Cold Motors Respond Quickly to Use of Primers.

BY HIGH SPEED.

DIFFICULTY in starting is an inherent fault in the modern internal combustion engine. This is not altogether the fault of the engine, because the interior grades of fuel that are now offered are in large degree to blame for this condition. However that may be, the basic fact remains that difficulty in starting is an almost universal trouble, and particularly is this so in winter. It is possible by taking due precautions to eliminate much of this starting difficulty, as we shall attempt to explain in the course of this article.

The most effective way of getting the motor to start on a cold winter morning is to prime it with some fuel that is lighter and more evolatile than the grade of gasoline that is now commonly sold. The old fashioned way of accomplishing this priming was to open each petcock in turn and pour in a little of the lighter fuel. Obviously this was a bothersome task, and the manufacturers, ever watchful for possible improvements, have given us priming equipment that eliminates all this trouble.

At the present time it is possible for the car owner to take his seat in the car and by a simple movement of his hand prime the engine with a highly volatile fuel that will give a fire at the first shot. This equipment consists of a small tank which contains a pint or so of the lighter fuel. This tank is connected with the various cylinders by means of pipe or leads. A small plunger pump is placed on the dash, by manipulating which the driver sends a spray of the lighter fuel into the cylinders, where it is fired by the spark and starts the engine, after which the ordinary fuel is able to care for continued operation.

Now a word as to the best fluids to use for priming purposes, as this is most important if satisfactory results are to be obtained. The commonest priming medium is probably what is known as 76 degree gasoline. This is simply the lighter gasoline that we used to obtain all the time, but which is now a rare luxury. Within recent years some of the oil companies have been putting out what is known as petroleum ether. This is simply a lighter constituent derived from the crude oil base. With a tank of this fuel it is possible to get a first time start, even in zero weather. Some owners have made a practice of using ether for winter starting, but this has obvious disadvantages. Either the 76 degree gas or petroleum ether will be the best starting medium.

Of course it is always possible to prime the engine with ordinary gasoline. The assumption in this case is that enough of the lighter products of the ordinary gasoline will get into the cylinders to allow the spark to fire the charge. If the lighter forms of priming fluids are not available, ordinary gasoline should certainly be tried.

Almost all car owners know that by applying heat to ordinary gasoline vaporization is completed, or rather accelerated, so that the fuel is easily fired. This was the reason behind the old fashioned custom of filling the cooling system with boiling water on cold mornings. The heat this imparted to the engine served to vaporize the fuel a little and insure an easy start. This method is too inconvenient to suit modern motorists, however, and there are devices now on the market to secure heated fuel in a less bothersome way. The equipment to which we refer embodies an electric heater, so placed that as the fuel is pumped into the manifold it is passed over a heated coil, being thereby vaporized so that easy starting is almost certain.

This question of starting is rather uncertain at best. Some car owners seem never to have any trouble. They pull up the float in the carburetor, apply the choker, and get a start the first time. The choker is left on for a couple of minutes and is opened as the engine warms up. To these fortunate individuals, a scant minority, our advice is not directed, but for the vast majority a little help will prove welcome.

When the car is equipped with electrical starting apparatus, it is vitally important that this shall be maintained at maximum efficiency during the winter months. This is obviously true; since the fuel is heavy and sluggish with the cold, a good hot spark is needed to fire it, and this can only be obtained from a battery in perfect working order. It is vital that the battery be kept fully charged, or nearly so, and that the cells be filled with distilled water, an operation that must be attended to once every two weeks. The spark plug gaps must be carefully watched and kept properly spaced.

And even after the start is obtained, it is important in cold weather to give the engine as much heat as possible. The carburetor should be heated and should get hot air to make sure of well vaporized fuel. The hood and radiator should be covered when the car is left standing. Give the engine all the assistance you can in cold weather, for it will need it with the heavy, indigestible fuel it is compelled to handle in these days.

Some Mystery.

While traveling at a great rate through Wisconsin we suddenly landed on a wet, slippery concrete pavement, and accordingly we went whirling around in a circle. Finally stopping, we came face to face with an angry bull snorting at something on the hood of our car.

The bull gave one dash for the car and we all took to our heels, tight skirts and all.

Later, during our investigation, we found a piece of red flannel on the smashed hood, which probably had caused the bull's anger. But how it got there goodness only knows.

R. H.

Bumping Along.

One day last summer I was driving in the country. We came upon a bunch of cows "strolling" down the center of the road. I sounded my horn and stopped, but the cows did not even look around to see who was disturbing their "promenade."

I blew my horn again, but it did not seem to do any good. I drove slowly until I got behind one of the cows. I struck it gently below the knees with the car's bumper. I did this to every cow in the bunch until I had bumped them all off the road.

Then I was able to proceed. L. W.

Horn Was Good.

My brother-in-law had invested in a "used" car, and, as is generally the case, it always was in need of repairs. On one of his numerous visits to the repair shop, he asked the man what was the best thing to do with the car.

Reaching over the workman tooted the horn and said:

"You have a good horn there. Suppose you jack it up and run a new car under it?" A. P. C.

Easily Discouraged.

I took my wife out motoring in the country. We ran out of gasoline. I had left my money home. I walked home, got the money, bought some gasoline, and walked back to where the car was. The car had gone. I went home again. Found my wife in the parlor. She handed me a bill for $5 for being towed home in the car. I sold the car the next day.

Pneumatics Beat Solids?

How well actual performance figures argue for giant pneumatic cord tire equipment on medium capacity trucks which operate over country roads of all kinds is evidenced in a report recently submitted by the Firestone company.

Two trucks, each loaded to its full 2-ton capacity, were sent into the west early in July to assist in ship-by-truck demonstrations. One was equipped with solid tires, the other with pneumatics. Operating together over the same roads and under all other conditions as nearly as possible the same, the trucks ran up a mileage of approximately 3,000, with these results in favor of the one which was equipped with pneumatic tires:

30 per cent more mileage per gallon of gasoline.

16 per cent more mileage per gallon of oil.

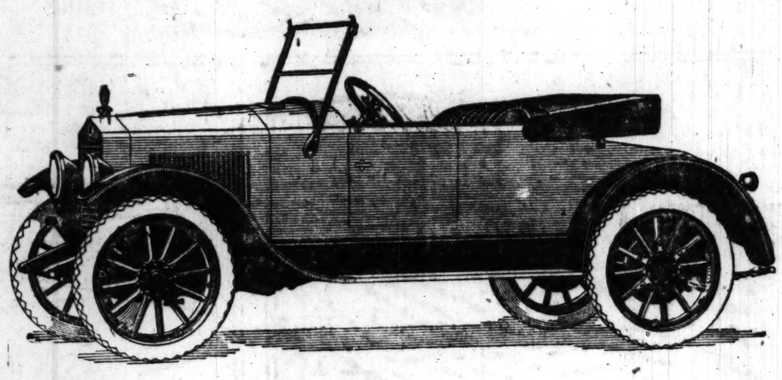
ESSEX MOTOR CARS



This Is the Newest

All You Have Heard in Praise for the Essex Applies to This Model—Note Its Wide Utility

Essex Favorite

This is the latest Essex to win its way with that large motoring class that now realize the advantage of light weight and sturdy, durable construction.

Heretofore roadsters were available in two distinct classes only. One was the light car, attractive principally for its low price and operating cost. The other large, heavy and costly. An impressive car because of its size, comfortable, durable and exclusive because so few could afford a two seater, that in all essential respects is as expensive to operate as a seven passenger.

But those who wanted an economical reliable car, who wanted comfort, performance and a car they could be proud to own had no other choice.

But Now Essex Fills the Bill

It, like the touring model, makes its appeal in all the most wanted qualities. It is light in weight, but is also durable and comfortable to ride in.

It has performance that makes it a leader in any group of fast traveling cars. Essex owners are never distanced if they want to lead.

The lines are atractive. The durability is of the standard established by more than 18,000 Essex cars now in service.

Makes Ideal Business Car

Many business houses use Essex roadsters. They paid perhaps less attention to its appearance than to its endurance. They were not so much interested in its speed as in freedom from mechanical care. Their salesmen have not the time for roadside tinkering. Appointments must be kept. Traveling schedules must not be interrupted, and the driver must not be wearied by riding, driving delays or attention to the car.

They chose the roadster because of what others have said in its praise. They heard the same good things said for it that you hear. Surely no car ever had more enthusiastic friends. Thirty million dollars paid by individual users mark the confidence all have for Essex.

Roadster Has Large Carrying Space

Suit and sample cases can be carried unseen under the rear deck. Provision is made for such large articles as trunks.

Inspectors, salesmen and professional men particularly like the Essex. It meets their wants in performance and reliability. It gratifies their taste in looks. They like its rattle proof construction. They like the way it retains its newness.

And of course they like the car that takes no back position for even the most powerful and fastest car.

The ease with which the Essex can be driven, its short length permitting parking in spaces too small for most cars, and its good looks are marks of advantage you hear every one talking about.

The Essex roadster is as distinctive in its advantages as the touring and sedan models. No buyer will go far wrong if his car selection is based on what owners say for it. And what car enjoys such endorsement as the Essex?

Auto and Truck Shows Here from Jan. 24 to 31

THE dates from Jan. 24 to Jan. 31 were set at a meeting held last week for staging the Chicago automobile show at the Coliseum and the Chicago truck show at the International amphitheater.

John Nicol, chairman of the truck committee of the Chicago Automobile Trade association, presided at the meeting, at which local truck dealers met with Manager Samuel A. Miles and heard the plans for the "greatest truck show ever held."

In addition to the talk of Manager Miles, there were addresses by other men, leaders in the automobile world. John Eustis, in charge of the conference program of the truck show, and F. W. Fenn, in charge of rural motor express promotion of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce were present.

"I confidently expect that the Chicago shows will be the last word in expositions," said Manager Miles, who is in Chicago for a few days. "I am highly pleased with the interest which is being shown on all sides, and with the general outlook.

"While here I intend to look over the plans for the decorations of the Coliseum and the International amphitheater. These will be fully up to the standard of former Chicago shows, and will be of great beauty."

A feature at the truck show will be the daily conferences at which all those interested will find much to benefit them. There will be addresses by governors of states, and other leading men of the country. The conferences will be for owners, dealers, farmers and others who make use of motor trucks.

The largest attendances in the history of industrial expositions are looked for at these shows. The automobile and truck industries have made great strides, and the public is naturally interested in all new features along these lines.

Speed Trap.

The Chicago Motor club warns all motorists to drive slowly on the state road between Buchanan and Galien, Mich. A motorcycle policeman lies in wait for motorists driving twenty-five miles an hour or over. He hides himself and his machine in some farmer's barn and then takes after the offender, arrests him, and takes him before a police magistrate, where fines are meted out at a lively rate.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

J. M. HUTTON has taken over the Bethlehem Products line. He formerly handled the Republic trucks.

The McClaren Tire and Rubber company of Chicago, with Harold J. Murphy as president, has been organized to handle the McClaren line in the local district.

Charles G. Barley, president of the Indiana Truck corporation, who fitted up one of his trucks for a transcontinental trip, reported that he completed his tour to California.

Hugh Campbell has been added to the faculty of the Ambu Engineering institute.

The Winther Motor company of Kenosha is about to market a six cylinder passenger car.

Camping places ought to be provided for motorists in Cook county's forest preserve, said James Levy, Buick dealer.

F. H. McKinney has been made general manager of the freight transportation department of the local Packard branch.

The Goodyear Tire and Rubber company has announced its ten years' investigation of the need for pneumatic tires on motor trucks.

Charles H. Gresslee was made manager of sales for the middle west for the Ranier Motor corporation.

The Willys Overland company declares that no more severe tests were ever made for any machine than those undergone by the new four.

A citation has been issued by the federal trade commission in Washington for the officials of the Good Wear Tire and Tube company to have them explain the use of the name.

Automobile Salon Opens.

The automobile salon, the first international exhibition of motor cars in this country since the war, opens in the grand ballroom of the Commodore hotel, New York, tomorrow and will continue through the week.

The salon of 1919 promises the finest display of high class chassis and coach work ever seen. The leading car manufacturers of Europe and America will be represented by their latest models and a splendid opportunity will be afforded the motoring public to compare the trend of design in France, England, and Italy with the latest practice of our American engineers. It will be especially interesting to note the changes that have been introduced in the motors of the various companies as the result of wartime experience with tank, airplane, and truck.

Famous automobiles of the old world, the Rolls-Royce and Sunbeam of England, the Renault, De Lage, and Pic Pic of France, the Lancia of Italy, and others will be displayed with America's proudest cars, Locomobile, Daniels, Brewster, Porter, Phianna, Re Vere, and Du Pont.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS - - - - - - - BY HIGH SPEED

I would like to know about the auto road from Chicago to St. Louis. Would it be advisable to make this trip at this time in the year, and how many miles is it?

MRS. C. W. SHUNK, Evanston, Ill.

The roads between Chicago and St. Louis are composed almost entirely of dirt, and, not being in very good condition at present, the trip is not now deemed advisable. The best route is west through Oak Park to Forest Park and south and west through Riverside, Lyons, Joliet, Morris, and Dwight to Pontiac. From Pontiac follow the Burlington way southwest through Chenoa, Lexington, Bloomington, Lincoln, and Springfield to Litchfield. Take the Big Four trail from Litchfield to Alton and the Alton way from Alton to St. Louis. The distance is 341 miles.

Can you tell me the best route from Chicago to Wauconda, Ill.?

E. J. SCHAEFER, Chicago.

Drive northwest on Milwaukee avenue through the town of Niles, turning left on the Ballard road about two and one-half miles beyond Niles. Follow the Ballard road into the Rand road and the Rand road to Lake Zurich, continuing northwest to Wauconda.

Upon a Buick 6, model D-45, when the engine is idling, the ammeter "charges" about normal, but as soon as the car is in motion it flies from "charge" to "discharge" very rapidly, and sometimes to the extent of discharge, and stays there until the "ign." button is pushed and pulled again. The normal movement due to the movements of the car is taken into consideration; the battery reads 1,250; the generator has been cleaned and new brushes installed within the last week. The wiring system between battery, switch, and generator has been carefully gone over. Can you advise as to where the trouble might be located?

ROBERT R. JUSTUS, Warren, Ill.

Judging from the conditions as described in your letter it seems very much as though the trouble is occurring because of the cutout. If your car were equipped with a current regulator, as is common with some electrical systems, it would be more possible that the trouble would be directly traceable to the regulator, but since the generator on your car has third brush regulation and no regulator, the only remaining chance for this fluctuation of the ammeter is in the cutout. Further strength is given to these reasons because the fluctuation does not occur until the car is in motion, which indicates that the shunt coil in the cutout has a loose connection in it. The strength of the series coil is barely enough to hold the armature of the cutout into contact, and without the assistance of the shunt coil the movement of the car will give to the armature of the cutout a vibrating motion, which will cause fluctuation of the ammeter.

HYDRAULIC GEAR SHIFT

"The Motor Cars Supreme Refinement"

Discards the Gear Shift Lever—enables any one to drive a gas car with the greatest ease and confidence. Can be installed on any car of selective drive transmission without interfering with any mechanical or electrical equipment of the car.

Ten Reasons Why You Will Want a Laursen Hydraulic Gear Shift on Your Car:

1—It gives you automatic gear shifting—you indicate the change of gear by a touch of your finger, then push the clutch—that's all.

2—Removes the last barrier to perfect driving joy—the work and nervous strain of shifting gears by hand.

3—Makes your gas car as easy to drive as an electric.

4—Removes the gear lever permanently.

5—Enables two or three persons to occupy the front seat, comfortably, without interfering with control of the gears.

6—Absolutely prevents gear stripping—a thing always possible with hand shifted gears, and the constant fear of beginners.

7—Prolongs the life of your car by eliminating guesswork in making a shift, and the consequent grinding wear and shock to the transmission and co-ordinating parts.

8—Reduces possibilities of accidents by enabling you to have the use of both hands for steering and emergency action.

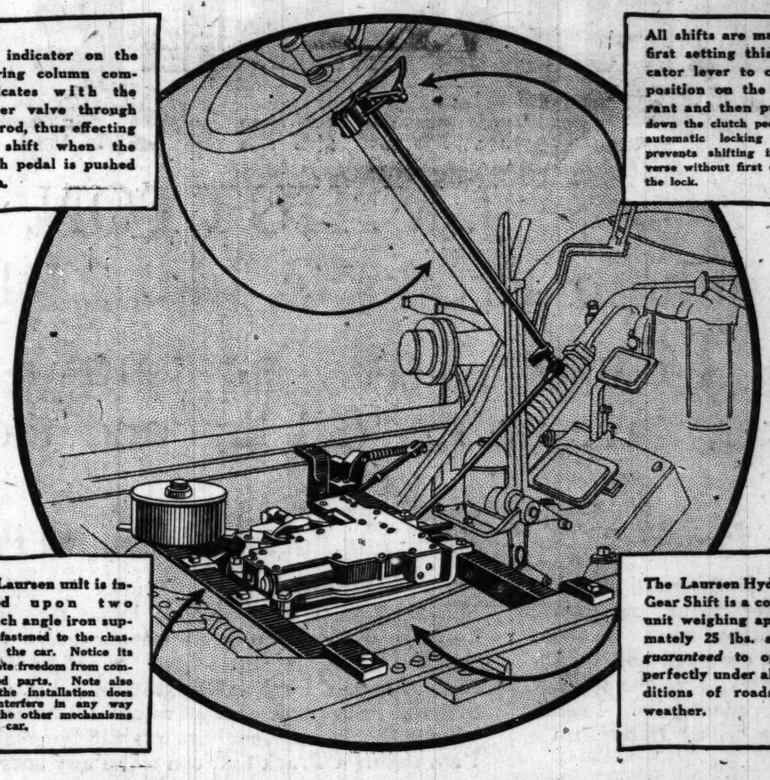
9—Increases your interest in driving by enabling you to anticipate changes of speed and make them quickly when necessary.

10—Because this latest refinement in motor car operation is absolutely guaranteed for the life of your car.

"Guaranteed for the Life of the Car"

The indicator on the steering column communicates with the master valve through this rod, thus effecting the shift when the clutch pedal is pushed down.

All shifts are made by first setting this indicator lever to correct position on the quadrant and then pushing down the clutch pedal. An automatic locking button prevents shifting into reverse without first opening the lock.



The Laursen unit is installed upon two staunch angle iron supports fastened to the chassis of the car. Notice its complete freedom from complicated parts. Note also that the installation does not interfere in any way with the other mechanisms in the car.

The Laursen Hydraulic Gear Shift is a compact unit weighing approximately 25 lbs. and is guaranteed to operate perfectly under all conditions of roads and weather.

The Gas Car Becomes a Woman's Car—the Laursen Hydraulic Gear Shift Has Made It Possible

Every man who owns a motor car knows that wife or daughter is keen to drive. Yet note how few women drivers there are. Any automobile demonstrator can tell you the reason why. It is because of the skill required in shifting gears by hand, woman's natural timidity in attempting a mechanical operation, and her consciousness of disaster if the shift is not done rightly. This barrier to the universal driving of gas cars by women is now removed.

The LAURSEN HYDRAULIC GEAR SHIFT makes the gas car as easy to drive as an electric. It is so simple a child can operate it. It is so safe the most timid women take the wheel with confidence.

Men, you know your wives and daughters are not enjoying the car to the extent anticipated because they do not drive it. Will you deny them that great pleasure—and your own, as well—when it is so easily and quickly obtained by the installation of this unit that adds a million joys to motor driving?

Leave car in the morning—Get it by evening

BETHLEHEM DEPENDABLE DELIVERY

REPRESENTED BY

J. M. HUTTON, President

Bethlehem Products, Inc., 2241 South Michigan Ave.

THE reasons why I, a successful distributor for Motor Trucks in the Chicago Market, gave up my old line and took on Bethlehem Representation are three:

1st—The Product

In my judgment, Bethlehem Motor Trucks have greater value per cost dollar than any other truck on the market. They are designed and built from two viewpoints—to do the work, and to do the work economically. I can sell greater value in selling Bethlehem Motor Trucks.

2d—The Factory Behind the Product

I have sold many Motor Trucks in the Chicago Market; I know this market; know that in all the business world there is no keener judge of values than the Chicago business man. In selling Bethlehem Motor Trucks, I am selling greatest value. I believe that the recognition of that value will be immediate. I know that my personal success will be great because I am selling a Truck that can stand any analysis.

3d—My Personal Opportunity

Not just its size—not just its productive capabilities, but Its spirit. Its attitude. From the President down, the Bethlehem Motors Corporation are proud of Bethlehem Trucks. Proud and willing to stand behind their product through the dealer to the user. That means that I can give Bethlehem Owners utmost co-operation. That my service system can be a sales asset. That my customers will be satisfied customers.

HEAVY-WEIGHT SPECIALTY SALESMEN.
On the 14th of last September the first order went on our books for a brand new Specialty Sales Proposition. Back of this proposition is a unique plan of selling and a method of locating prospects which puts you in touch with them the first day you are in the field. We were very enthusiastic about this sales plan and made some strong statements regarding commissions to salesmen, but the results in only 30 days have far exceeded our expectations and our strongest claims of what could be done.
The salesman's commission averages several hundred dollars on each sale. Sometimes the commission amounts to $1,000 or more.
As stated above, the first order went on our books on Sept. 14, and on the 15th of this month one of the first men to start on this plan of selling had made 41 sales.
Another man who had been in the field exactly ten days had made 16 sales. We have other men who have made 3 to 5 sales in a week. Most men in the field are averaging 2 and 3 sales a week.
We are rapidly developing the livest and strongest sales force in the country. Figure up what they are earning, and if you have the desire and ability to make big money, get in touch with us immediately, as it is not likely we will until our sales force will produce all the business we can handle.
We have assets of several million dollars, have been in business more than half a century, and if you can make good with us you will never need another connection.
If you are a hustler and think you have thrown our entire organization on this sales plan and proposition, we can give you territory in any State if you will respond immediately.
Call 9 to 12 a. m. or 2 to 4 p. m. Third Floor, 109 N. Dearborn-st., or write, giving an outline of your earnings and experience. We have several Sales Managers who will not keep any one waiting more than ten minutes for an interview. C. E. ZIMMERMAN, 109 N. Dearborn-st.

The same things that enable you to make then to $12,000 a year on the average good specialty proposition will make you from $25,000 to $35,000 a year, and quite capable of making more, even up to double this amount, the business is in your territory.
Big enough to interest anyone. With a few exceptions that it always takes to prove the rule, the man who can't make big money today never can. If you think you are capable of doing so, investigate this immediately. There isn't a weak spot in the proposition.

On Secret Service —in Mexico

BY DR. PAUL BERNARDO ALTENDORF.

(Late agent A-1 in the Military Intelligence Department of the U. S. Army.)

ARTICLE 14—MAKING LOVE TO A SPY.

Instead of anything more important to do during the tedious ride of seven and a half hours from Nogales to Hermosillo I balanced myself, figuratively speaking. From the date when I presented myself to Ortiz, the chief of the German secret service, it was four months and twenty days. In that time, and including the trip from Merida, I had spent of American gold of my own, or more than a third of my available funds.

On the credit side of the ledger was placed one important German agent (Schwiertz) entirely out of business; the business of another (Schwiertz's chief of staff, Auch) seriously impaired; the ambitious German scheme for bettering the economic conquest of Mexico indefinitely postponed, and five German firms blacklisted and thus seriously embarrassed in ordering goods by use of my reports. In addition to this I had been able to supply a mass of information of substantial practical value to the military intelligence department which had been sought but not obtained from other sources.

This was with what perhaps may be called pardonable self-complacency, be it said, that I stopped in Hermosillo to report to Gen. Calles, who received me most cordially.

Schwiertz Thoroughly Discredited.

Calles said he had placed a Mexican colonel whose name I do not now recall in charge of the camp at El Claro, where he wanted me to hurry back from Mexico City as soon as possible after my interview with the German ambassador, the inference being that I was to play an important rôle at the training camp. A number of horses, saddles, rifles, and other property was being sent from El Claro for which Calles had asked Schwiertz. He had also found out that Schwiertz had spent a lot of money on his trip to Mexico City, for which no accounting had been made.

In fact, the misdeeds of the commander, who was to lead the conquering host of Germans and Mexicans into the heart of the United States, formed a burden of the governor's conversation. He was greatly irritated by the base treachery of that personage. Calles, also, Rademacher, the German consul at Guaymas, when I reached there after the usual three days' wait for a train, could talk of nothing but Schwiertz, or, rather, of the consequences he feared because he had trusted Schwiertz. He charged me again and again to remind the ambassador that he (Von Eckhardt) had sent written orders to give the recreant leader everything he wanted.

Warns Again, Wails Consul.

He was especially worried because he had been given Schwiertz the German imperial code; but Von Eckhardt sent so many and such long messages that he could only have to have some one to help decode them. Now, if the kaiser himself was to come along, he would not know him to take the code book in his hands. Such had been his instructions when he was intrusted with that important volume, and just see all the trouble he had gotten himself into by violating orders; and so on, ad nauseam.

While wearied by the physical effort of maintaining a sympathetic interest in the woes of Rademacher, I do not deny a pardonable pride in the fact that my word, after such brief acquaintance, had been implicitly accepted in preference to that of a proved German agent. For, remember that it was not the evidence that Schwiertz was a thief that got him into disfavor, for such things are lightly regarded in and where everybody who gets the chance is a grafter, but my mere assertion that he was an American spy.

The trip from Guaymas to San Blas was made at night, for the Yaquis, over their big battle, described in a previous installment, were now quiet and traffic was, temporarily, normal. I had wired to the charming Maria Wilkinson that I was coming and she was waiting for me when I reached the hotel Rosales at Culiacan at 6:30 o'clock in the morning.

Has Battle of Wits.

It was now Dec. 19, 1917, and as the next steamer did not leave Matzatlan for Manzanillo until Dec. 26, I had several days' time on my hands. After such success on my previous fishing excursion with Wilkinson, I had resolved to try my luck again and see what I could find out that might be useful to the American military intelligence department.

Maria, Mrs. Cohen, the landlady, and I breakfasted together. Maria announced that she was going to Nogales on a gun smuggling excursion and that she had already been provided with a railroad pass to the border by the superintendent of the road. She had been requested to bring in as many revolvers as she could, since she could sell them at a good price to the Mexicans.

I tried to pesuade her not to go, finding out as an inducement the prospect of our marriage on my return to Mexico City, for I knew she was great at the smuggling game and if she could prevail upon her to abandon that would be so much gained. But Maria's motto was "Business before matrimony."

German Deals for Explosives.

For three days I lingered in Culiacan, spending a great deal of the time with Maria Wilkinson, in the course of which we saw numerous Germans, resulting in a vast deal of talk about German virtues and German plans for the regeneration of the world as soon as the world was beaten into a proper state of submission.

Winnowing the wheat from the chaff, the net result of the three days' fishing excursion was found to be the information that Melchior's successors, a German firm previously mentioned in these memoirs, had succeeded in obtaining thirty, tons of lard from the United States by buying in small quantities and in the names of various Mexican firms, all of which was collected and shipped to Mexico City for the manufacture of glycerin to be converted into explosives for the coming war with the United States. Another accident of explosives, cotton, was acted in the same way, German agents being employed to buy in small quantities in the names of Mexican citizens. All of these pretended Mexican houses were duly reported to the secretary, intelligence department, and the reports are now in the archives of the department; but I am not able to remember the names at this time.

On Dec. 22 I left Culiacan for Mazatlan, and after a dreary and uneventful journey arrived at Mazatlan late in the afternoon. I called upon the German consul, Ungar, to show myself, but was careful to tell him how tired I was and that as a consequence I proposed to stay in my room for the evening.

Sees Consul; Sends Reports.

It will do no harm to say now that I did nothing of the kind, but devoted the greater part of the night to making out and forwarding reports to the military intelligence department. It is too bad that I cannot take the reader into my confidence regarding the methods employed in forwarding secret reports from a hostile country, but when I announced my intention of writing these memoirs I was requested not to divulge the department's methods of operation.

There were still three days before there would be a steamer to Manzanillio; so, still in the guise of a German secret agent wearing the Mexican uniform, I went fishing for information in the troubled waters of Mazatlan. One of my earliest hauls proved to be an item of considerable importance. This was the discovery that the Germans were buying maps of the United States through a Mexican printer in Mazatlan named Martinez.

Dope on U. S. Industries.

This sudden interest in the study of American geography was explained when I got hold of one of the maps. They proved to have the locations of munition manufacturing plants, food warehouses, shipyards and similar information carefully and conspicuously marked. They were the sort of maps the German agents assigned to destroy such places might find useful, and this is precisely what the maps were intended for. Full details of this interesting enterprise went forward to the United States that night.

While I was sitting in Consul Ungar's office next day a Spaniard came in, and to him I heard Ungar give orders for 7,000 pairs of shoes and other miscellaneous merchandise to the total value of $80,000, to be shipped to the good Spanish name for the use and behoof of blacklisted German business houses. I am happy to say that if the Spaniard bought the goods in the United States or any allied country he made the deal in some other name than the one he gave that day at the German consulate.

In the same way German orders, camouflaged under Mexican names, for several thousand pounds of butter which went up to the United States were followed so closely by a report revealing their source that they were not filled.

In the course of desultory gossip Consul Ungar revealed that the pretended sale of three small German coasting steamers operating on the west coast of Mexico, the Kosmos, Josefine, and Pinotepe, to a Mexican company was pure bunk; that the steamers were still operated as usual by their former owners.

One evening I went with Consul Ungar to the Casino Allemand, or German club, in Mazatlan, where I was introduced to the German vice consul, one Burgmeister. Of course we had some beer.

In the course of the beer and conversation the vice consul brought up the topic of Tepic. This was the place where Dr. Von Scheck had said there was a German wireless station; so, while pretending no more than a polite interest, I mentally pricked up my ears. In due time a lot of details came out that confirmed my resolve to explore the German mysteries at Tepic at the earliest opportunity.

It appears that Burgmeister's duties as vice consul consisted in collecting and forwarding German subjects to Tepic, where they were supposed to give their services to the German Red Cross, which was represented as operating a plantation there and forwarding the proceeds to the fatherland to be used as Red Cross funds elsewhere. As a matter of fact there was no Red Cross in or near Tepic. Instead there was a training camp of the same general character as that at El Claro, the graduates from which were to be employed in the same German Mexican enterprise, the invasion of the United States.

"Thank God, we have no such man as Schwiertz in charge at Tepic," exclaimed Consul Ungar devoutly.

PARSONS TRAIN IN 'GYM' TO GIVE THE DEVIL THE K. O.

Muscular Ministers of Evanston Form an Athletic League.

The Evanston ministers are going after sin nip and tuck. Evidently believing that the tussle needs tougher biceps, they've organized the Evanston Church Athletic league—object, fuller sleeves above the elbow.

The league was started by the Rev. Hugh Elmer Brown, pastor of the First Congregational church of Evanston. The Rev. Brown sagely observed that the minister with bulging muscles seemed to have gone out of date with the passing of the sturdy plains parson who swung an axe and built his own church; and it was time to bring him back.

Fifty Already Signed Up.

Ten Evanston clergymen and forty deacons and men Sunday school teachers have signed up with the league.

The church women were not made eligible for admittance into the league.

At the first meeting the Rev. Mr. Brown was made president. He made a speech in which he stated that after the league is fully organized the ministers will lay down their pens and close their books once each week and, in conjunction with the deacons and Sunday school teachers, will don "gym" suits and take up volley ball, basketball, relay races, and such sports.

Officers Elected.

R. T. McKee, physical director of the Evanston Y. M. C. A., was made vice president of the league.

F. A. Sherer, a deacon of the First Baptist church of Evanston, was elected treasurer, and Charles H. Fisher, who passes the collection box at the First Presbyterian church, was given the duties of secretary.

The Rev. Mr. Brown announced that the Evanston Church Athletic league will draft its constitution along the lines of that of the Hartford, Conn., Church Athletic league.

The next meeting of the Evanston Church Athletic league will be held Nov. 26.

SCHOOL ALUMNÆ TO DANCE.

The young ladies' alumnæ of Marywood School for Girls, Evanston, will be hostesses at an informal dance to be held at the Edgewater Beach hotel Friday evening, Nov. 28. On the committee in charge of arrangements are Miss Bernice Curran, Miss Grace Burns, Miss Marian Keeley, Miss Virginia King, Miss Geraldine Fitzgerald, and Miss Marcella Smith.

Last Big Block of the Canadian Pacific Reserved Farm Lands

THIS announces the offering of the last big block of the Canadian Pacific Reserve farm lands. Until this block is disposed of, you can secure at low cost a farm home in Western Canada that will make you rich and independent. The country is ideal for mixed farming as well as grain growing. Later, the same lands can be bought only from private owners. And naturally the work of cultivation and improvement will make the prices higher. We urge investigation now. Never again on the North American continent will farm lands be offered at prices so low.

Your Last Big Opportunity

This block contains both fertile open prairie and rich park lands in the Lloydminster and Battleford Districts of Central Alberta and Saskatchewan, and the Canadian Pacific Railway offers YOU the most WONDERFUL OPPORTUNITY IN THE WORLD to own a farm, achieve independence, and grow rich in Western Canada. It offers to sell you farm lands on the rich prairies of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta for $11 to $30 an acre. Or land in Southern Alberta under an irrigation system of unfailing water from $50 an acre up. You can buy this land under a plan of long term, easy payments that is the most remarkable plan in the history of farm investments.

Twenty Years to Earn and to Pay

ALL YOU have to pay down is 10 per cent of the purchase price. If land is purchased under settlement conditions, no further payment of principal until end of fourth year, then sixteen annual payments. Interest is 6 per cent. This means that twenty years is given you in which to pay for your farm home.

Lands Under Irrigation

IN SOUTHERN ALBERTA the Canadian Pacific Railway has developed the largest individual irrigation undertaking on the American continent. The district contains some of the best land in Western Canada, in a climate tempered in winter by the warm Chinook winds from the Pacific Ocean. This land is offered on the same easy payment terms as other lands; prices range from $30 an acre up. An unfailing supply of water is administered under the Canadian Government. There is no conflict of law or authority over its use. The water is free, the only charge being a fee of from 50c to $1.25 per acre for the maintenance of the system and the delivery of the water.

No Taxes on Your Improvements

The system of taxation encourages your success. There is a small tax on the land—seldom more than 20 cents an acre for all purposes—but there are no taxes on your live stock, buildings, improvements, implements or personal effects. Good markets, modern schools, roads, churches, amusements, make farm life desirable and attractive.

No Sale Without Investigation.—You must be satisfied and have every question answered before taking up your home. Investigation is invited and made easy. Upon request we will arrange all details of an investigation trip to suit your time and convenience.

Special Rates for Homeseekers and Full Information

Special railway rates for home seekers make inspection easy. You can also secure free, illustrated pamphlets full of facts and government figures about land values, acreage yields, climate, Western Canada's farm achievements of the past and its possibilities of future development, and setting out in detail its plans of selling farms to settlers on easy payment terms. Write today.

Don't Delay Your Investigation

This announcement calls attention to the last great block of the Canadian Pacific Reserve farm homes. There is time for thorough, careful investigation. But there is no time for delay in deciding to make that investigation. The forehanded man will act today.

CHICAGO SPENDS MILLIONS ON NEW CLOTHING SHOPS

Tailoring Industry Has a Tremendous Burst of Speed.

BY AL CHASE.

Of course, every one who wears a Chicago made suit of clothes or an overcoat, and a lot who don't, knows that this little town stands at the top of the list of clothing manufacturing cities. In other words, Chicago is the world's greatest maker of fine clothes. A few local manufacturers still concede to New York the lead in the amount of clothes made, but they all agree that they are cheaper goods and turned out in small and, in a majority of cases, poorly lighted and badly ventilated rooms or buildings.

But no city in the world has the number of modern, well lighted, well ventilated, finely equipped and comfortably located clothing establishments that Chicago has.

And here's the significant and striking feature of the situation—Chicago's clothing manufacturers have spent more money during the last few months on new buildings than any other local industry. It is growing faster than any other it is claimed.

May Total $4,000,000.

We are getting so accustomed to reading about new clothing factories springing up and being planned in various parts of the city that it may startle one a bit to know that at present the cost of these new plants totals around $3,000,000, with enough projected to bring the total up over the $4,000,000 mark probably before the first of the year.

For instance, Chicago's largest clothing makers, Hart, Schaffner & Marx, up to a few months ago had five plants and employed 7,400 men and women. When the new buildings under construction are finished they will have ten plants and employ 13,400 workers. An eleventh huge plant to house 2,000 more employés is planned.

B. Kuppenheimer & Co. have seven factories and employ 3,500. They have two new plants projected which will house 2,500.

Two New Factories.

Alfred Decker & Cohn have three factories and have 2,000 workers. A new plant to accommodate 2,000 employés has just been started and work on another equally large will begin this week.

Stein-Spiesberger & Erman now occupy five buildings and employ 350. One thousand will be added to their pay roll when their new $225,000 plant at Powell avenue and McLean street is finished.

Charles Kaufman & Bros. have two factories and employ 1,500. Work will start this week on two $100,000 plants, each to have working space for 1,000.

Liebman Philipson company now employ 350. Within ten days work will begin on a $100,000 plant to employ 750.

Plan $500,000 Shop.

Kling Brothers & Co. at present have nine or ten shops and two buildings downtown. They employ from 600 to 700. One of the largest clothing plants in the city, with 200,000 square feet of floor space, is now under way at 2226-2306 Wabansia avenue, to cost approximately $600,000. Practically all of their activities will be centered here.

Ed. V. Price & Co. have had sketches made for a twelve story building, to be erected at the southeast corner of West Jackson boulevard and Throop street. It will have 230,000 square feet of floor space. They now employ 1,500, and have floor space of around 175,000 square feet. They will have room for several hundred additional employés in the new plant.

Easterners Eye Chicago.

Chicago's prestige in the world's clothing trade and the business advantages of being located here are being recognized by manufacturers in eastern cities in a definite way. It is reported that several of the largest clothing makers of Rochester, Baltimore, New York City, and Philadelphia are contemplating establishing Chicago plants.

"Chicago is the logical clothing market of the world," said Harry Wolf, vice president of the Liebman Philipson company. "More dealers come to Chicago to buy clothes than to any other city. They have been disappointed in other markets. Chicago makers established a record name in the trade last season, when they really delivered goods ordered, in many cases, at a loss."

"Chicago has made a greater stride forward in the last year than during the entire history of the clothing industry," said Mr. Erman of Stein, Spiesberger & Erman. "It is the world's biggest clothing market. We get a better type of employé here than in the eastern cities, they get better treatment, and their living conditions are better."

OGDEN PARK POSTAL STATION.

Bettie A. Bennett of Johnson, Kas., has leased to the United States government for use as the Ogden Park postal station the store at 1614-16 West Sixty-third street for ten years at $6,000 per annum, beginning July 1, 1919.

BOULEVARD BUNGALOW SOLD.

Birdie Witt of Pasadena, Cal., has sold to Ellen Lavin the one story brick bungalow at 5407 Hyde Park boulevard for a reported cash consideration of $16,000. John A. Carroll & Bro. were the brokers.

Here are a few of the many big, modern clothing shops under construction which are helping to add to the prestige of Chicago as the world's greatest clothing center.

No. 1 is one of the several new Hart, Schaffner & Marx plants. It is at West Twenty-second street and South Forty-fifth avenue; will cost $275,000, and have 100,000 square feet of floor space, and accommodate 2,000 workers; it will have a cafeteria, meeting rooms for vaudeville, lectures and movies, offices for physicians, dentists and nurses who will be in constant attendance. Work has just started. It is expected to be ready on Jan. 1.

No. 2 is a $225,000 plant being built for Stein-Spiesberger & Erman at Powell avenue and McLean street. It will have 75,000 square feet of floor space and care for 1,000 employés. It will be finished around Jan. 1.

No. 3 is one of two big plants being built for Alfred Decker & Cohn. It is in South Kilbourn avenue, near Lexington street, and will cost $275,000. It will have 100,000 square feet of floor space and accommodate 2,000 workers. Jan. 1 is the date set for completion.

No. 4 is a seven story $400,000 clothing shop to be occupied by Hart, Schaffner & Marx as an assembling plant. Work already has started. There will be about 110,000 square feet of floor space, with accommodations for 2,000 employés. Davidson & Weiss are the architects. John R. Bowes is building Nos. 1, 2 and 3, and the Walter company are architects and contractors for the same three.

Leases

Actual figures of the lease, preliminary details of which were printed two months ago in THE TRIBUNE, disclose that $80,000 annually, or a total of $1,600,000 for a term of twenty years from May 1, 1921, will be the rental paid by the S. & C. Clothing company for the six story building at the southeast corner of State and Jackson, 40x144. Capitalized on a 5 per cent basis this is equivalent to $1,600,000 for the land and $40,000 a front foot on State street and $277 a square foot. The estate of L. Z. Leiter was the lessor. The lessees will pay taxes and insurance, which the brokers, Mark Levy & Brother, estimate around $24,000.

Ralph Isham has leased to Emil J. Krimsky the three story building, 37x163, at 1615 South Michigan avenue for ten years from Dec. 1, 1919, at a term rental with taxes of $75,000. Oliver & Co., the brokers, subsequently subleased the building for Mr. Krimsky to the Hudson Motor Car company, who will occupy it as their general salesroom until their new building is completed.

After subletting the above premises to the Hudson Motor Car company, Oliver & Co. secured from John P. Wilson for Mr. Krimsky, a lease of the three story and basement building at 1436-38 South Michigan avenue for five years at a term rental of $30,000, this building being secured for Mr. Krimsky's own use.

Lyon & Healy have leased from Samuel Lanski the five story building at 717-723 South Desplaines street for a term of five years at an annual rental of $15,000. The 60,000 square feet of floor space will be remodeled at a reported cost of $12,000. This building will supplement the large plant of Lyon & Healy at Fullerton and Kedvale. John R. Magill & Co. represented Lyon & Healy and Louis B. Beardslee represented the lessor.

The Harmony Cafeteria company has leased to the American Shoe Repair company the store at 23 West Randolph street for ten years from May 1, 1920, at a term rental of $40,000. This is the third store recently leased to the shoe repair company by E. F. Keebler & Co.

The Chicago Pneumatic Tool company has leased from David C. Cook space in the Pioneer building, northwest corner North Michigan avenue and East South Water street, for district sales headquarters and display purposes for a term of years at an annual rental of $7,000. The space includes the corner store, 20x52, on the second or upper boulevard level, 1,600 square feet of office space on the second floor, and a store on the South Water street level, 38x70, for service station. The tool company has decided to remove the executive offices of the company to New York early in the spring, and, owing to that fact, they will expend a considerable sum of money to provide a complete display of their products in Chicago, where the company had its inception. John R. Magill & Co. were the brokers.

The two story building at 207-9 West Madison street, 22x80, has been leased from May 1, 1921, for five years at an annual rental of $7,800 by Thomas Valos from Joseph F. Egan and others. Mr. Valos will spend $20,000 in equipping a lunchroom. Mark Levy & Bro. represented all parties.

NORTH SIDE SALE.

Alexander Newton has sold to W. F. Woodruff the leasehold estate and building at the northeast corner of Devon and North Clark for a reported price of $250,000, subject to $90,000. The lease is for ninety-nine years from 1918 with an annual rental of $32,000. The improvements are a three story building with fourteen stores, twelve flats, two dance halls, a lodge hall, a 2,000 seat theater, and a garage. The lot fronts 225 feet on Devon avenue, 192 feet on Clark street, and 147 feet on Schreiber street. Mr. Woodruff gave as part payment 200 lots in Villa Park valued at $140,000, and the balance in cash. S. S. Berry represented all parties.

SHERIDAN ROAD HOTELS BOUGHT BY A. W. HANNAH

Alexander W. Hannah has purchased two Sheridan road small sized hotels and is contemplating additions to both. He bought from Henrietta E. Paul the Gerard hotel, a three story building at 4649 Sheridan road, 30x142. There was a five year lease with option to buy at $25,000. The lease was first bought and the option exercised. The present tenant had made a five year lease for the upper stories for hotel purposes. Mr. Hannah has had plans made for a three story addition in front, with stores on the first floor and hotel rooms above.

Directly across the street he has purchased the Eastwood hotel and annex at 4644-52 Sheridan road from John Sontag for an indicated price of $135,000, subject to $18,000. The lot is 98x150. Mr. Hannah plans building an addition in front with stores on the ground floor, and additional hotel rooms on the second and third floors. Sontag Bros. represented the seller and R. M. Bradley represented the purchaser in this transaction and both parties in the Gerard hotel deal.

H., S. & M. TAKE OVER $450,000 TEN YEAR LEASE

Here's a little deal which will add a little more emphasis to the story in an adjoining column about the growth of the clothing industry. A month ago the Chicago Tailors' association signed a ten year lease, for a term rental of $450,000, with Frank A. Hecht for the seven story building at the northwest corner of Throop and Van Buren streets, now under construction. It is shown in the above cut as No. 4.

Yesterday they assigned their lease to Hart, Schaffner & Marx, who will use it as an assembling plant. That is, trousers made at one outlying plant, vests at another, and coats at a third will get together here and march out in all the present day glory of the complete ready made. Final figures are not available, but it is understood that the new lessees paid a large bonus for the lease.

APARTMENT DEALS

Here are some apartment house transactions crowded out during the week because of lack of space.

John S. Holmes has purchased from J. A. Lundstrum the twenty-four apartment building at 5036-38 Kenmore avenue, for an indicated price of $55,000, subject to $45,000. In part payment Mr. Holmes gave the ten room frame residence, 50x150, at the northwest corner of Winthrop and Thorndale avenues, at an indicated price of $22,000, subject to $12,000. The E. E. Stutts Raelty company represented both parties.

S. A. Clifford has sold the twenty-four apartment building, west front, 122x125, in Kedzie avenue, 123 feet north of Ainslie street, to Benjamin F. Bush for an indicated price of $71,500, subject to $65,500. The gross annual rental is reported as $14,000.

SHEFFIELD AVENUE DEAL.

The Knickerbocker Manufacturing company has purchased from the Janette Manufacturing company the 112x114 at the northeast corner Sheffield and Montana for $42,000. It is partially improved with a two story 61x114 building. John B. Magill & Co. were brokers.

Tells Results of Zoning Trip Through Eastern Cities

In response to a request by Ald. Joseph O. Kostner, chairman of the council building committee, to Charles M. Nichols, chairman of the zoning committee of the Cook County Real Estate board, to state the result of his observations during the recent zoning inspection trip of city officials and representatives of civic organizations, the following comments are made:

BY CHARLES M. NICHOLS.
[Chairman Cook County Real Estate Board Zoning Committee.]

One conclusion reached, I think, by every one on the trip, is that it is desirable that Chicago should proceed according to a well defined, city wide, comprehensive scheme of zoning, and that no temporary or piecemeal districting during the interim be indulged in. There seems to be a number of reasons for proceeding along these lines. One is that, whenever the latter method was adopted by other cities, it has proved unsatisfactory and has had to be abandoned.

Among the various reasons assigned, there seems to be one which should be controlling in its effect. That is, that the piecemeal method is of doubtful legality. And why undertake a thing which is dangerous when a perfectly safe course is presented, and one which uniformly has proved satisfactory?

Serious Defects Found.

On all hands serious defects were found with our enabling legislation, both by eminent counsel and lay students of the subject.

But in New York City they proceeded in their investigations as to the heights of buildings, etc., without any authority of law, until they reached a point where they knew exactly what legislation was needed. Then the chairman of the citizens' commission, Edward M. Bassett, went to Albany with a united city behind him, and obtained from the assembly a donation to the City of New York of all the police power that the state possessed.

We were accordingly advised to proceed at once with our investigation and survey of the present conditions in Chicago, so that, before the time is reached for presenting a tentative ordinance to the city council, the commission will know exactly what modification in the present law is desirable, and, as the legislature then will be in full session, no difficulty need be anticipated about securing the relief required.

Size of Commission.

We found that the zoning of the various cities was being or had been prepared by commissions of various sizes and of different construction. They varied from five to nineteen members and from a commission consisting almost wholly of citizens to a commission where the number of city officials predominated.

The result of my observation of the working of these various commissions inclines me to the opinion that the most satisfactory form of commission for Chicago would consist of approximately fifteen persons, representing the various activities most affected by zoning; that there should be a sprinkling of the city officials among that number, especially those who will be expected to administer the ordinance, such as the building commissioner and the chairman of your committee.

If there is any other official or alderman who has peculiar qualifications for membership, then, I should think, he would be preferable to a citizen having like qualifications. The various civic bodies could well be consulted as to the membership in so far as it relates to their particular activity or profession.

Let the Public Know.

During the collecting of data and the preparation of the tentative ordinance the public should be taken into the full confidence of the commission as the work progresses, so that when the ordinance is ready for submission to the council every one may be satisfied. Between that time and the final passage of the ordinance it can be again gone over by the people at public hearings, so that any errors which had crept in can be eliminated. By taking all the people into their confidence in this manner the commission in New York secured the passage of their ordinance with unanimous approval of civic bodies and citizens, and since then the public has been well satisfied with its three years' operation.

We were told in Cleveland that the cheapest money Chicago could ever spend would be that devoted to obtaining the best zoning adviser and engineer available, together with a competent technical staff of about twenty-five persons.

ELMHURST GETS OFFER OF 7 ACRE MEMORIAL PARK

Elmhurst now has a chance to step over from the ranks of the parkless towns of Du Page county and line up with Glen Ellyn, which recently voted itself a pleasure ground on the shores of Lake Ellyn, and other towns with breathing spaces. The widow of T. Edward Wilder, leather manufacturer and resident of Elmhurst for twenty-seven years, has offered that city a seven acre park as a memorial to him. In her letter to the city council Mrs. Wilder makes the following conditions: That the city must erect a public library to cost not less than $35,000 on the tract; that a site be reserved for a Y. M. C. A. building and that it be called Wilder park. Mrs. Wilder suggests that if practicable a council chamber be included in the library building for use until a city hall can be erected.

She also insists that if accepted good faith must be evidenced by the city in the prompt employment of a landscape architect and the subsequent development of the park. Failure to comply with the library and landscaping conditions within a year will automatically cause the title to revert to the present owner.

The tract is the northern end of Lancaster lodge, extending from near the entrance gate at the head of Arthur street, north to Virginia and is bounded on the east by Cottage Hill avenue and on the west by Prospect street. The city council is expected to accept Mrs. Wilder's offer.

Sheridan Road May Have $400,000 Bachelors' Home

Some good news for the Wilson avenue district bachelors: H. Emerman of H. Emerman & Co. has purchased from Mrs. Elodia T. Dick of New York City the 50x150 at 4526 Sheridan road, improved with a stone residence, formerly occupied by the Dixie Tearoom, and contemplates erecting a ten story bachelor apartment and clubroom building to cost in the neighborhood of $400,000. A cash price of $35,000 is reported paid for the property.
